House Gets Demand for Quiz of Four High U. S. Officials.

Inquiry Is Delayed By Pou's Funeral

First Lady Takes Hand; Tugwell's Book Talks of Revolution.

By Raymond Clapper.

New fuel was added yesterday to the controversy started by the charges of Dr. William Wirt that "Brain Trusters" are plotting revolution which would displace President Roosevelt with a strong-armed Stalin.

Appointment of a House committee to investigate the charges was delayed by the funeral of the late Representative Edward W. Pou, of North Carolina. House leaders accompanied the funeral party to North Carolina and deferred action with regard to the investigating committee until they return, probably tomorrow.

Meantime, numerous developments over a wide front fed the interest aroused over the impending testimony of the Gary, Ind., school superintendent, who is to be asked to name the source of his information when he appears before the House committee.

In the din there were demands that several high Administration officials be questioned by the House committee; Mrs. Roosevelt broke into the discussion with assurance that there was little danger of bloody revolution; former Senator Smith Brookhart, now with the AAA, said many things Soviet Russia is doing could well be taken up in America; there was an outburst of excitement at the Capitol over a new book by Dr. Rexford G. Tugwell; the Navy disclosed it was running down an alleged communistic plot in the fleet, and Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, speaking in Philadelphia, expressed skepticism over compulsory control plans.

McGugin Names Four.

Representative Harold McGugin (Republican) of Kansas, demanded that four Administration officials be called for questioning by the House committee. He named Secretary of Interior Ickes, Assistant Secretary of Interior Tugwell, Dr. Arthur Morgan, chairman of the Tennessee Valley Authority, and Donald R. Richberg, general counsel of NRA. Representative McGugin asserted they had flouted the will of Congress by using their power and

Two More Bank Heads Indicted

Painter, of Union Trust, Cleveland, Baldwin Named by Juries.

Cleveland, Ohio, April 2 (AP).—Five officials of two large Cleveland banks which failed for $200,000,000 a year ago were under indictment by county and Federal grand juries tonight as officials announced their intention to probe further into the banks' affairs.

The latest indictments, returned by a county grand jury today, accused Kenyon V. Painter, capitalist, director and largest individual stockholder of the Union Trust Co., and Wilbur M. Baldwin, the bank's former president, of misapplication of $580,600 and abstraction of $314,600 of the bank's assets.

Less than a week ago, a Federal grand jury indicted J. Arthur House, president of the Guardian Trust Co., and Harry C. Robinson and William R. Green, vice presidents, on charges of misapplication of $58,000 and falsification of bank records.

Baldwin and Painter entered pleas of not guilty and were released on $7,500 bond each.

Painter, widely known as a big game hunter and for years regarded as Cleveland's wealthiest capitalist, has said that he bought the stock—on borrowed funds—in a futile attempt to maintain its market price and thus bolster public confidence in the bank.

Judge Denies Release For Volstead Violator

Springfield, Ill., April 2 (AP).—U. S. District Judge J. Earl Major today held that repeal of the eighteenth amendment had no effect on persons serving prison terms for violating laws enacted under it.

In making the decision, Judge Major denied the application of Edward Behen, of Springfield, for a writ of habeas corpus through which was sought release from a term for violation of the National prohibition law.

New York, April 2 (AP).—Today's gold statement of the New York Federal Reserve Bank showed imports of $4,898,100 from England. There were no exports.

show girl and former wife of Johnny Weissmuller, screen "ape man," was married to Robert A. Cavenaugh, a Chicago attorney, yesterday in Larchmont, N. Y. Miss Arnst gave her age as 24, while Cavenaugh said he is 30. They will live in Chicago.

2 Army Pilots Gamble Lives To Test Theory

Tail Brace Broken, They Fly on Instead of Bailing Out.

When their plane became disabled at 6,000 feet with two brace wires controlling the right tail surface broken, two Army fliers, bound here from Dayton, Ohio, Sunday afternoon, scorned their parachutes and kept their plane aloft by skillful maneuvering for 100 miles, thereby saving the Government $30,000.

Lieut. T. A. Sims, who, with Lieut. A. H. Johnson piloted the plane, yesterday modestly admitted that although they would have been justified in "bailing out," both agreed to risk a landing to discover how the plane would act under the circumstances.

With the right horizontal tail surface drooping at a 20-degree angle, causing the plane to wobble and making normal progress impossible, they kept the ship in flight by reducing engine speed, flying with the nose high up in a stalling position so that there was little load on the tail surface.

Both are experienced pilots and had just completed a wind tunnel test of the plane two weeks previous in their studies at Wright Field. This fact urged them to try out the theory that a plane might be kept in flight with a damaged tail.

Momentarily expecting the tail to drop off, they were relieved to sight Bolling Field. And luck played into their hands. After making a safe landing, the damaged tail fell off as the plane was taxiing into a hangar.

They tore up a set of maps writing notes to one another as to whether they would land or jump. While landing, the plane was able to turn in one direction only and they notified Bolling Field to have an ambulance ready.

The last 500 feet of altitude was the most nerve wracking, Sims said, as they knew that if anything broke, they could not bail out below that altitude.

Had the right tail surface broken off, the plane would have gone into a vertical dive.

Sims said that he thought breakage of the wire braces was due to faulty installation. They were flying an experimental ship.

Potential Recruits Riot for CCC Jobs

Clarksburg, W. Va., April 2 (Spl.).—Several hundred young men were so anxious to join the CCC here today that they started a riot in the courthouse when informed enlistments could not be taken, and State police were called to disperse them.

The men assembled and clamored for forest jobs under a misapprehension that enrollments were open. Recruits were drafted in other counties today, but Harrison County enlistments will not be made until later.

'Hill' Ignores Security Act Revision Plea

No Major Changes to Be Made; Early Stock Bill Report Asked.

By Robert C. Albright.

Business criticism of the securities act of 1933 yesterday drew a sharp retort from Capitol Hill, coupled with a warning from Democratic leaders that no major revision of the measure may be expected.

At the same time, House and Senate committees unexpectedly pressed for a report this week on the Fletcher-Rayburn stock market control bill. Some revision of rigid marginal requirements, and possible exemption of municipal bonds, was forecast.

Defense of the securities act by Chairman Sam Rayburn, of the House Interstate Commerce Committee, and Chairman Duncan U. Fletcher, of the Senate Banking Committee, followed a United States Chamber of Commerce statement denouncing the act as a serious impediment to recovery.

"Vicious Attacks" Rapped.

"These vicious attacks on the securities act, trying to tear it up by the roots, are not going to get anywhere," said Representative Rayburn, who denied he was replying to the Chamber of Commerce. "There will be minor changes in the securities act, but no general revision."

Senator Fletcher said he would fight any effort to alter important features of the act.

"It isn't doing any harm," said Fletcher. "On the contrary, it is doing a great deal of good, and has already saved the public around $10,000,000,000 by protecting them against worthless securities."

The Senate Banking Committee chairman said he thought there were "one or two" minor provisions of the act that "might be improved a little later."

May Limit Responsibility.

For example, he said, a securities distributor now is liable in cases of misrepresentation, for an entire issue, "when he should only be liable for that portion of an issue in which he has an interest."

Meantime, both the Fletcher and Rayburn committees expedited plans for an early report on the revised stock market control bill.

Chairman Rayburn called his committee to meet in executive session today. He said he hopes to get the bill out of committee "without substantial modification" sometime this week, with a view to House action next week.

Minority members of the committee generally are of the opinion the bill should be materially changed to avoid any possibility of an adverse business reaction.

"I am in favor of legislation to regulate stock exchanges, but I do not want to pass legislation under

Fishin' Must Be Good; President May Extend Trip

President Roosevelt may extend his Florida fishing trip another week, it was indicated yesterday. The first intimation that he might not return this week came when the Gridiron Club dinner, at which the President will be a guest, was postponed from April 7 to April 14 after the club was informed that he would not be present on the first date.

The President left Washington March 27 and boarded the yacht Nourmahal as a guest of Vincent Astor at Jacksonville, Fla. Since then, he has made one public appearance, at Nassau, Bahamas. The remainder of his vacation has been devoted to fishing and swimming.

No announcement of the date of the President's return to Washington had been made but it was assumed he would return late this week, as he had accepted the dinner invitation of the Gridiron Club.

French Duelists Fire Twice, But Neither Makes His Mark

Carcassone, France, April 2 (AP).—A bloodless pistol duel on an old jousting ground where knighthood once flowered enlivened French politics of this post-Easter holiday.

The youthful Jean Mistler, a deputy and former minister of commerce, exchanged shots at 20 paces with business man Roger de Tour, ardent royalist, on a rifle range near medieval Carcassonne.

They took aim twice, fired and missed, then stalked off the field of honor. Their parting, like their meeting, was as chilly as the early morning air.

Politics brought the two together. Mistler was a member of the Daladier cabinet, which royalists blame for the fatalities in street riots early in February.

An argument in a cafe Saturday night, during which De Tour called Mistler an "ignoble person," was climaxed when the business man smacked the deputy on the cheek. Cards were then exchanged.

Dueling is forbidden in France, but although the whole country knew of the prospective meeting, no steps were taken to prevent it. One of Mistler's seconds was the mayor of Carcassonne.

It was the second political duel traced back to the Bayonne pawnshop scandal, cause of the riots.

Andre Hesse, a deputy, and John Beineix, Paris lawyer, emerged unscathed from a meeting in a football stadium February 25. They also took two shots and likewise were poor marksmen.

Actress Charges Danny Dowling With Kidnaping

Los Angeles, April 2 (AP).—Marjorie Crawford, 25, aviatrix and film player, today accused R. C. "Danny" Dowling, former dancing partner of Joan Crawford, of kidnaping her from her home last Friday and taking her to Arizona in an attempt to force her to marry him.

Her charges were denied at Yuma, Ariz., by Dowling, who was held in jail.

He said she had accompanied him of her own free will.

The aviatrix, former wife of William Wellman, film director and former wife of Cecil C. Crawford, said that Dowling came to her home, took her pistol, and forced her to accompany him in an automobile. She added that she escaped from him at Yuma by a ruse.

By Walter Haight.

Miney Myerson, shipped to Charles Town last December as a selling plater, stole the show from a horse angle as the sport of bums and kings returned to nearby Bowie yesterday. The gelded son of Amerjack and Marinette, now the property of G. W. Ogle, picked up and laid down four hoofs in a manner which propelled him to the finish line three lengths in front of the Greentree Stable's Curacao, to win the Inaugural Handicap, the $2,000 added feature race.

The same sun which spent a lazy winter as far as Maryland was concerned, turned in a real day's work and it was under summer skies that a crowd of some 12,000, including John Roosevelt, son of the President, and Postmaster General James J. Farley, greeted Prince George County hoss racing.

Overcoats Cast Off.

Overcoats and topcoats spent the afternoon on crooked arms. A few of the hardy went in for shirt sleeves. From a feminine standpoint, Easter clothes, now being worn regularly, were much in evidence. Down under the stands, Young Beer was staging a winning battle with Kid Hard Liquor, which was making his first start in years.

But to get back to the portion of the sport which makes program history, the Inaugural, due to the presence of Miney Myerson, was no contest. With the scratching of the Labrot entry of Springsteel and Monel, a field of six paraded to the post. The blinkers of Miney Myerson gave the fans their first indication that there was a leader. The White and green of Jockey Tipton's blouse soon came into view. The pink and blue of the Greentree Stable on Curacao showed in second place and the Jersey Stable's black and white on Character's back moved into the picture.

Winner Always Leads.

That was the order from start to finish. Tipton rated his mount along and nearing the wire seemed disinterested in the furious pounding being administered Curacao and

5 Hurt in Riot At Uniontown

Uniontown, Pa., April 2 (AP).—Rioting broke out here early tonight, with general fighting among miners estimated by police to exceed 1,500.

Hose from a fire truck called to disperse the miners was slashed. Two men were reported injured.

The outbreak occurred in Penn street. Earlier two men had been shot and a third beaten unconscious at a mass meeting which Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, wife of the Governor, addressed.

Clark Scott, fire truck driver, pulled his truck through the crowd amid a barrage of beer bottles.

Police Chief David McDonald said most of the men had been drinking. There were shouts of defiance to the police, and some threats to storm the county jail, where a member of the Independent Brotherhood is held on charges of attacking a United Mine worker.

Undisturbed, Mrs. Pinchot concluded her brief talk in which she aroused tremendous applause with the assertion:

"I'm for the union because I'm an American.

"I feel that through the union we can get something done. When I say I'm for the union, I don't mean company unions.

"I'm for the New Deal. But it must be expanded and not confined to a few. The New Deal, as we analyze it, is an effort to make better conditions for the working people."

Lord Carson Improved.

London, April 2 (AP).—Physicians today reported slight improvement in the condition of Lord Carson, 82, seriously ill from bronchitis. The noted opponent of home rule for Ireland previously was reported as "very ill."

Fight Rages At Telegraph Code Hearing

Postal Assails Western Union and Bell Telephone.

Messenger Boys Heard on Complaints Over Hours of Pay.

A picture of major warfare in the communications industry was spread upon the record yesterday by spokesmen for the great companies, who appeared in the Department of Commerce Auditorium to argue on a proposed code for the telegraph industry.

The Postal Telegraph Co. supported a code. RCA Communications, Inc., said it would sign one if its competitors did. But the Western Union, most powerful operator in the field, could see no necessity for one. The Recovery Administration has initiated the negotiations in its first effort to impose a code where the industry affected did not take the initial steps itself.

Col. A. H. Griswold, executive vice president of the Postal Telegraph Co., attacked the Bell Telephone system for leasing private telegraph wires "and in effect setting up a series of private telegraph companies, subject to none of the regulations and obligations imposed on the commercial telegraph companies as to rates, wages, maintenance of records, reduced rates to the Government, press, &c.

Assails Western Union.

He also condemned the exclusive contracts the Western Union Co. had with railroads, which "excluded the Postal Telegraph from large railway terminals for no other reason than that they are a competitor of the Western Union.

Col. Manton H. Davis, attorney for the RCA Communciations, Inc., bitterly assailed the Postal as "an organization which tells you that it and it alone is pure," with the statement that "throughout the world" it is engaged in tearing down its competitors' contracts and giving gratuities to customers in violation of the law and the rulings of the Interstate Commerce Commission."

R. B. White, president of the Western Union, declared:

"After a very careful study, we have reached the conclusion that there are no advantages which our company can properly seek under a code of dealing with competitive practices and there is no provision in the law for a voluntary application by an industry for any other sort of code." Mr. White said that the Western Union had never been the subject of complaint on the score of unfair trade practices and would not, therefore, apply for a code. He pointed out that "continued, active competition" was compulsory under the law.

Messengers Testify.

Sandwiched in between the spokesmen for their employers, a trio of messenger boys took the stand to complain that they had to buy their own bicycles and uniforms and were paid only for errands they ran, not for the time spent on the job. One boy said that, besides his duties as a messenger, he was forced to do "porter's work and cloik's work." They asked for $15 for a 40-hour week and two weeks vacation with pay.

Pointing out that the practice of leasing private wires for telegraph purposes dates back to 1875, Col. Griswold declared that "the Bell System worked into the field" when

4 Prisoners Saw Way to Freedom

No Trace Is Found of West Virginia Quartet.

Berkeley Springs, W. Va., April 2 (Spl.).—Morgan County officers are still hunting for four prisoners who sawed and chiseled their way from jail yesterday.

They are Piermont Phillips, Ray Keesecker, Wood Unger and Paul Moss. Five others in jail declined to leave with the quartet.

Saws, believed to have been smuggled into the jail yesterday, were used to liberate the prisoners.

White House Host To Lincoln's 'Ghost'

First Lady Tells Legend of Bedroom Apparition.

A new White House ghost story was told by Mrs. Roosevelt yesterday. She said that at one time it had been reported that the ghost of Abraham Lincoln had been seen sitting on the famous Lincoln bed, pulling on his boots.

From time to time ghost stories have come from the Executive Mansion. They were revived recently by publication of the memoirs of the late "Ike" Hoover, for many years chief usher at the White House. He told of reports among White House servants of the appearance of the ghost of a child.

The Lincoln ghost, however, had never before been reported.

Mrs. Roosevelt would not say who had "seen" the ghost. She remarked that someone's imagination was working overtime.

Air Plan, Held Illegal, Scored In Congress

Ban on Rebidding Cited; Probe of Favoritism Charge Urged.

Arrangements under which the Postoffice Department proposes to let temporary air-mail contracts, pending passage of permanent legislation, were assailed yesterday by members of both Houses of Congress.

No word had come from the larger companies whose contracts were canceled regarding their intention either to reorganize and bid before April 19, or carry complaints against such cancellation to the courts.

Representative Kelly (Republican), Pennsylvania, declared yesterday that the temporary contracts are being called for illegally. He cited section 434 of title 39, under which Postmaster General Farley is proceeding, as evidence the air-mail contracts can not be let by advertisement.

"The act under which the Postmaster General is proceeding dates back to 1874, and was intended to apply to wagon routes," Kelly said. "It has been superseded by the Waites amendment and at least three other measures applying to the handling of the Nation's air-mail business.

"Moreover, it specifically provides that if contracts are canceled, others shall be let without advertisement and competitive bidding.

"Under Farley's plan to require

Letters Bare 'Power Trust' Fight on TVA

Norris, "Not Surprised," Assails Utilities on Senate Floor.

Evidence that power companies sought to offset the work of the Tennessee Valley Authority—one of the major Southern phases of the Roosevelt recovery program—was made public yesterday by the Federal Trade Commission.

A news letter from the Kentucky-Tennessee Light & Power Co., subsidiary of Associated Gas & Electric Corporation, to the Utilities Management Corporation, dated October 26, 1933, said, under the heading of "Industrial Department:"

"This department, which has functioned so successfully since its organization, has temporarily been turned into a department to combat municipal ownership. The proximity of our properties to the Tennessee Valley Authority's social and municipal ownership activities has made it necessary that we keep in close touch with these developments, and to offset, as far as we may, the propaganda which is being spread by the Government to all properties within transmission reach of Muscle Shoals."

The department also combatted municipal ownership in Missouri and Indiana, "where our properties are threatened or where we have this issue to face," the letter added.

"I am not at all surprised to hear of this," Senator George Norris

Italy Scotches African Prince's Plan to Take Japanese Bride

Tokyo, April 2 (AP).—Italy's alleged opposition to Japanese connections in Africa caused the cancellation today of the proposed "Picture Bride" marriage of Lij Araya, an Ethiopian prince, and Miss Masako Kuroda, daughter of the Japanese Viscount Hiroyuki Kuroda.

The prospective bridegroom, who had made a long-distance selection of Miss Kuroda as his bride, was quoted in Addis Ababa as stating that a "certain power" had interfered and the Ethiopian foreign minister said he had notified that country's minister in Rome of the cancellation of the ceremony.

Vernacular newspapers expressed the opinion that Italy was displeased at the idea of a Japanese wife for a member of a ruling family in Africa because of Premier Mussolini's recent statements of his country's mission on that continent.

The foreign office and the imperial household here indicated no apparent interest in the cancellation.

However, high official circles did not approve the plans of the prince and the Japanese girl when they were first revealed.

With Japan in commercial disputes with many countries and mixed up in political matters growing out of the new Manchurian empire, some quarters viewed the proposed marriage as unwise, at least at this time.

U. S. Notified Long Hunt for Utilities Fugitive Is Successful.

Lawyers Protest, But Plea Useless

Prisoner to Be Allowed Outside Meals as Health Aid.

Istanbul, Turkey, April 2 (AP).—Turkey officially notified the American Government tonight that it can have Samuel Insull for trial, and put him in jail, despite his tears, to insure his being on hand when American agents arrive to take him back to Chicago.

Turkish authorities, apparently mindful of the 74-year-old fugitive's heart, which doctors say has been ailing for some time, agreed, however, to grant him a few liberties not given the ordinary run of prisoners.

Among these privileges, it was learned, will be the right to go to a restaurant for his meals.

Making the case doubly sure, the National Assembly ratified an extradition convention with the United States as the Turkish government formally communicated to American Ambassador Skinner at Ankara, the capital, the cabinet's decision that Insull will be handed over for a return to American shores, which he left after his utilities empire crashed.

Faces Larceny Charge.

The length of Insull's detention was not determined tonight, but it was believed he will remain in jail at least two or three days. The American Embassy has not yet been advised when American agents, to whom the former Chicagoan will be delivered, will arrive.

The fugitive, wanted in Illinois on charges of embezzlement and larceny growing out of the collapse of his companies, was held in the house of detention.

Insull was taken prisoner in the Hotel London in a suburb of Istanbul, ending his strange and exciting odyssey of several weeks aboard the little tramp steamer Maiotis, which he chartered in Greece as a temporary haven until he could find what he thought might be a permanent refuge from arrest and extradition.

No Appeal Possible.

In Washington, officials indicated that President Roosevelt might deputize an American citizen in Turkey to act as a special police officer to bring Insull back. The State Department was still uncertain as to the steps that should be taken as officials studied the many ramifications of the case.

Kirwan Giggles Over Acquittal

Elated Mother Kisses Him as Jury Reports in Murder Case.

New York, April 2 (AP).—Andrew Donaldson Kirwan, 23, semiparalytic son of "Europe's best dressed woman," was freed by a Federal court jury today of a charge of stabbing a fellow shipboard passenger to death during a drunken argument over religion.

The fashionably attired Mme. Jean Nash Dubonnet kissed her son as the jury reported its verdict, 27 minutes after it had retired.

Mrs. Emma Donaldson, Kirwin's aged grandmother, also threw her arms around the youth, who had been accused of killing Gilliam Sessoms, of Seattle.

Kirwan himself, whose muscles twitch almost continuously because of his affliction, laughed hysterically.

Frederick Coudert, jr., chief defense attorney, declaring the death of Sessoms was "mysterious, unexplainable," said the best case for the youthful defendant had been presented by the Government's key witness, W. S. Frost, assistant purser on the President Garfield.

Frost had testified he did not see the fatal wound inflicted.

Rail Crash Injures 50 McPherson Followers

London, April 2 (AP).—Delegates to a conference of the Four Square Gospel movement of Aimee Semple McPherson knelt on the railroad tracks and thanked Providence for their escape today after their train was rammed by a locomotive at Kilburn Bridge, North London.

Fifty of the 600 persons aboard the special train from Nottingham were injured, 14 of them seriously. Many attended the conference later, bandaged heavily.

U. S., Industry Heads See End Of Depression

Taylor, Sloan and Jones Envision Advent of "Better Times."

New York, April 2 (AP).—Conviction that the country is definitely emerging from the depression was spread upon the record today by heads of two of the country's biggest industrial units, and by the chief of the Government's most powerful financing agency.

Myron C. Taylor, chairman of the United States Steel Corporation, told stockholders in Hoboken that revival was no longer a matter of opinion, but a matter of fact.

Alfred P. Sloan, jr., president of General Motors Corporation, while critical of some aspects of the recovery program, said in his annual report to stockholders that "industrial recovery is under way with an irresistible force."

Jesse Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, in an interview in Washington, pointed to the now definite expectation that the RFC will run $500,000,000 under budget estimates for the fiscal year ending in June, as clear evidence of better conditions.

These statements were viewed in Wall street as distinctly significant at this time, inasmuch as April is often the month in which the peak of the spring business upturn is reached.

As a matter of fact, business observers have wondered whether the recent slackening in steel production may not have indicated that the spring peak has been reached. The American Iron and Steel Institute today estimated steel ingot production at 43.3 per cent of capacity, a decline of 2.4 percentage points from a week ago.

But business does not always follow the seasonal pattern, and its leaders are counting heavily upon the renewed disposition of banks to lend, to bring the long-sought expansion of credit in coming months, thus tending to keep recovery in motion, and mitigate the usual industrial letdown between midspring and midsummer.

In the meantime, the movement to raise wages, and where possible, to reduce working hours, is spreading. Prices in some lines, notably steel and automobiles, are rising. Business observers point out that a slow rise in prices may prompt more active consumer buying, similar to the buying which took place before the NRA blanket code went into effect last summer. Sharp, sudden increases, such as might cause a buyers' strike, it is expected, will be avoided.

The 10 per cent wage increases announced in the steel and motor industries were followed by further boosts in miscellaneous industries today. In Cleveland and Toledo, several increases, ranging from 5 to 15 per cent, were announced, affecting some 5,000 workers. At Amsterdam, N. Y., two large carpet companies advanced prices 10 per cent, affecting some 7,000 workers. Two automobile companies announced increases in prices of several models, ranging from $25 to $130, and steel and trade circles predicted boosts in the price of steel, following the lead taken late last week by the Illinois Steel Co.

Credit Barely Touched.

The weekly consolidated condition statement of Federal Reserve member banks in 91 leading cities showed that as yet barely a start has been made in expanding credit, despite the more willing attitude reported by Chairman Jones.

With excess reserves of member banks still above $1,400,000,000, a huge base of potential credit is provided. In theory, $1 of reserves forms a base for a maximum of $10 of credit.

The condition statement of the weekly reporting banks, which comprise about half the country's banking resources, showed that total loans had declined $35,000,000 in the week ended March 28 to a total of $8,161,000,000, a drop of $171,000,000 from a year previously. But the decline from a week previously was more than accounted for by a drop of $39,000,000 in loans on securities. Other, or commercial loans, increased $4,000,000.

D. C. Police Watch "Claw Machines"

Garnett Changes Policy on Coin Devices.

So-called "claw machines," now found in many city business places, were placed in the category of "gaming machines" yesterday when United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett notified the Police Department they should be "observed."

Mr. Garnett notified Maj. and Superintendent Ernest Brown that after several weeks of observation he had come to the conclusion that the machines were not what he thought they were when he gave them an official "o. k." several weeks ago.

According to persons acquainted with the "lottery laws" the machines are illegal. When played, the machines are said to return a few insignificant pieces of candy, or nothing. Police said several hundred machines were in operation here. The "take" for the owner of the place where a machane operates is 25 per cent.

1924 Grid Star Sued By His Former Wife

Chicago, April 2 (AP).—Mrs. Chester Speakman, divorced wife of Herbert Steger, captain of the 1924 University of Michigan football team, today filed a petition asking that the former All-American back field star be required to contribute to the support oof their daughter, Phoebe Ann, who was born April 23, 1928.

They were married May 31, 1926, and the wife granted a divorce February 16, 1931, on charges of cruelty.

Senate Starts Tax Loophole Battle Today

Administration Leaders See Revised Income Levy Passage Certain.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Although left-wing Democrats and Republicans in the Senate will wage a fight this week for increased income and estate taxes, particularly in the higher brackets, Administration leaders yesterday contended they had the situation well in hand and that the pending tax bill would be passed without substantial change as it came from the Finance Committee.

The Senate started consideration of the so-called $330,000,000 loophole-plugging tax bill yesterday, but actual fighting was postponed until today.

For the first day, the only progress made was an outline of the bill's provisions and purposes by Senator Pat Harrison, chairman of the Finance Committee, and approval of noncontroversial Finance Committee amendments. Any amendment fostering an objection was put over until later.

Fighting will center chiefly on two amendments offered by Senator Robert M. La Follette (Republican) Wisconsin. One would increase the normal tax rate from 4 to 6 per cent, and would increase the surtaxes until the maximum on incomes in excess of $1,000,000 would be 71 per cent instead of 59 per cent, as now provided by law.

60 Per Cent Estate Maximum.

The second La Follette amendment would increase the graduated inheritance taxes on estates until the maximum on estates in excess of $10,000,000 would be 60 per cent, instead of the 50 per cent provided in the bill and the 45 per cent under existing law.

Senator La Follette likewise would reduce the sum exempted from the inheritance tax from $50,000 to $25,000, with a tax of 1 per cent applying to the first $35,000 of net value of estates.

These amendments will constitute the chief ground of fighting in the Senate, although there are several other proposals which may inspire sharp debate. Senator LaFollette has the backing of a large number of the Republican progressives and some of the Democrats. It is doubtful, however, whether he can attract a majority to support him.

Senator Thomas P. Gore (Democrat), Oklahoma, will press an amendment which, if passed, in effect would constitute an innovation in the use of the taxation power to discourage corporations from paying large salaries. It is possible such an amendment may be passed because there is sentiment in the Senate against payment of large salaries.

Under the Gore amendment a corporation could not deduct as a legitimate expense any sum in excess of $75,000 a year as compensation, salary, bonus or reward to any person for personal services. Any sum paid in excess of $75,000 thus would be subjected to double taxation, first the corporation tax, and secondly, the individual normal and surtax rates.

Senator William E. Borah (Republican), Idaho, has offered three amendments to tighten up the law on corporation returns. He would repeal that section of the law granting an exemption on gross income dividends received from another corporation. He also would deny domestic corporations the right to take credit for foreign taxes paid by a foreign subsidiary.

Would End Consolidated Returns.

The Idahoan also would abolish the use of consolidated returns by affiliated corporations. The existing law permits consolidated returns subject to a 1 per cent penalty tax. The pending bill would increase that penalty to 2 per cent.

Another amendment which may cause some discussion will be offered by Senator Gerald P. Nye (Republican), North Dakota. It would provide that in event of war, all income tax rates shall be increased 100 per cent, provided, however, that such tax, along with all other Federal, State, local and foreign taxes imposed on the same taxpayer shall not exceed 98 per cent of his entire net income, but in no case shall such tax be less than 98 per cent of the taxpayer's income in excess of $10,000 a year.

Other amendments which will be offered provide for repeal of the Federal 1-cent-a-gallon gasoline tax, levying a tax of 10 cents a pound on imported copper, repeal of the excise tax on candy, and repeal of the tax on boats after June 30, next.

In explaining provisions of the tax bill to the Senate, Harrison said it was estimated it would produce $330,000,000 additional revenue in the first full year of operation. This, he explained, was $72,000,000 more than the bill provided when it left the House.

$175,000,000 Gain This Year.

Pointing out that some of the provisions designed to plug loopholes in the law would not reach full force until income tax returns were made next spring for this calendar year, and since the proposed capital stock tax would not yield any revenue until July 1, 1935, Harrison estimated the bill would increase Treasury receipts by about $175,000,000 in the fiscal year starting July 1.

Recalling the President in his budget had estimated additional revenue from changes proposed in the bill at $150,000,000, the Finance Committee chairman said the bill, "as reported to the Senate, complies with the President's request with a slight margin for safety."

He pointed out that the changes in surtax rates proposed in the bill, along with restoration of an allowance for earned income, were inspired by the belief that "in the past, dividend income has not been bearing it fair share of income taxation."

"The bulk of the additional revenue expected to be raised by this bill," he continued, "results from stopping various methods of tax avoidance which have flourished in the past. Although many of the new provisions are much more severe than those of existing law, the committee believes the changes proposed are fair and are no more stringent than is necessary to meet the conditions with which we are confronted.

"Although cases will no doubt be presented in which the bill operates severely, it is our judgment that the bill is perfectly fair to the great mass of honest taxpayers. It is impossible to stop the known instances of tax avoidance without causing hardship in some cases."

After explaining the provision limiting capital losses to capital gains, with a $2,000 exception which may be charged against ordinary income, Senator Harrison assailed personal holding companies as "incorporated pocketbooks." He said the proposed surtaxes on undistributed profits of such companies were justified and would net the Treasury $20,000,000 annually.

Benefit by Penalty.

He estimated $20,000,000 additional from the increased penalty tax on consolidated returns, holding the Treasury stood more to gain by imposing the penalty than by forbidding such reports.

In conclusion, he argued the bill represented "major improvement" over existing law and predicted it would be approved by "the great mass of honest taxpayers," since we have attempted to make the tax provisions effective upon all taxpayers alike and to put an end to various schemes and devices by which some wealthy taxpayers were evading the imposition of the income tax upon them.

"The bill distributes the tax burden fairly among taxpayers and in no way impedes legitimate business transactions."

Courtesy Assured Festival Visitors

Policemen Instructed to Aid Guests.

Visiting motorists will have nothing to fear from Washington's Traffic Bureau squad. Capt. Milton D. Smith, second in command of the Traffic Bureau, yesterday ordered "every courtesy" toward out-of-town autoists.

"It is expected that thousands of visitors will be in the city for the Cherry Blossom Festival," Capt. Smith pointed out. "The police force of Washington is conceded one of the most courteous in the country. During the Cherry Blossom period members of the Traffic Bureau will make special efforts to impress our guests."

the guise of regulating the stock exchanges which will unduly hamper legitimate business," Representative Carl E. Mapes, of Michigan, a veteran Republican member of the committee, said last night.

"I think the bill before the committee can be amended materially to its advantage and I hope that the committee will be able to eliminate the objectionable features of the present draft. I am not so much concerned about the time the bill is reported, as I am in having it in proper shape when it is reported."

Senator Fletcher said his committee already is far advanced on "revising the revision" of the Fletcher-Rayburn bill, and will have it ready for the committee to pass formally on its provisions, beginning tomorrow.

He thought it "likely" the present margin requirements may be made slightly more flexible, and was of the opinion municipal bonds might be exempted, along with Government securities.

Robert E. Healy, general counsel of the Federal Trade Commission, yesterday described "write-ups" and stock market operations of some large corporations, at an executive session of the committee.

Untermyer Many Testify.

It was announced that Samuel Untermyer, New York attorney, may appear before the committee today. Ferdinand Pecora, counsel for the group, indicated an effort will be made to get both House and Senate committees together before the bill is finally reported.

In defending the securities act of 1933 against voluminous protests of business and financial interests, neither Representative Rayburn nor Senator Fletcher made direct reference to the report of the United States Chamber's committee, which charged that issuance of high grade securities had been substantially cut down since the act.

Both, however, went out of their way in rebuttal of arguments advanced in the report.

"It is not true," said Rayburn, "that the securities act is preventing the sale of securities—it is the lack of a market.

"This liability section has been lied about by men who won't tell the truth about anything.

Money too Timid.

"Money is too timid yet to invest in anything with any degree of speculation. Ask any man with $100,000 what he will do with his money, and he will think awhile and then tell you he thinks he will buy Government bonds."

Senator Fletcher's reply to critics was in similar vein. He said the falling off in sales of securities is not only noticeable here but in England and other countries. He pointed out all securities have been affected, even those exempted from the act, such as railroad securities.

"People are cautious and fearful," he said. "If they are not buying securities it is because of the way they have been treated heretofore."

Outlaw's Nest Reveals Clews To Dillinger

Carroll, Midwest Bandit, Believed Lieutenant of Desperado.

St. Paul, April 2 (AP).—The empty nest of a criminal band supplied authorities today with fresh clews to killer John Dillinger's presumably new mob of desperadoes.

Tommy Carroll, Minneapolis police said, was believed to have been one of the men who left the place shortly before two Federal Department of Justice agents and a city detective weathered a machine gun fight in an apartment house here whence Dillinger, a woman, and another man believed to be John Hamilton, fled Saturday.

Carroll is wanted in connection with the $32,000 Brainerd, Minn., bank robbery several months ago, and for questioning about the $46,000 robbery of the Sioux Falls, S. Dak., Security National Bank March 6, last. Machine guns figured in both these crimes.

Reconstruction of the escape from the third-floor apartment after doors and walls were sprayed with lead, led police to believe Carroll was one of the men who left the place with two women shortly before R. C. Coulter, another Federal operative, and Detective Henry Cummings rapped at the door.

Beds later were found made up for five persons. While Daniel S. Coffey, building proprietor, had rented the apartment to one couple only. It was the knowledge that more than two persons occupied the place that prompted Coffey to ask the Federal Department of Justice to investigate.

Today, the Department of Justice was in complete charge of the case and possessed all evidence collected in the apartment. Twenty-five persons were in custody.

Touhy Pal Claims State Pledged Him Clemency

Charlotte, N. C., April 2 (AP).—Isaac Costner, Touhy gangster, told Judge E. Yates Webb in Federal District Court here today that Joseph B. Keenan, Assistant United States Attorney General, promised "to see me back on the street if I would testify" for the State in the Jake Factor kidnaping case.

Costner's statement was made as his counsel sought to prevent introduction in evidence of his purported confessions to participation in a $105,000 mail truck robbery here November 15.

9 Kansas City Police Ousted After Slayings

Kansas City, April 2 (AP).—The "heat" which was turned on Kansas City's police department after four municipal election day slayings today resulted in dismissal of nine members of the department by Chief of Police Robert J. Coffey. Eugene C. Reppert, director of police, resigned Saturday.

The dismissals were "for the good of the department," Chief Coffey said.

(Republican), Nebraska, after whom Norris Dam in the Tennessee Valley was named, told the United Press. "Power companies which bribe legislators, teachers and public officials will stop at nothing. They wouldn't hesitate to cut Mr. Roosevelt's throat or destroy his whole program if they felt it necessary to protect their own selfish interests."

The reference to bribing legislators, teachers and public officials had to do with revelations in an earlier inquiry, in which propaganda activities of the now defunct National Electric Light Institute and other utilities agencies were revealed. The NELA was dissolved after the revelations, and succeeded by the Edison Electric Institute.

Edison Institute Linked.

Other letters made public yesterday by the commission indicated that the Edison Institute was taking an active part in opposing municipal power development. Hobart Benson, of Daniel Starh and Staff, handling public relations for Associate Gas & Electric, said in a letter dated November 25, 1933, that the institute had "an alert follow-up on the progress of municipal ownership throughout the country and we are in frequent touch with them."

Still another letter issued yesterday represented an official of the Associated Gas & Electric as feeling that the New York State Public Service Commission and utilities companies were "on the same side of the fence" during a legislative power investigation in 1929-30.

"I think nothing could be gained in criticizing the present commission because, as I see it, the companies and the commission are on the same side of the fence with respect to this investigation and we must live with the commission in as near harmony as possible," J. I. Mange, president of Associated Gas & Electric, wrote J. C. Hopson, vice president, in a long letter discussing what evidence Hopson should give before the legislative committee.

Norris Hits "Power Trust."

Senator Norris, in a speech in the Senate yesterday, attacked the "power trust" for corruption in State Legislatures and in Congress.

He referred to charges revealed last week that State Senator Warren T. Thayer, of New York, received "expense money" from Associated Gas & Electric while he was chairman of the State Senate Utilities Committee.

"There is not a State capitol where such tactics are not used," Norris said. "And it is not limited to State Legislatures, but extends to the Federal Congress as well.

"How many other men does that power trust have in the New York Legislature? How many key men do they have in other Legislatures all over the United States? These cases show how the power trust is guarding every avenue that might possibly injure it."

Husband in Jail, Mother Takes Poison

Hagerstown, Md., April 2 (Spl.).—Mrs. Lillian Barker, mother of three, is in the Washington County Hospital in a critical condition, after taking poison. It was the second time within six months that the woman attempted suicide, said police. Six months ago she was treated at a hospital for poison.

Her husband, Zachariah Barker, 65, is serving a year's sentence in the House of Correction for passing worthless checks, and their three children are at the Orphans' Home.

Albany Orders Public Thayer Charge Airing

Senator's Letter to Utility Chief "Hoped Services Were Satisfactory."

Albany, N. Y., April 2 (AP).—A public airing of State Senator Warren T. Thayer's connections with the Associated Gas & Electric Corporation was agreed upon today, and tonight the Senate took steps toward an investigation.

The Senator himself was prepared to ask the Legislature "to investigate myself," but the Democrats, in the majority, had their own resolutions framed.

A letter Thayer purportedly wrote to an official of the utility in 1927 said, "I hope my work during the past session was satisfactory to your company, not so much for the new legislation enacted, but from the fact that many detrimental bills which were introduced we were able to kill in committee."

Senator Thayer, a Republican, was chairman of the public utilities committee of the Senate in 1927. The Republicans controlled the Senate that year.

While there was accord at the capitol on a Thayer investigation, there was not such unanimity concerning a general investigation into the utility question and speedy passage of laws tightening State control of electricity, gas and telephone companies. Republican leaders withheld comment.

Gov. Lehman asked for a "sweeping" investigation to determine what, if any, relationship there is, or was, between utilities and State officials and employes. Senator John J. Dunnigan, Democratic leader, concurred in that demand. Senator Dunnigan also vouched for the immediate consideration of the Governor's utility regulation bills.

Assemblyman Hamilton F. Potter, Republican, of Suffolk County, a spokesman for W. Kingsland Macy, State chairman, had an investigation resolution prepared. Macy, a few months ago, charged utility interests, operating through Fred Hammond, Assembly clerk, stifled unfavorable legislation.

Hobby Led Sociologist To Death, Say Police

Mobile, Ala., April 2 (AP).—Police tonight clung to the theory that a hobby for criminology led Thomas A. Hart, 45, internationally known social service worker, to his death in an alley between two vacant buildings here early yesterday.

A robbery theory was discarded when a search of Hart's room here disclosed the clothing he usually wore, jewelry and money had been left behind when he went out early Saturday night.

House, Senate Service Honors Rep. E. W. Pou

Big Delegation Escorts Noted Legislator's Body Home to N. C.

Congress paused yesterday in its legislative labors and paid tribute to the memory of Representative Edward W. Pou, dean of the House, who died Easter Day at the age of 70.

Meeting in joint session, the House and the Senate convened in the House chamber, where the casket rested amid a veritable garden of flowers, and heard the North Carolina Representative lauded by leaders of both parties.

While Mrs. Roosevelt sat with a naval escort in the diplomatic gallery, the Rev. James Shera Montgomery, chaplain of the House, conducted the funeral service. The full Supreme Court in judicial robes sat in front of the chaplain.

"Good Night, Friend."

Subsequently, Speaker Rainey, who succeeds Mr. Pou as dean of the House, spoke in an impassioned voice of his association with the North Carolinian and concluded with, "Good night, old friend, good night!"

Representative Bertrand Snell, minority leader, followed with recollections of his 18 years of association, particularly as they alternated as chairman of the Rules Committee, which Mr. Pou headed when he died.

The death of Mr. Pou, who had served in the House for 34 consecutive years, removes the last member who was in the body when Rainey was first elected 30 years ago, the Speaker said.

"It will be hard to fill his place," Rainey said. "When a great tree crashes in the forest it leaves a space which is not filled again for many decades of time.

"His long life was characterized always by intense patriotism and devotion to duty.

World War Period.

"During the World War he was chairman of the great rules committee of the House and again, during the present war against depression, he occupied that dignified, powerful and influential position.

"During the World War he made his full share of sacrifice for his country. Armistice Day his son was killed in action on the battle fields of Northern France.

"In his death all of us who were so closely associated here with him experienced a strong sense of personal loss."

Representative Snell, in recalling his association with Mr. Pou, said: "Ed Pou was more than just an ordinary member... In these troublesome times the country can ill afford to lose a man of the fine character and mental equipment of our friend. To me, he represented in every-day-life the highest type of twentieth century American manhood."

The Senate and the House met briefly at noon to prepare for the services and then recessed until the ceremony. The House later adjourned for the day.

This was the first funeral service held in the House within six years. The last occurred late in April, 1928, for Representative Martin Barnaby Madden (Republican), of Illinois, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee.

Large Delegation.

One of the largest and most impressive delegations named in recent years to attend the burial of a colleague accompanied the body of Pou as it left Washington late last night for Smithfield, N. C., where the legislator will be buried beside his son, Ensign Edward Smith Pou, naval aviator, who was killed in the World War.

The delegation comprised Senators Reynolds and Warren (Democrats), North Carolina; Speaker Rainey, Majority Leader Byrns, Minority Leader Snell, Representatives Bankhead, of Alabama, and O'Conner, of New York, ranking members of the Rules Committee; the North Carolina Congressional delegation and Kenneth Ridney, House sergeant at arms.

The official committee in charge of the funeral yesterday comprised Representatives Weaver, Bulwinkle and Clark (Democrats), of North Carolina, and Representative Martin (Republican), of Massachusetts, ranking minority member of the Rules Committee.

Music was provided by the Marine Band, playing softly off the floor, and by a quartet from St. Margaret's Episcopal Church.

Representative Bankhead, brilliant political strategist, will succeed Pou as chairman of the Rules Committee.

Tumulty Lauds Pou's Loyalty to Country

Edward W. Pou, of North Carolina, dean of the House, who died Sunday, was eulogized yesterday by Joseph P. Tumulty, former secretary to President Wilson, as one "always seeing straight and true in a perplexed and distracted age."

Tumulty said that "in the death of Edward W. Pou, a Congressional landmark had passed." The text of his letter, addressed to The Post, follows:

"In the death of Edward W. Pou, a Congressional landmark has passed. Here was a life wholly and unselfishly given to public service. Never dramatic nor demagogic, with quietude and serenity, he wended his modest way, drawing men to his side in bonds of the warmest affection, scorning the smooth velvet path of expediency, never surrendering to the illusions of the present day, always seeing straight and true in a perplexed and distrated age.

"Unfortunately, in these days when scandals in public life screech from the headlines, it was a comforting and consoling fact to have living in our very midst this knightly figure of the South, who, having about him the grandeur of the old-fashioned, lived and labored for his country and his people. As an associate of Woodrow Wilson during the critical days of the war, I can testify to the loyal way he stood by the side of the President, never flinching, always moving forward, as one of the principal Congressional aids of his commander in chief. The death of Edward Pou brings a pang of sorrow to everyone who knew and loved him."

Osgood, Agent For Railways, Dies Here at 75

Veteran of Lines Worked Until Three Days Before Death.

C. N. Osgood, 75, for 38 years a special railroad representative here, died Sunday in Garfield Hospital after a short illness. Mr. Osgood worked at his office at the Transportation Building until within three days of his death.

Residing here at 1713 P street northwest since 1896, Osgood was born in Waltham, Mass., on June 21, 1858. He received his education at Harvard, graduating in 1879. He was a member of the Harvard Club here.

Mr. Osgood was well known in railroad circles through his office of special agent for the New York Central, the Lackawanna and other railroads in Washington. He was a member of the vestry of Epiphany Church for 20 years and secretary of that church's home for 27 years.

Surviving are two daughters, Miss Ruth Osgood, of Washington, and Mrs. L. W. Watts, of Newton Center, Mass., and a son, H. A. Osgood, of St. Louis. Mr. Osgood's wife died here last August 31, shortly after the celebration of their golden wedding anniversary.

Funeral services will be held today at 2:30 p. m. at the Church of the Epiphany, with the Rev. Z. B. Phillips, rector, officiating. Burial will be in Mount Feake Cemetery, Waltham, Mass.

Insull's Return Gets Attention Of U. S. Chiefs

Speed of Turkish Action Finds Officials Here Unprepared.

(Associated Press.)

State and Justice Department officials conferred last night on ways of bringing Samuel Insull back to the United States.

In granting the request of the United States for extradition of the former utilities magnate late today the Turkish government announced Insull was not at the disposition of Robert P. Skinner, the American Ambassador.

All that remains before Insull is actually extradited from Istanbul, the port in which he was trapped after a long flight, is for the Turkish police to hand him over to an authorized American police official.

The distance from Washington to Istanbul and the speed with which the Turkish government acted on the American Government's request found Washington officials momentarily unprepared to take him into custody.

No accredited American police official is now in Turkey and State and Justice officials are working on a plan to have Insull, if possible, given into the custody of an American specially designated by President Roosevelt, to bring him back to the United States.

Mr. Gregg Repents, Brings Us Spring

Weather Man Gives More of the Same Today.

W. R. Gregg, Washington's new weather man, after getting off to a bad start since he took over the job, decided to make up for some of the shortcomings of the last few months and almost overdid it yesterday.

The day after Gregg took office the temperature dropped to 6 below zero. Thereafter Washington experienced the worst winter of years.

But yesterday the new weather man was in a genial mood. He had dished out a perfect Easter and followed it with a summer day. The maximum temperature yesterday was 84. Gregg predicted the temperature would stay up today. There was another sign of spring besides budding trees, robins and perspiring brows—the police changed to summer-weight trousers.

Quiz of Four High Officials Demanded in Wirt Inquiry

funds "for purposes foreign to the American form of Government."

This brought a sharp rebuke from Representative George Foulkes (Democrat), of Michigan, who said: "Has it come to the point where officials of the Administration must be put through an inquisition every time they do something in the interest of the common people? Of course they have not tried to nationalize land or industry and any talk to that effect is silly. But if they had made such an attempt it would be far more in harmony with the principles of the American Constitution and the Declaration of Indepence than the wicked and indefensible prostitution of public powers, and authority to private interests that fatten from the legalized larceny that has been the curse of the land for so many years."

First Lady Undisturbed.

Asked about the Wirt charges at her weekly newspaper conference, Mrs. Roosevelt, with a smile, quoted a parody of H. I. Phillips which appeared in The Washington Post, and in a more serious vein added:

"There is nothing that brings revolution like oppression. There is little chance for a revolution that brings bloodshed where the people can register their desires in a peaceful way and where the great mass of the people are not in real want."

The subject was brought up briefly in the Senate when Senator Robinson (Republican), of Indiana, inserted in the Congressional Record communications from the Rotary and Lions Clubs of Dr. Wirt's home city, asking full investigation of his charges. This was aimed at the plan of House leaders to restrict the inquiry to ascertaining who told Dr. Wirt about the revolutionary plot and to questioning of any person named.

Navy Hunts Own Plotters.

The Navy, it was revealed, has been conducting its own hunt for plots. Rear Admiral Adolphus Andrews, chief of the battle force, advised the Navy Department that he had completed an inquiry into alleged communistic attempt to undermine morale in the fleet, but he has not submitted his report. The investigation, according to Associated Press dispatches from San Pedro, Calif., followed the arrest of four men on charges of distributing a magazine entitled "Shipmate's Voice," which described a reported mutiny in the British fleet in 1931. Other literature, alleged to have been seditious, was seized.

There was a buzz of excitement over the disclosure that former Senator Brookhart, at a dinner here last week, had lauded many of the things being done in Soviet Russia and had urged that the United States might well adopt some of them, a speech which caused one of the guests, Senator Josiah W. Bailey (Democrat), of North Carolina, to call Brookhart the "Ambassador from Russia."

Brookhart said reports of his speech did not give a full picture of what he had said.

Accuses Standpatters.

"It is the standpatters," he said, "who want to overthrow the Government. We want to strengthen it. We challenge the Wirts because they are the ones that have no confidence in our Government. If we wanted to do the things which Russia is doing for its people we could do them better under our system than the Russians do."

Brookhart said he was arguing for restriction of profits and a greater spread of the benefits to the average citizen. At the dinner, which was given by two Iowa bankers, John and Austin Waller, of Dubuque, were several Senators, Representatives and Administration officials.

Senator Dickinson (Republican), Iowa, disclosed he has been studying the new book by Dr. Tugwell, regarded as the chief figure of the old "brain trust" now connected with the Administration. This new volume, "Our Economic Society," was written by Tugwell in collaboration with Prof. Howard C. Hill, of the University of Chicago. Senator Dickson described it as a textbook for use in colleges and high schools and one which advocated economic planning and greater social control. He said he was preparing a speech in denunciation of the doctrines expounded.

Belittles Present Set-up.

The book rather casually dismisses the experiments begun under this Administration as worthwhile beginnings, but not economic planning.

"Complete economic planning is possible," the book says, "only when there is public ownership and control of the means of production."

The volume analyses the Russian experiment and, while condemning its dictatorial and tryannical features, holds that the idea of a centrally planned state being developed in Russia stands as a challenge to America.

"Russia has silenced forever the notion that economic affairs are governed by adamant natural laws," the Tugwell book says. "She has demonstrated that men have it in their power to set up the system they want and to make it obedient to their wishes.

"Our own system has many defects. We need not agree with Russia's philosophy to see that she has proved that society is capable of setting up plans for its own welfare, basing these plans upon the goals it desires and the materials with which it is familiar.

Predicts "Action" in U. S.

"With Russia as an example, intelligent people in America will become less and less willing to seek remedies for economic evils in inactivity. They will want to plan and act. Their plans may range from a mild modification of the existing order to violent revolution. But they will differ in quality from laissez faire."

Of all the Roosevelt experimental program, Dr. Tugwell regards the NRA as the only one which makes a comprehensive approach to economic planning, but it adds that "for the evil that the most economical utilization of industrial capacities for the welfare of the people as a whole is inconsistent with private profit-seeking, the act attempts no remedy."

He argues that economic planning involves the encouragement of industrial development along socially useful lines which cannot always be determined by ability to yield private profits.

"Thus planning involves public participation through government in the distribution of capital among industries, by means of taxation, regulation of profits, and in various other ways," Dr. Tugwell says.

He notes as an important obstacle to dealing with social planning in an experimental attitude "the unreasoning, almost hysterical attachment of certain Americans to the Constitution," which, persisted in to the point where it prevents revision, "might result in a rising pressure of popular indignation that would explode with terrific force and with disastrous social consequences to all the people of the United States."

Wallace Urges Dairy Industry To Cut Output

Northeast Producers Hear Secretary Explain Control Plan.

Philadelphia, April 2 (AP).—Secretary Wallace opened today a drive which he said would "place dairy production on a more economical and sounder basis."

Wallace's speech opened a Nation-wide series of discussions of the proposed dairy production control plan.

Dairy producers from Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maryland, Delaware, Virginia, and West Virginia, heard the Agriculture Secretary.

Wallace said his plan seeks to "place dairy production on a more economical and a sounder basis; to improve quality of herds; to get more land back to pasture, and to protect milk-users' health.

"I think it will be necessary," he said, "for the dairy industry to place its reliance upon recovery to consumer buying power, possibly with production control to prevent the industry from stepping up its output too rapidly."

Under the plan each dairyman signs a contract to reduce his production 10 per cent under his average production for 1932-1933. In return producers get benefit payments of 40 cents a pound of butterfat reduced.

Dr. Wirt Fears U. S. Policies Peril Recovery

Reasserts Upswing Dates One Year Back, Warns Against Tinkering.

Why can we not recognize the fact that we had recovery last summer, and that it started last April 19? Dr. William A. Wirt asks in the second installment of his 10,000-word memrandum entitled "America Must Lose."

"The same thing happened in England and the British Empire when they reduced the gold value of the English pound in foreign exchange, September, 1931," writes the head of the Gary (Ind.) school system, who is to appear shortly before a Congressional investigating committee.

"Since that time the British Empire has had a consistently steady business recovery. The older governments have learned that the things our Government is now trying to do can not be done. Therefore, they have been since 1931 confining their own governmental efforts to the things that governments can do.

Blocking Recovery, He Says.

"World recovery in all of the sterling countries has been most marked since April 19. And they have not had the relapse that we have had since September 1, 1933. The reason why they have not had such a relapse is that they did not deliberately try to stop their precious recovery. We actually did this very foolish thing!

"Last fall the writer was hoping that the deflationists in the Administration would be able to force the dollar back to 100 cents in foreign exchange. They did force it back August 1 to 75.5, and farm prices fell. What would have happened if they could have put the dollar back to 100? Farm prices would have been lowered immediately to their early April level because the only difference in our prices was then and is now the difference in our dollar. Trade stagnation would immediately have been forced back upon us in all of its horror.

"But we would then have learned the lesson of April 19. And it would have been worth the cost. We would have recognized that while July 4 is our Independence Day in the political field, April 19 is our Independence Day in the field of our monetary economy. Most certainly we would have been shocked into a realization of what happened from April 19 to August 1. And the propagandists could not have befuddled the public mind concerning the causes of all the business recovery that we have had.

Calls NRA a Detriment.

"We would have restricted to its few essentials our NRA, which since August 1 has destroyed in part the equilibrium of our price levels. Our NRA has not stimulated business, but it has stimulated our people who can artificially control their prices to raise them and thus destroy once more our ability to trade. The NRA has destroyed our 'purchasing power.' The NRA has not created 'purchasing power.' How much longer must we suffer before we learn what purchasing power is? If our great leaders in economic thought do not understand the problem, when will the rest of us understand it?

"Unfortunately, our inability to think the problem through will not save us when we do the wrong thing. Our suffering will be even greater and just as real, even though we don't understand it. Lacking understanding, we will experiment to our sorrow and fight the wrong thing to our detriment.

"We may become so confused that we will destroy one another. Fortunately, even in our ignorance we can not nullify entirely the effect of the event of April 19. This fact alone may save us from social revolution."

Navy's Charleston Plant Held Ready

Order Halts Dismantling of Ordnance Works.

Charleston, W. Va., April 2 (Spl.). Orders have been received from the Navy Department in Washington halting further removal of machinery and equipment from the Federal naval ordnance plant at South Charleston.

Commander R. C. Needham, officer in charge of the plant, said dismantling would not be resumed except on future specific authority from the Assistant Secretary of the Navy.

Charleston citizens believe the Navy Department may reopen the plant in consequence of the passage of the naval construction bill by Congress.

The ordnance plant originally cost the Federal Government $20,000,000. It has not been operated since the days of the Harding administration.

Sally Eilers Attends Husband's Balm Trial

Los Angeles, April 2 (AP).—Blonde Sally Eilers of the films smiled encouragement at her husband, Harry Joe Brown, producer and director, as he told a jury today of his romance with Marjorie Whiteis, another actress, who is seeking $100,000 for breach of promise.

Brown, having denied promising to marry Miss Whiteis, said they met in the summer of 1928 and were estranged in the summer of 1929.

Fund Relieves Virginia Prison Job Problem

(Editor's note—This is one of a series of articles on legislation enacted at the 1934 session written for the Associated Press by members of the General Assembly and State officials.)

By Rice M. Youell.

(Superintendent of the State penitentiary and a Nationally known advocate of prison reforms.)

Richmond, April 2 (AP).—Because of the Hawes-Cooper act, which became effective January 19, 1934, and because of the NRA, the question of employment for prisoners reached an acute stage January 1. There had been employed on contract labor in the State penitentiary approximately 500 prisoners. These, of course, were placed in idleness. The Legislature advanced $150,000 to the State prison board to be used in installing State-use industries in order to relieve idleness at Richmond Prison.

This money is to be repaid to the State treasury from any profits that might be realized. The General Assembly of 1918 passed an act committing the State to the policy of State-use employment of prisoners; that is, the labor or the product of the inmate is to be used by the State institutions, departments and political subdivisions of the State. The State-use plan has been approved by the United States Chamber of Commerce, labor organizations, Federation of Women's Clubs and various other organizations too numerous to mention.

Variety Was Sought.

It is the desire of the prison board to install a variety of industries in the main prison for several reasons:

First, the market for the output is limited.

Second, prisoners can better be assigned to work where the industries are diversified and the labor will be more beneficial to everyone concerned.

Third, a better opportunity is given the inmate by labor of a vocational type.

Fourth, diversification spreads the burden of prison labor over a number of industries and does not fall on any one line of business. The 1934 General Assembly did a very constructive piece of work when they passed an act providing the necessary money to install industries to relieve idleness here in the penitentiary.

Of all the prison disturbances in recent years, no one factor has contributed more to them than idleness.

The 1932 General Assembly provided for the appointment of a commission to study the question of probation, indeterminate sentence and parole. This commission appointed consisted of Arthur W. James, commissioner of the Department of Public Welfare; C. Vernon Spratley, a circuit court judge; Charles L. Pollard, commonwealth's attorney; William R. Shands, and Rice M. Youell.

This commission held a number of meetings and had the services of Dr. F. Lovell Bixby, an expert in this field of work, who gave about three months continuous work with the commission. The commission submitted a report to the General Assembly in the form of House Document, No. 3. It is believed that this report was sound and carried recommendations which should be put into operation in this State.

Bills Introducted.

Bills were introduced in the General Assembly to carry out the recommendations of this commission, however, when the General Assembly is in session there are so many reports of commissions and various other kinds of documents placed before its members it is almost impossible for them to even read, much less study, the matters presented for their consideration, and, I believe for this reason the report was not looked upon with favor by the General Assembly.

I have as yet not found a single member of the General Assembly who has read the report submitted by the commission. The legislation recommended was not of an experimental nature because in the United States today there are only three States, including Virginia, where one form or another of the twin principles of indeterminate sentence and parole are not regularly employed.

The Federal Government has had in operation for some years the same law. In 1925 experts representing 53 nations on the International Prison Commission adopted a resolution favoring the indeterminate sentence and parole. During the first year of the operation of such a system it might be that it would lack about $25,000 or $30,000 of being self-supporting, but it is firmly believed and was shown in the report of the commission that after the first year it would mean a saving to the State of between $100,000 and $150,000 a year.

Primary Limited To One Contest

Winchester, Va., April 2 (Spl.). One of the quietest Democratic primaries in the history of Winchester will be held here tomorrow, it was indicated today, with only one contest scheduled.

In the First Ward, Councilmen Fred W. Forney, Peyton J. Marshall, Lawrence C. Hollis and Hoye L. Riley are candidates for the city council nomination. Voters will pick three in the only contest of the day.

Cadet Filers Organize.

D. A. R. Will Make Two Copies Of Augusta County Deed Book

Valuable Document Which Embraces Wide Area Going to Richmond.

Staunton, Va., April 2 (Spl.). One of Augusta County's most valuable documents, Deed Book No. 2, upon authorization of Judge Joseph A. Glasgow, of circuit court, has been turned over to Mrs. P. W. Hiden, of Newport News, a member of the State library board.

Mrs. Hiden will have photostatic copies made of the records in this book, a copy of which will be retained by the State library. The original, together with another copy, will be returned to the clerk's office here.

This book contains some of the original land grants, deeds, titles, &c., of historic Augusta County, which once embraced practically all of the territory between Virginia and Wisconsin, including West Virginia, Ohio, Illinois, Indiana and some of Michigan and Wisconsin.

The Virginia division, Daughters of the American Revolution, is financing the copying work. Judge Glasgow said in a court order:

"This court desires to express and record its profound appreciation, and the appreciation of the county, for this patriotic and generous action on the part of the Daughters of the American Revolution, and also its appreciation of the services to be rendered by the State library and Mrs. P. W. Hiden."

U. S. Medical Aid Urged for Poor

Alleghany - Bath Doctos Hear Dr. Draper.

Clifton Forge, Va., April 2 (Spl.). Speaking at the quarterly meeting of the Alleghany-Bath County Medical Society here, Dr. W. F. Draper, State commissioner of health, predicted that in the next few years Federal hospitalization will be provided for the sick.

Dr. Draper said the medical profession should not be forced to furnish free treatment and urged the association to consider means of securing Federal help. A paper on the treatment of diabetes was read by Dr. Mulholland, of the University of Virginia.

The society elected as officers for 1934 the following: Dr. S. P. Hileman, of Millboro, president; Dr. N. B. Jeter, of Covington, vice president; Dr. Preston Hawkins, of Clifton Forge, secretary, and Dr. W. M. Revercomb, of Clifton Forge, treasurer.

Bluefield College Loses President

Bluefield, W. Va., April 2 (Spl.). Dr. J. Taylor Stinson has resigned as president of Bluefield College and will return to the ministry at Lebanon, Va.

The trustees accepted the resignation on the condition that Dr. Stinson remain until the end of the scholastic year. The board appointed a committee, headed by Senator A. E. Shumate, of Pearisburg, to negotiate for a successor.

Dr. Stinson formerly held the pastorate of a Baptist church at Lebanon. He later took the pastorate of the First Baptist Church here, whence he was called to the college presidency.

Farmers in 3 Counties File for Crop Loans

Fredericksburg, Va., April 2 (Spl.).—Emergency crop loan offices are functioning at Stafford, King George and Spotsylvania Courthouses. Farmers may borrow up to $250 on agreement not to increase production this year.

Stafford farmers may apply for loans Thursday, between 9 a. m. and 5 p. m., and Spotsylvania farmers during the same hours on April 9 and 10. King George farmers made their applications Friday.

Roanoke Y.M.C.A. Adds Three Associates to Staff

Roanoke, Va., April 2 (Spl.).—Benett Wood, a former student of the United States Naval Academy, joined the Y. M. C. A. staff as clerk today. Bob Spessard, president of the Jefferson Hi-Y Club, and Guy Windley were added to assist the boys' classes.

The boys' work, however, will remain under supervision of Chester Francis, acting general secretary.

Virginia W.C.T.U. Board To Meet in Lancaster

Lancaster, Va., April 2 (Spl.).—The midyear State executive session of the W. C. T. U. will be held here April 17-18 in the Baptist and Methodist churches.

The meeting was held in Lynchburg last year.

Liquor Board May Borrow, Says Eggleston

Virginian Disputes Need of Special Session to Set Up Stores.

Norfolk, Va., April 2 (Spl.). It won't be necessary to call an extra session of the Legislature to provide more funds for the alcoholic beverage control board, Senator John W. Eggleston, of Norfolk, said today. Senator Eggleston was one of the patrons of the bill which created the board. He says the board may borrow funds ahead of anticipated revenues with the consent of Gov. Peery.

Maj. S. Heth Tyler, chairman of the board, said the $250,000 provided for the establishing of liquor stores will enable the body to open only about 14 such establishments, when more than 50 was contemplated.

"We will have to go slow and wait for the money to come in from the 14 stores before we can open others," Tyler said.

It was because of this statement that a movement to hold an extra session of the Legislature was started.

Senator Eggleston called attention to the third paragraph of section 67 of the ABC act which was inserted as an amendment from the floor at his behest.

Section 67 makes an appropriation of $250,000 for the set-up of the system, and provides an additional quarter of a million dollars for manufacture if the board should determine to establish and operate distilleries. The paragraph referred to by the Norfolk Senator reads:

"The board shall not exceed the amounts herein appropriated, except in an emergency, and then only with the consent and approval of the Governor in writing first obtained, in which event it shall be entitled to like privileges and subject to like restrictions as those now provided by law for other State departments, institutions and agencies."

The Senator added that he and Senator Staples, patrons of the bill in the Senate, had endeavored to secure an initial appropriation of $1,000,000, but that when the finance committee limited the amount to $250,000 he had secured the amendments giving authority to borrow in an emergency with the approval of the Governor.

Bladensburg Card Party.

The Ladies' Guild of St. Luke's Episcopal Church, Bladensburg, Md., will hold a card party tomorrow night in the parish hall for the benefit of the church. Mrs. Richard Schuler, president, is in charge. John Williams is floor manager.

Warden Delaney Dies in Maryland

Was Chief of Correction House Since 1925.

Baltimore, April 2 (Spl.).—Warden Joseph A. Delaney, of the Maryland House of Correction at Jessups, near Laurel, died today at the institution of heart disease.

He would have been 61 years old in May. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Agnes M. Delaney. Delaney entered the State penal service in January, 1916, as a guard at the Maryland Penitentiary. In 1923, he was assigned to the House of Correction as assistant to Col. Claude B. Sweezey, at that time warden. In 1925, following the retirement of Col. Sweezey, Delaney was made warden.

Bus Accident Victim Asks $100,000 Award

Hagerstown, Md., April 2(Spl.).—A suit for $100,000 damages has been filed here against the Blue Ridge Transportation Co. by Joseph E. Stotler, 32, who sustained a broken neck.

The car Stotler was driving and a Blue Ridge bus were in collision February 3, 1934.

"THERE ARE TOO MANY COLD ZONES IN OUR HOUSE"

WHEN a child stops playing ...shivers...and climbs into your lap to get warm—it's time you did something about your home heating. It shouldn't need the plaintive whisper "Mummy—I'm cold!" to make you realize the danger in your home of cold zones—those chilling, shivering spots that always were uncomfortable this record-breaking winter.

No home is really livable that harbors cold zones. It isn't healthful for your family. It isn't hospitable to your guests.

Why not get rid of these drafty, chilly spots now, before another bitter, biting winter penalizes your family's health and comfort? Forecasters predict colder winters for the next five years. Prepare for them now, when American Radiator Heating costs so little. A small down payment installs it—no monthly payments until fall.

companies whose contracts have been canceled to reorganize, most of the stock of the old companies would have to be tranferred to the new set-ups. This would mean there would be no opportunity for those accused of fraud and collusion to sue for their rights in the courts.

"What the Postmaster General should do is to admit he was wrong, put the air mail back with the companies capable of handling it, and then bring his charges of fraud and collusion, if any, in the proper courts."

Cord Charges Supported.

Both Robinson and Kelly said they felt there were grounds for investigating charges that E. L. Cord's American Airways is favored by the conditions under which the temporary air-mail contracts are to be let. Robinson said his information on this matter was second-hand, but that he felt an investigation was called for.

Kelly pointed out that under the specifications in the Postoffice Department's advertisement for bids, American Airways would be in a position to obtain a major share of the contracts, with planes of comparatively low speed, and two seaters.

While the present officials of American Airways did not take part in the now famous 1930 conference with Postmaster General Brown, the line obtained contracts since that time, and these were cancelled along with the rest.

Department Denies Claim.

It was said at the Postoffice Department yesterday that the Cord Co. would be required to reorganize, anyhow, and that charges of favoritism were untrue and merely partisan politics.

Another who has demanded an investigation of the temporary contracts is Senator Fess (Republican), Ohio.

Senator Black (Democrat), Alabama, chairman of the Senate Air Mail Investigating Committee, yesterday said further inquiry will have to wait until the Senate has finished with the permanent air-mail bill. He wishes to devote all his time to that measure.

Then, next on the program, will be an open hearing into affairs of Pan American Airways, the only air-mail line to escape cancellation of its contract. Its officers will be called to the stand by the Black committee, as a result of a quiet investigation in which the State Department has cooperated.

Pan American escaped the general cancellation because its contracts and routes involved relationships with Central and South American governments, who would rightfully object to the air mail being flown over their territory by Army pilots.

Telegraph Lines Battle Over Code

it became possible to superimpose a telegraph circuit upon a telephone circuit.

"The users of leased line telegraph service are among the largest users," he said. "It has been the experience of the commercial telegraph companies that when the have developed a telegraph user to the point where he has a large volume of traffic, the Bell System has generally been successful in selling him their leased line telegraph service. The users of leased lines have paid from $10,000,000 to $15,000,000 a year for a volume of service which, at regular commercial rates, would have cost them $50,000,000 to $75,000,000."

Suggests Remedy.

Griswold said abuses could be largely corrected if lessors of wires were not allowed to sublet their services to others.

On the subject of the Western Union's exclusive contracts with the railroads, he said at least $20,000,000 of business a year is not available for Postal because of these contracts. He also charged that Western Union gave free telegraph service to railroads in exchange for free transportation service. Griswold then attacked the exclusive radio contracts which RCA has with numerous foreign governments.

These contracts were defended by Col. Davis, who advised Leighton Peebles, NRA deputy conducting the hearings, to talk with War Department officials on the need for unified communications service from this country to foreign shores. Davis attacked the Postal for joining British interests in an attempt to break into RCA's transpacific business.

The hearing will continue today.

U. S. Biologist Hopes to Save Dam-Menaced Salmon Trade

Columbia River Spawning Grounds Are Isolated by Project.

Harlan O. Holmes, associate aquatic biologist of the Bureau of Fisheries, is solving an important problem in Oregon and Washington—the saving of the $5,000,000 Columbia River salmon industry.

The industry is theatened by the dam which is to be constructed at Bonneville, Oreg., only 100 miles from the river's mouth, thus cutting off the spawning grounds of the upper river to the salmon.

Of course, there is nothing new in fishways, but the Bonneville Dam presents a difficult problem because it will be 72 feet high and on account of the great number of fish in the salmon runs—which reach a total of 10,000 and more 30-and-40-pound fish a day.

Another question is allowing the young salmon to return to the sea.

Holmes is now in charge of experiments as to the best way to elevate the fish to the top of the dam. Preliminary studies show that the young fish may be able to make the downward trip without injury by going through the wheels of the power turbines that will be erected.

The orange threads of the dawn—among the rarest astronomical phenomena ever witnessed by the human eye—have been successfully photographed, says a joint announcement by the Smithsonian Institution and the Bureau of Soils.

These so-called "chappuis bands" are faint orange lines in the spectrum of the Eastern sky, which can be observed only just before sunrise. They are caused by the absorption of certain narrow bands in the solar spectrum by the ozone layer of the earth's atmosphere.

This layer of ozone—oxygen in a peculiar atomic form—is only three millimeters thick. Hence its absorption of light is very little and obscured entirely by even first streaks of sunrise.

The photographs were obtained by Oliver R. Wulf, Alfred F. Moore and Eugene H. Melvin from the Smithsonian Astrophysical Observatory on the top of Table Mountain, Calif., at an altitude of 7,500 feet.

They were made in the very short period before dawn, when the light from the sun rays reach the earth at a tangent and thus pass through the earth's atmosphere for the greatest distance possible.

It Still Has That Swell.

Cheese made on the champagne principle is a new achievement of the Department of Agriculture. In searching for a method of canning cheese so that none of its characteristic flavor would be lost the scientists hit upon a plan of aging in the container.

But unlike champagne the gas that results from the "ripening" and fermentation of the cheese is allowed to escape. This is done by the use of a valve which allows the gas out but prevents the entrance of air.

Thus green American cheddar cheese curds can be sealed in the tin where they will age and when ready for use will have all the characteristics of cheese cured in the old way.

Good-by, Forever!

Soon spring will bring the house fly and it is interesting to know that the Department of Agriculture thinks it has a new form of ammunition for bringing down the fly with one shot.

Present fly sprays which contain pyrethrum in kerosene send flies nosediving to the floor. But the flies are only paralyzed and a good percentage of them recover and take the air again.

Working with derris—powdered dried roots of an East Indian plant similar to our locust—the opposite effect has been noted by the workers. The derris spray doesn't seem to bother the flies for a few minutes, but when they fall they are dead.

So the entomologists think putting pyrethrum and derris together in a spray will make both stunning and deadly ammunition.

50,000 Crowd Mansion Yard To Roll Eggs children, "Sistie" and "Buzzie" Dall, spatter egg yolks over the greensward and generally turn the dignified colonial estate into a noisy, untidy, chattering, democratic carnival.

The crowd was larger by 4,000 than last year's when rain spoiled the performance, and exceeded by some 2,500 the record-breaking throng several years back during Coolidge's Administration.

Conditions were almost perfect for a huge turnout and a gay time. It was warm, the sun was bright, eggs were cheap and the hostess, First Lady of the land, was graciousness personified. If the President, now fishing in Southern waters, had been there no more could have been desired.

84 Children Get Lost.

The "bureau of missing persons," organized for one day only and conducted by White House police and Girl Scouts, was kept busy from the time gates opened at 9 a. m. Of 84 boys and girls, ranging in age from 14 months to 11 years, who became separated from their elders and lost in the maze, all but one were claimed before 5 p. m. brought an end to the festivities. The exception, a 5-year-old girl, was turned over to the Women's Bureau.

Red Cross nurses and physicians had comparatively little to do, however. Their most baffling cases were overindulgence in chocolate eggs and a few dizzy spells.

Mrs. Roosevelt, smiling and waving, risked her happy disposition and new Easter ensemble when she stepped off the sheltered south portico and into the milling crowd at 3 p. m., as she had promised to do. Trying pathetically to blaze a trail and shield her in the mob were four White House policemen and John Muir, the mansion usher. They were swept aside like tin soldiers.

Never Loses Smile.

Never losing her poise nor her smile, Mrs. Roosevelt described a wide horseshoe of about 300 yards before returning to the security of the "house." During the brief excursion, her third public appearance during the traditional rites, women screamed as they fought to reach her side; children with wet eyes were hoisted to their parents' shoulders for a better look and amateur photographers raised cameras over their heads for a blind "shot."

Every hand wave that Mrs. Roosevelt saw, she returned. Often she stooped to pat a youngster's cheek. Oblivious of her own safety, she kept up a continuous conversation running something like: "Be careful of the children...don't push those babies so...please don't crush or some children may be hurt."

Half an hour later the gates were opened to the general public and the United States Marine Band started its concert. Up to that time admission had been by child only, every child requiring an adult escort and no adult being admitted without a child.

Grandchildren Have Party.

At about 3:45 p. m. Sistie and Buzzie played host to a group of 30 children from more select circles in the east room of the White House. Among the guests was 9-year-old Paulina Longworth, whose grandfather, too, was a Roosevelt and a President. She came with her mother, Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, daughter of the late Theodore Roosevelt.

Turkey Jails Samuel Insull To Insure Return for Trial

Turkish government, it was announced no appea' is possible.

The extradition treaty was negotiated in 1923, but ratification here had been delayed until the Greek steamer with Insull aboard steamed into Istanbul Harbor last week and was detained while the authorities investigated the status of the ship's lone passenger.

The 74-year-old utility man's advisers prepared to fight both arrest and extradition.

Removed From Ship.

Insull was forcibly removed from the Maltois yesterday and placed in the Hotel Aydan after a hearing at the penal court when three judges ordered his detention.

He dined Sunday night on champagne and caviar and apparently had a refreshing sleep, for he was up early today. Obtaining permission to consult his lawyer, Insull ate a hearty breakfast, asked for newspapers, and then was taken to Galata under escort for the legal conference.

Five detectives were assigned to him and they kept him under the closest surveillance while he went to the suburban district to talk things over with Ahmed Essad Bey, a Turkish attorney.

After the conference, Insull was taken to the Hotel London in Pera, another suburban town, where he remained while the authorities took steps to bring about his formal arrest.

Detectives on Guard.

There he had lunch and enjoyed a short nap. Still permitted technical liberty, Insull set out for a walk in the afternoon, the detectives following.

A crowd of curious persons so annoyed him that he returned, changed some dollars into Turkish currency, bought some newspapers and settled down in the hotel lounge to read.

Protests Arrest.

Meanwhile, final orders for his arrest were issued by the police. These orders were based on the decision of the Turkish cabinet that Insull should be handed over to the United States without delay, for extradition. The cabinet's action followed the findings of the penal court.

Officers interrupted Insull in the hotel lounge and took him, protesting strongly, to the house of detention.

His Greek attorneys were reported hastening from Athens to Istanbul tonight, to help him in his last-ditch fight to avoid extradition.

Former Warden Is Indicted in N. Y.

Accused of Neglect After Island Prison Expose

New York, April 2 (AP).—Joseph A. McCann, who was warden of the Welfare Island Penitentiary until Commissioner of Correction Austin H. MacCormick raided the prison January 24, was indicted by the grand jury today on a charge of neglect of duty.

The indictment charges McCann failed to provide for segregation of prisoners suffering from contagious and infectious diseases and allowed them to be assigned to work in the penitentiary kitchen.

The former warden is accused also of failing to search prisoners and cells properly for contraband and of granting special privileges to certain inmates.

Quiz May Clear Girl-Wife in Death Of Mother-in-Law

Drumright, Okla., April 2 (AP).—Doubt that a hammer blow struck in an Easter Day quarrel over a "funny paper" had killed Mrs. Mary Hancock, 57, caused county officials today to withhold action against her young daughter-in-law.

Charles Webster, assistant county attorney, said he had been told by doctors that Mrs. Hancock may have died from a heart attack, aggravated by the blow.

Juanita Williams Hancock, 16, wife of Ramie Hancock, was held without charges.

Jack Ary, police chief, said the girl had attempted to take the "funnies" and that Mrs. Hancock remonstrated. Ary said the mother seized a hammer and attacked the girl. She threw up her arm to ward off the blow, Ary said, and the hammer flew back, striking the mother on the head.

J. R. Snodgrass, acting coroner, returned a verdict of "death from a blow with a blunt instrument" without naming the young woman.

This is the difference between Paderewski's Steinway and yours

Paderewski, playing a Chopin polonaise in concert, requires a piano whose brilliance etches each grace-note in sharp relief for a thousand straining ears. Playing for your own enjoyment, in your own home, you need a piano of softer, mellower tone.

This difference is not one of the size of the piano, or of its volume. It is a matter, entirely, of the voicing of the instrument. And each Steinway is voiced correctly for its own particular milieu. But the voicing of a piano goes farther than this. From it results directly the sweetness, the vocal quality, of the tone.

Voicing must be done by hand, one note at a time, when the piano is otherwise completed. And while, mechanically, it consists of stabbing the felt of the hammers with a set of fine needles, the voicer himself must have the ear of a violinist . . . and the soul of a musician. For of all the men who have a part in building the Steinway, his work alone is instantly apparent . . . even to the novice.

Steinway prices now are as low as they will go.

Pennies Scarce As Sales Tax Takes Effect

West Virginia Merchants Puzzled by Problem of Collection.

Charleston, W. Va., April 2 (Spl.).—Coupon books and the copper penny came into prominence in West Virginia today with the first general application of the recently enacted 2 per cent consumers' sales tax.

While the tax became effective Saturday midnight, as part of the State emergency revenue legislation, its operation was not generally felt until the resumption of all business today. Merchants throughout the State pondered over ways and means to make the collection an orderly procedure. In order to avoid a bookkeeping tangle, most retailers planned to utilize cash register tapes for their record of receipts due the State.

Coupons appeared to enable purchasers to avoid an accumulation of the tax percentage on small purchases. The law provides for a tax of 1 cent on every purchase from 6 to 50 cents, 2 cents on sales from 51 cents to $1 and 1 cent on each additional 50 cents or fraction thereof.

Sales of 5 cents or less are exempt, as are sales of all school books and fees for professional or personal services, as well as commodities taxed under previous laws, such as gasoline or utilit; services. The coupon books are issued in denominations of 50 cents and $1, for which the purchaser pays 51 cents and $1.02, respectively.

Banks found an unprecedented demand for pennies and as the day wore on a shortage of this coin was felt in various cities. The demand was so great that requests were sent to Washington for additional pennies.

All business owners of the State are required to make monthly reports on all sales and all taxes paid to Fred L. Fox, the State tax commissioner, at Charleston, or to district representatives of the State tax department. All have been instructed not to attempt to absorb the tax, which must be paid by the customer under the law.

Woodstock Volunteer Firemen Since 1929 Have Spent $20,000 for Hall and Engines

Depression days have been no barrier to members of the Woodstock (Va.) Fire Department who, since 1929, have erected a modern engine house and purchased two up-to-date pieces of fire-fighting equipment, with a total expenditure of about $20,000.

Ignored "Depression" and With Citizens' Help Have Kept Up to Date.

By C. B. Carr.

Woodstock, Va., April 2.—Members of the Woodstock Volunteer Fire Department do not believe in the depression. At least they do not realize that America has had one since 1929.

The firemen relate how during the past three years they have erected a new engine house and purchased up-to-date fire-fighting equipment at a cost of $20,000, all of which has been paid for except about $500.

In 1929, the site of the present engine house was occupied by an old frame building. Joseph B. Clower, sr., chief of the fire department, tells of the firemen's efforts in obtaining new quarters. With only the thought that the people of Woodstock and Shenandoah County would appreciate a fire department equipped at all times to save their property from flame, the firemen launched their expansion program.

Put up Brick Building.

A two-story brick building was first erected and then followed the purchase of two modern motor pieces of fire-fighting equipment. Chief Clower says the total expense was about $20,000 but, he adds, the firemen and citizens of Woodstock and Shenandoah Counties got busy and today practically all of the cost is paid.

The fire department is operated on a strictly business basis. Records are kept of all fire alarms answered. Incidentally, a new record for alarms was established this month when the firemen responded to seven calls. A record of attendance at all fires also is kept.

The local fire department is more than a century old, having been chartered when James Monroe was President of the United States. Among the first members were the scions of such pioneer Shenandoah Valley families as the Rinkers, Lovells, Crawfords, Magruders, Millers, Fravels and Clowers. In 1823, Capt. Jacob Rinker was elected the first president of the company. For the past 100 years, the people of Woodstock have considered it an honor to be a member of the fire company and such a spirit no doubt accounts for the community spirit which has made possible the growth of the department.

Members and Officers.

In addition to Chief Clower, the officers and members of the department include: Hunter Peer, first assistant chief; Luther G. Sheetz, second assistant chief; Paul B. Hottel, third assistant chief; Simon Wender, secretary; Harry Lambert, treasurer; Raleigh Rader, mechanical engineer and trustee; D. D. Davis and J. S. Chapman, trustees;

Poultry Group Benefits Price

10 Members in Toano Association Gain Higher Rating.

Toano, Va., April 2 (Spl.).—That size is no deterrent from ability to serve, is shown by the record of accomplishment of the Toano Poultry Association. Although this association now has only ten members, it serves those poultrymen effectively.

The association is able to sell the quality eggs produced by its members in Northern markets at prices sufficiently high to enable it to return them prices noticeably above the local market.

The Toano Poultry Association started shipping eggs to Northern markets in November, 1930. At that time it had 18 members and during the first year the shipments brought in approximately $20,000.

With the drop in egg prices occasioned by the curtailed consumer demand resulting from the depression and the relatively high cost of poultry feeds, the production of eggs has not been profitable and the members have curtailed their volume of production. Consequently the value of the annual sales of the association has recently averaged only about $10,000.

In addition to providing the members efficient marketing service, the Toano Poultry Association has been instrumental in obtaining a reduction in the cost of the egg cases.

Easter Dances Set This Week at U. V.

Series of Events to Get Under Way Wednesday.

Charlottesville, Va., April 2 (Spl.).—Easter dances at the University of Virginia will begin Wednesday night and will continue through the remainder of the week, with formal dances on Thursday and Friday evenings and an informal dance closing the festivities on Saturday.

The dances are being sponsored by the German Club and the PK Society. The two "ribbon societies" will have figures during the week. The T. I. L. K. A. figure is set for the opening dance on Wednesday night, the Eli Banana figure for Friday.

The Virginia Players will present their annual "Virginia Reel" three nights. As afternoon attractions, there will be a track meet with Dartmouth, baseball game with Vermont, William and Mary and Maryland, and tennis matches with Boston College and the Oakwood Club, of Lynchburg.

Hotel Greeters Plan Fredericksburg Dance

Fredericksburg, Va., April 2 (Spl.).—Members of Washington Chapter of the Hotel Greeters of America will attend a Greeters spring dinner dance here Saturday night.

C. A. Abbey, manager of the Princess Anne Hotel and member of the National board of governors of the Greeters, will turn the proceeds over to Chapter 31, to be used in entertaining delegates at the National convention at Baltimore May 25.

Vaughan Plays Christ In Pageant in Danville

Danville, Va., April 2 (Spl.).—A man who keeps a set of books at the Dan River Cotton Mills will play the role of Christ in the Biblical pageant tomorrow night.

He is Waddell Vaughan, prominent in Baptist affairs and head of the Baptist Young People's Union. He had been cast for a subsidiary role in the pageant, but was told today that he had been "selected" by the casting board.

300 Notables Attend Dinner For J. D. Baker

Frederick Banker Honored on 80th Birthday by All Maryland.

Frederick, Md., April 2 (Spl.).—More than 300 prominent persons from this city, other parts of Maryland, the District of Columbia and adjacent States gave a testimonial dinner to Joseph D. Baker, banker, philanthropist, churchman and outstanding citizen, in honor of his eightieth birthday at the Francis Scott Key Hotel tonight.

The subscribers, close friends of Mr. Baker, represented business, professional, industrial and religious life.

James H. Gambrill, former president of the Chamber of Commerce, was toastmaster. Speakers were Gov. Albert C. Ritchie, the Right Rev. Edward Trail Helfenstein, Baltimore, Episcopal Bishop of Maryland; David C. Winebrenner 3d, secretary of state, who read greetings from Daniel E. Willard, president of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad; Dr. Joseph H. Apple, president of Hood College; Hammond Urner, chief judge of the Frederick County Circuit Court and a member of the Court of Appeals, and the Rev. Dr. G. Ellis Williams, pastor of Calvary Methodist Episcopal Church and chairman of the dinner committee. Invocation was offered by the Rev. Dr. Henri L. G. Kieffer, pastor of the Reformed Church. Justin Lawrie, tenor, of Washington and New York, sang two solos. A poem by Folger Mckenzie Bentztown, formerly of this city, and benediction by the Rev. Douglas Hoff, rector of All Saints Episcopal Church, completed the program.

West Virginia Spreads Relief

Charleston, W. Va., April 2 (Spl.).—State relief headquarters announces the creation of six districts for the decentralization of its activities in carrying out the new relief program supplanting the Civil Works Administration.

The districts include the following counties:

First—Berkeley, Grant, Hampshire, Hardy, Jefferson, Mineral, Morgan, Pendleton, Randolph and Tucker, with headquarters at Romney; second—Greenbrier, Mercer, Monroe, Pocahontas, Summers, Webster and Nichols, with headquarters at Lewisburg; third—Boone, Fayette, Logan, Kanawha, McDowell, Mingo, Raleigh and Wyoming, with headquarters at Beckley; fourth—Cabell, Clay, Jackson, Mason, Putnam, Roane, Wayne and Lincoln, with headquarters at Huntington; fifth—Gilmer, Lewis, Braxton, Upshur, Doddridge, Calhoun, Ritchie, Tyler, Pleasants, Wirt and Wood, with headquarters at Weston; sixth—Barbour, Brooke, Hancock, Harrison, Marion, Marshall Monongalia, Ohio, Taylor, Preston and Wetzel, with headquarters at Fairmont.

State administrators are holding a series of conferences at these district headquarters this week with the various county administrators to speed the new program. Attention is being centered at the outset on the establishment of 100,000 subsistence gardens throughout the State.

Roanoke Votes Today to Fill 4 Council Jobs

Democratic Primary Race Conducted by 12 on Economy Issue.

Roanoke, Va., April 2 (Spl.).—In a Democratic primary tomorrow four candidates will be nominated for city council from a total of 12 aspirants, the largest number in many years.

The campaign has been conducted mostly on the issue of economy, following an alleged shortage of $50,000 uncovered in the office of city treasurer.

Three of the four candidates will serve four years and the fourth will fill out the term of Charles D. Fox, who accepted a job on the Board of Veterans Appeals in Washington. The candidate of the four successful ones who receives the smallest vote will fill out the short term.

The candidates are James A. Bear, former delegate; Charles M. Broun, former mayor; John G. Challice, Benton O. Dillard, C. D. Keffer, George V. Kromer, J. G. Leonard, John P. Mundy, William M. Powell, Oscar B. Saunders Sydney F. Small and H. Sterling Winn, chairman of the city Democratic committee.

Roanoke Reserves To Attend Meeting

THE flood of refined sugar being dumped into the United States today from the Philippines, Puerto Rico, Cuba, tells its own story of a commercial invasion throwing Americans out of work in ever-widening circles.

In 1933 alone, this increasing flood of refined cane sugar prevented the refiners of the United States from supplying the needs of 15,000,000 Americans. This has already resulted in a loss to Americans of a market within their own country equivalent to the annual consumption of sugar in the following 21 states: Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Rhode Island, Delaware, West Virginia, South Carolina, Mississippi, Florida, Arkansas, New Mexico, Arizona, Utah, Idaho, Nevada, Wyoming, North Dakota, South Dakota, Montana, Colorado, Oregon.

What this represents in loss of employment to American workers may be judged by the fact that 19 U. S. refineries between 1922 and 1931 spent $231,605,137 in salaries and wages. They pay out for materials and supplies, including coal, oil and power, approximately one billion dollars in a normal ten-year period, furnishing business for many industries and employment for many thousands of our people.

This condition is the result of a Government policy that inadvertently encourages the construction and operation of refineries in the Philippines, Puerto Rico and Cuba, which are tropical producers of raw sugar. The policy assumed that these tropical islands would not duplicate United States refineries. The assumption has proved to be wrong.

The United States is the only nation today that permits sugar refined in the tropics to enter in competition with its home refiners. All other countries protect their refining industries and safeguard their home market from duplication of refineries even in their own colonies. It is a universal policy.

The United States provides the world's greatest market for raw sugar. For 200 years it has developed the manufacturing industry of refining sugar to meet the needs of an expanding country, serving it in every emergency.

No country can surpass the United States in modernness, efficiency and sanitary cleanliness of its sugar refineries.

Since N. R. A., the refining costs of United States refiners have increased greatly. N. R. A. does not apply to Cuban refiners, who also escape certain processing taxes, and also benefit from tropical labor and also enjoy a subsidy in addition!

A very small group of tropical raw sugar producers now demand United States quotas for their refined sugar to make permanent the unfair position they have secured recently in the United States market—thus permanently displacing American workers and the refineries in which tens of thousands of Americans have invested.

We cannot believe it fair to America for Congress to permit this. It is certainly in the public interest to keep this great industry within our borders.

"Men are never so likely to settle a question rightly as when they discuss it freely."

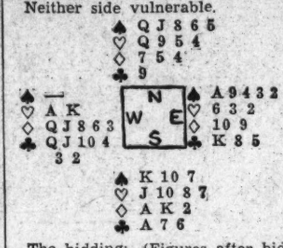
A Valuable Count.

I have written many times before about the value of getting a count on a hand. On the hand below Mr. Samuel Fry, jr., was able to fulfill a very difficult doubled game contract purely and simply because from the bidding and the early play, he was able to ascertain the exact distribution of the East and West hands.

North, Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.



The bidding: (Figures after bids refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1NT	2◇
Pass (1)	Pass	2♡ (2)	3♣
3♡	3♠	Dbl.	4♣
Pass	Pass	4♡ (3)	Dbl.
Pass	Pass	Pass

1—North quite properly, despite his good distribution, decides not to make a free bid at this point.
2—With more than a minimum notrump, Mr. Fry decides he must rebid. The heart suit, of course, is pretty bad, but since it was not bid originally, North can not be seriously misled and must know that the suit is shaded.
3—This is a very daring bid. From the bidding South has every reason to suspect that the adverse hearts will break badly. However, knowing that North can not have much outside honor strength, South has considerable reason to hope that North holds at least five trumps instead of just four.

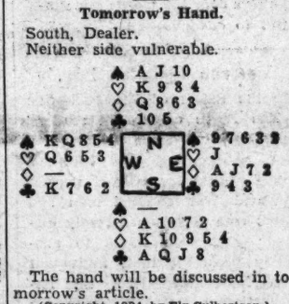
In the play of the hand West opened the Queen of clubs, which Mr. Fry won with the Ace in his own hand. He now led a low heart, West winning with the King and returning another club in order to shorten the Dummy—unquestionably the best defense. This club was trumped in Dummy, and the Queen of hearts led, which West won with the Ace. West promptly returned the third round of clubs, forcing Mr. Fry to ruff with Dummy's last trump. On this round of clubs East's King dropped.

At this point, from the fall of the cards and the previous bidding, Mr. Fry definitely decided that West's original distribution was 6-5-2. Accordingly, he led a low spade from Dummy, and when East played small, won with the Ten in his own hand; the fact that West not only showed out on this trick but failed to ruff confirmed Mr. Fry's count. The last trump was now drawn, and the Ace and King of diamonds were played out—the key play of the hand. By applying his count, Mr. Fry knew that East could hold only two diamonds, and that if those two diamonds were removed from the East hand, the East player would be deprived of his only defense.

Mr. Fry now played the King of spades, and when East quite properly again stayed off with the Ace, a third round of the suit was played. This time East won the trick with his Ace, and, since the Declarer had taken the necessary precaution of removing his two diamonds, had nothing left but spades to return and was forced to give the Declarer a valuable diamond discard on the Dummy's high spade. Thus the contract of four hearts was fulfilled with the loss of but two trump tricks and the Ace of spades.

Tomorrow's Hand.

South, Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.



The hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

Civil Service Status Sought By Pensioners

Legislative Retirement to Be Reconsidered by Senate Group.

Revision of the bill passed by the Senate last week to bring legislative employes under the Civil Service retirement act was forecast yesterday when Senator Kenneth D. McKellar (Democrat), Tennessee, moved for reconsideration of the measure.

Some old employes of Congress sought the revision because they believe the bill's provision would be onerous. The measure provides that old employes who are brought under the retirement law shall pay into the Treasury in a lump sum the amount they would have contributed through annuity deductions since the law became operative. In some cases the sum would approximate $1,400.

Senator McKellar said certain employes would be forced to retire because they have passed the age limit.

The bill will be sent back to committee for revision, McKellar said. He predicted a revised measure could be enacted before adjournment.

Blind Veterans Will Get First Compensation

Early Restoration Planned for This Group; Date of Checks Vague.

(Associated Press.)

Early restoration of compensation to blind veterans of the World War was announced by the Veterans Administration yesterday.

Planning to restore compensation in all cases possible without the necessity of an administrative review first, the agency explained that the blind men group was the only one on which decision has been reached.

Immediate attention also is being given to those groups of cases wherein a review of evidence is required before a determination as to compensation may be made under recent Congressional legislation. Adjudication of these with the least possible delay to the veterans and their dependents is sought.

The Veterans Administration said it expects the work of the Board of Veterans Appeals to be reduced as the result of new legislation, but that there is little likelihood the board will be discontinued. It was unable to tell when first checks would be distributed.

Persons who were removed from the rolls by reason of the economy act of March, 1933, and whose rights to benefits were reestablished by the new law are being given primary consideration.

The Sage Of Chinshih.

Saddened by the defeat of his army of revolt in Northwestern China, Gen. Sun Tien-Ying has left his 60,000 soldiers and retired into solitude at Chinshih for meditation and prayer. He follows the custom of defeated war lords of Cathay. Laying down his sword, divesting himself of his robes of war, he has found himself a voluntary St. Helena where he may ponder over the things he ought not to have done during his unsuccessful campaign of rebellion. His last words before he disappeared into hiding were "I need more education."

This, it would seem, is an ideal custom which we should borrow from the East. But it need not be confined to defeated war lords. All who lead armies, whether armed or of the mind, might do well occasionally to find a Chinshih where they would pull down the curtain on past defeats and brood upon the causes—and the consequences. We never knew a war lord yet who couldn't say, with Sun Tien-Ying, "I need more education." The only trouble is, they seldom say it.

For instead of meditating and praying, instead of getting more education, it is the custom of the Western warriors to write their reminiscences. And too many forests have fallen already to make books of such reminiscences. It is to be hoped that Sun Tien-Ying has not listened too well to the wiles of Western culture. Else we may some day get from Chinshih a book of recollections that would turn his defeat into victory, his meditations into mental meanderings, and his prayers into that form of self-justification which the reading public suffers with all too much indulgence.

Misguided Criticism.

Resigning employes of the Government frequently seize the opportunity to gain publicity for their views, especially if they are not shared by those in authority. Sometimes the criticisms of those preparing to retire to private life are illuminating and salutary, as was the case when Prof. Sprague tendered his resignation to the President. In other cases, such as that of Charles G. Wood, an employe of the Federal Conciliation Service, who has acted as mediator in various industrial disputes, the charges preferred receive a hearing they do not deserve.

Mr. Wood's letter of resignation, addressed to Secretary Perkins, maintains that the Secretary has permitted "avowed enemies of our Government who are conducting an alleged labor organization, affiliated with a foreign, un-American movement, to enjoy the same privileges as those legally granted to labor unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor." He objects, too, to the fact, that the power to deal with labor disputes is now divided among several Governmental agencies instead of being concentrated in the hands of the Secretary of Labor.

Obscure references to commerce with enemies of the Government need not be taken seriously in the absence of precise specification. But it should be noted that the Department of Labor is primarily concerned in improving the condition of all classes of workers, organized and unorganized, without regard to the character of their union affiliations. Furthermore, the establishment of self-governing agencies for settling industrial disputes, is a development that any adaptable and intelligent Secretary of Labor should welcome. The intimation that a rigid industrial authority should be concentrated in the Department of Labor, and jealously guarded against efforts at usurpation, reveals complete ignorance of the proper functions of that agency.

One of the most encouraging features of the recent settlement in the automobile industry is the fact that it places responsibility for keeping the peace very largely upon those immediately concerned. A Government department can not function effectively, either by persuasion or with the aid of the law, over the entire field of industrial relations. If Secretary Perkins imagined that such a colossal task was within her powers she would invite well-merited criticism for attempting to achieve the impossible. The Department can best serve the public, and increase its own prestige, by confining its activities to the fields in which it is equipped to be of service, extending guidance but keeping interference in employer-employes relationships to a minimum.

Easter Rabbit.

A magician was at the White House party yesterday, pulling rabbits out of a hat. Was this symbolism of a sort? Undoubtedly there was no such intention, but after all it is very easy for humanity to read symbolism into anything.

And so perhaps the rabbit-pulling magician might be considered as a symbol of the New Deal which has pulled innumerable alphabetical rabbits out of a hat, while the wide-eyed audience has looked on in wonder. But if the symbolism is carried further we see, even among children, a certain healthy skepticism—a realization that it is all done by a nimble wrist, and that the rabbit wasn't in the hat after all.

And then again the holiday season is one in which we are reminded that we are not so different from our children. Beyond a point there is surfeit in legerdemain.

The Next Constructive Step.

In his report for 1933 Alfred P. Sloan, jr., president of the General Motors Corporation, dates the beginning of business recovery from the middle of 1932, when, he says, "there appeared to be indications of improvement throughout the world, which improvement has been well augmented during the intervening time."

Mr. Sloan notes, however, that "the rate of improvement may be accelerated or retarded by injecting into the picture abnormal influences." Unquestionably one of the most formidable of the artificial obstacles to further advance is the Securities Act. The American Bar Association refers to the law as constituting a "brake on recovery," and the United States Chamber of Commerce in a report made public yesterday states that the act in its present form is "so severe and uncertain in its consequences as to be prohibitory to normal financial transactions."

With leading representatives of the bar and of industry urging that the act be amended in order to reopen the capital markets of the country to new financing, it can not be contended that its paralyzing effects have been exaggerated by investment bankers in order to obtain for themselves immunity from reasonable regulation needed in the public interest. Even if the groups that have joined their protests to those of the bankers are regarded as prejudiced advocates, the facts to which they call attention can not be lightly dismissed.

For instance, the United States Chamber of Commerce notes that during the five months following passage of the Securities Act only $67,000,000 of new corporate issues were floated as compared with $314,000,000 during the preceding seven months. Especially striking testimony to the repressive effects of the act is afforded by the more substantial totals for noncorporate offerings exempt from registration under the Securities Act. These issues—chiefly those of State and municipal governments—amounted to $309,000,000 during the last five months of 1933, compared with $363,000,000 during the first seven months of the year.

Further evidence that the inhibiting influence of the Securities Act, not the lack of a potential investment demand, prevents revival of the capital market is afforded by the excellent prices now obtainable for outstanding high-grade securities.

Revision of the Securities Act is an essential preliminary to a general revival of investment activity. That is equivalent to saying that in its present form the law presents a major obstacle to business recovery, because industries that produce capital goods are dependent upon investment buying to give employment to millions of workers directly and indirectly. An improvement in business, if confined to those industries that manufacture consumption goods, inevitably reaches a point at which further progress is blocked by the underemployment and underconsumption of workers connected with the heavy industries. If we wish to retain the benefits of partial improvement and assure a general industrial recovery that will provide employment for the millions still idle, public attention must focus on the stifling effects of the Securities Act in its present form.

Who Reads Mark Twain?

Everybody knows the difficulties Mark Twain encountered before he could persuade the over-cultured Eastern literary dictators to pay attention to the barbarian reporter from Missouri. But, although the literary critics ignored him and the editors toned him down, the great mass of readers succumbed easily to his lure, enjoying most those very qualities in his books that were withering to the hothouse flowers of literature.

As is so often the case with really earthy and human writers, Mark Twain had to die before a rousing literary quarrel was stirred up about him. He was considered either a writer of boys' books or an uncouth native until some time in the twenties when Van Wyck Brooks, who had previously exposed the Golden Age of American letters, wrote bitterly about the ordeal which Clemens had to undergo as a result of having been born in the wrong period of history. This biography was astute psychoanalysis of a personality far more complex than Twain's admirers would admit. Later Bernard DeVoto, himself a frontiersman pining away at Harvard, came arrogantly to Twain's defense and tried to roar Brooks and his book out of existence. In the meantime was Mark Twain himself being read?

A St. Louis librarian, Mr. Charles H. Compton, a Mark Twain lover who was annoyed by both Brooks and DeVoto's studies, has discovered from astute research in the public libraries of his own city, Newark, Chicago, New York, and Boston, that thousands of people today are enjoying Mark Twain as much as ever. Sixty per cent of the Mark Twain readers he counted were high school boys. In St. Louis he interviewed some 3,000 Twain addicts, ranging in occupation from messenger boys to motormen. As a result of this statistical survey he makes the flat statement that Mark Twain is the most widely read author in this country today.

Brooks, himself oversensitive to the harsh overtones of American life, felt that Twain had been thwarted by the adverse country in which he was born and of which he wrote, and by the inhibitions endowed upon him by a Puritanical wife. He felt that Twain never reached his full stature, because America wanted to laugh at him and would not let him cut into the core of things with the Swiftian satire that was his greatest gift. All this is poppycock, roared DeVoto. Mark Twain, he said, was great mainly because of the frontier country that nurtured him and whose voice he was. There is a case for the contentions of each, but Brooks probably got nearer the truth.

But the average reader, interested more in the books than in the man who wrote them, will probably believe the fairest criticism of Mark Twain is that made by an unemployed telegrapher quoted by Mr. Compton: "I like Mark Twain for his deep kindness, his understanding of humanity, his simplicity of writing, his ironical humor." That combination of good qualities would make any writer great.

Spring In The Far East.

For the past few months those who unofficially settle the world's problems over after-dinner coffee have dwelt at length on the anticipated clash between Japan and Russia. That the two nations were waiting only for the spring thaws to be at each other's throats has been the burden of much conversation.

Because a conflict between the two nations has been psychologically predestined in so many minds, any informed opinion from the opposite direction is a relief. Of such is a lengthy dispatch to the New York Times from its Moscow correspondent. He says that the feeling in diplomatic circles is that the war which had been predicted for spring "is not likely to come for many months," and that a critical period has been safely passed even though "almost no one here dares hope that war can be permanently avoided, because provocations for the conflict are deep and lasting."

A number of developments have affected the situation as it existed six months ago. Obviously one of the most important was our recognition of Russia. Moreover, Russia has lately been making exceedingly friendly gestures in the direction of the League of Nations. Last week, in refusing to take part in the session of the committee on nonrecognition of Manchukuo; the Moscow Government significantly said that the refusal was not to be taken as prejudicing "the larger question of membership in the League."

Coincident with these improvements in Russia's diplomatic situation has been the energetic drive to improve her military situation in the East. The Soviet Government is reported to have several hundred planes massed around Vladivostok, within 700 miles of Tokyo. The accidental fire which last week wiped out Hakodate is a grim reminder of what incendiary bombs could do to the flimsy buildings of a Japanese city. The double-tracking of the trans-Siberian road will be completed in six months, whereas Japan's railroad development program in Manchuria will require at least another year for completion.

Finally, political commentators see in recent Japanese gestures the expression of desire for peace—for the time being, at any rate. Among those gestures was Premier Hirota's statement that Japan is now ready to take up a nonaggression pact with Russia as soon as the Kamchatka fishing question and the Chinese-Eastern Railway question were out of the way. The Soviet Government regards these problems as of relatively little importance and is willing to make concessions. Certainly there has been progress since Japan sharply refused to consider a nonaggression pact some months ago.

Friendship's Fruits.

The ban placed by the Hitler government on grants to German education by the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace is not surprising. Education in understanding between nations is no part of the Nazi program. In sharp contrast to the German attitude is the anxiety of the Endowment to reach an agreement for the resumption of its work in Germany. The announced course of conciliation, and the tempered words of Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler in revealing the cessation of activities, together show a constructive attitude which does something more than heap coals of fire on Nazi heads.

For a number of years, prior to Hitler's triumph, the Carnegie Endowment had sponsored lectures at the Hochschule fuer Politik in Berlin, sending there many eminent scholars to speak on various phases of international relations. In 1929 a permanent chair was established at the school. Lectures continued until February, 1933, when Hitler assumed the Chancellorship. The school was then taken over by the Nazi government, on the ground that the teaching was contrary to nationalistic policy.

In his current report Dr. Butler wisely says that the contacts with Germany through the school have been too valuable to be surrendered permanently. He looks forward to their resumption under some form of cooperation acceptable to German public opinion. The value of the work of the foundation throughout the world has perhaps been best attested by the attacks made upon it by extreme Nationalists in every country, including our own. But it has quietly adhered to the long-range philosophy expressed by President Wilson in 1913 and now quoted by Dr. Butler: "Comprehension must be the soil in which shall grow all the fruits of friendship."

Rather than cease its efforts to comprehend Germany and to aid Germany in comprehending the rest of the world, the endowment hopes to resume its work in Berlin, even under Hitlerism. This is the sensible, the diplomatic way, of treating Nazi idiocies, provided no compromise with the high principles of scholastic freedom, for which the foundation has always stood, are sacrificed in order to secure an agreement with Hitler's strong-arm gang.

Laughs at Officers' Claims.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am a veteran of the World War; enlisted as a private, served in all the major engagements, reaching the rank of first lieutenant; and am amused by some of the letters you are printing from emergency officers complaining they are victims of discrimination.

If there is one class of pensioners in this country that should keep their mouths closed it is the emergency retired officer. During the war they got more pay than the enlisted men who did the dirty work; they enjoyed a preferred status because of their rank throughout the war, and when they came home, the fact that they had been officers won them much greater regard than the enlisted man. Then the American Legion went to bat for the emergency officers, represented to Congress that no more than 3,500 of them would be benefited if the bill the Legion sponsored was passed. It was passed and some 9,000 emergency officers got aboard the "gravy train": a nice quota of them holding down fat jobs in the Veterans' Bureau, the medicos denying compensation to real deserving enlisted men.

There never was any equity in the creation of a retired officer grade among soldiers of the World War serving for the emergency. The best an emergency officer did in the World War was to stand shoulder to shoulder with an enlisted man in the same trenches and receive the same wounds. If compensation for disability was to be awarded, it should have been awarded on an equal basis.

"Without Pay."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Apropos the recent order of Postmaster General Farley compelling all postal employes to take four days' furlough (without pay), I wish to state that that part of the economy bill states "The purpose of this provision is to avoid the dismissal of surplus employes." That is to say, that where a department is overmanned the department heads can furlough without pay to keep from dismissing junior employes.

Such a condition does not exist in the Postoffice Department today, because there are no clerks and carriers available to take the place of those on furlough. Did not the Postmaster General state that service must be curtailed to enable the employes to take this time off? He also orders all vacation time of employes called off until this furlough is ended. What about the rap the postoffice boys took last July-September of nine days without pay? What of getting 7½ days off and getting docked for 9 days? What of the conferences with President Green, of the American Federation of Labor, in which President Roosevelt gave assurance that the furloughs would be eliminated after last July, 1933?

What of postal employes promoted to supervisory positions and still getting clerk salary, less 15 per cent cut? What of the surplus of bosses who are drawing supervisor's pay?

"A Lesson From Maryland."

To the Editor of the Post—Sir: Referring to your editorial on "A Lesson From Maryland," it seems difficult to draw a lesson in religious tolerance from a State that denies its citizens the equal protection of the laws for religious reasons. A person wishing to affirm rather than swear to testimony may not be a witness in a Maryland court, for, under the Bill of Rights (sic!) of the Constitution, he must take oath to a belief in direct divine punishment for false testimony. Some people today must thus start telling the truth, if at all, by telling a falsehood!

Veteran Upholds Pay.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In The Post's column of readers' correspondence there appeared a letter condemning the Veterans' Administration for alleged neglect of World War enlisted men and officers who were too severely disabled by service origin to adequately prosecute their individual claims for compensation. The letter distinctly left the impression that the more gravely disabled soldiers, impotent physically and politically, were shuffled into the discard without sustenance or friends, kindliness or consideration, to lie thus in ignominy until death.

But, thanks to a comprehensive knowledge of duty and right which is predominant in our governmental officials in spite of certain instances of graft, political bickering and insincerity, the veterans who were wounded in battle of contracted diseases of service origin are being compensated; are being provided with medical and surgical services and are treated kindly and considerately by officials of the Administration. Undoubtedly there have been individual, isolated cases in which soldiers with just claims against the Government have been inadvertently made to suffer because of veteran ruling technicalities or the ignorance of an Administration employe in the adjudication of claims. Still, such instances as these do not warrant an indictment of the whole system.

As adjutant of a veterans' service organization in my home county, I have contacted men with practically all degrees of disability of service origin, and they declare that the compensation paid them is fair and adequate for their needs.

New Deal Economy.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Highly desirable though it would be to balance the budget and so protect the financial credit of the Government, yet when we note the reckless waste of the Government in huge bureaucratic activities it is difficult to understand the New Deal style of economy. So long as there are billions of easy money in big schemes to carry out dreams of the Brain Trust, we can hardly blame the veterans and ordinary servants of the Government for demanding more generous treatment for themselves. That is probably why few of those who a year ago would have asked Congress to sustain the President's veto would now not do so. Congress, sensing the changed temper of the people, was not afraid to override the veto.

Under the New Deal there are certainly fine openings for young lawyers with schemes for Government control and ownership over business and industry. But there are fewer jobs for the postmen who deliver our mail. The New Dealers of course point with pride to the many millions they are spending for power development in various parts of the country to chisel into the investments of its citizens and taxpayers. But they do not hesitate also to chisel into veterans and Government servants with wage and benefit cuts to help pay for their warfare on other classes of citizens.

Communism.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Nothing is more contemptible than Communists who seek to undermine our Government. Communists come to America and educate their children in our free American schools and take all the advantages America offers and then bite the hand that feeds them. They lack a sense of gratitude for the country that shelters them and gives them every chance for success. Fortunately most people are too appreciative to join the Communist organization. They realize that a country which gives them educational advantages and a land which gave their parents who came here as aliens a chance to secure financial independence deserves their undivided loyalty.

I shall never forget, when a small girl, my grandfather, who spoke only a few words of English, Welsh being his native togue, saying in his stumbling way, "Remember, my children and grandchildren, to never forget to be loyal to America, the land which gave us all we have today, and uphold and protect her laws and institutions against her enemies, the radicals." Today, when Communists are especially active in spreading their doctrine, isn't it time for law-abidng people to fight Communism every chance they get?

"Hanging by the Eyelids."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The country is in a bad fix, and the end is not yet. I can not find anybody with his feet on the ground. Everybody is "hanging by the eyelids" and no one seems to know what is coming next. In the past, many cried for beer, when they needed bread. We now have more beer and less bread. We have more whisky and more law violation, and taxes are higher. Our jails are full and our churches empty. We have more divorces and fewer marriages. We have fewer men at work and more without work. Our clothes are shabby and many are without shoes. We have more money invested in cars than we have invested in homes. We have little home life, just a place to sleep and we eat on the run. The budget is far more out of balance than one year ago.

It strikes me the most sensible thing for us to do is for the American people to come back to God, and for the patriotic rich widows and old maids to marry the homeless veterans and do their part in caring for the defenders of our country. This is the right and loyal step in balancing the budget.

A VETERAN CHURCH MEMBER.

Littered Streets.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I agree with Mr. McKenzie in thinking that Washington is far from a clean city. We haven't the grime of some cities, but, oh, the trash. What becomes of articles that one carrying them along our sidewalks wishes to dispose of; peanut shells, chewing gum wrappers, to say nothing of the gum itself, orange peels, banana skins, paper bags, newspapers, letters torn into bits, to mention a few? Aren't they deposited on these sidewalks or in the streets—does one ever hunt for a trash can for their disposal?

The untidy condition of the small parks on Pennsylvania avenue was called to my attention some years back by a visitor. The civic organizations of Washington are constantly endeavoring to bring to Washington people from other cities. Can't some of these organizations institute a drive to educate the citizens of Washington in the civic duty of making their city attractive for its cleanliness as well as for its beautiful buildings and broad tree-lined streets? The Post Impressionist

The Evil of "The Saloon Evil."

Postoffice, Tuesday.

We little knew what we were doing when we quoted that complaint of the Major about the presence of women in saloons. We had no idea of starting a controversy between him and Equal Rights people. All we wanted to do was to avoid trouble between him and ourselves—and we knew we could create that if we didn't print at least a part of what he said.

"Well, as you may recall, what he said was that the Post-Prohibition Saloon Evil Was Woman—Woman-In-The-Saloon: as a customer. He didn't want women there.

And now women are writing us about it. Half of them agree with the Major. Half of them violently do not. But all of them hold us personally responsible for his opinions.

* * * *

This has been rather hard. These correspondents would label their communications "Personal," so we couldn't show them to the Major, and yet they would expect a reply from us that would commit the writer to one side or the other of the quarrel, whereas we were resolved to maintain a strict and unarmed neutrality.

* * * *

You may therefore easily imagine our relief to receive a diatribe from a Washington lady who takes the braver and the better course. We almost said "the manly course."

This lady places all the blame of the unhappy contention where it rightly belongs: upon the broad shoulders of our ex-military friend. She emulates, though most politely, the attitude of the Iron Duke of Wellington when he told a feminine and threatening possessor of certain tender missives to "print and be damned." And she starts right out with the admonition:

"Anyhow, do show my letter to the Major!"

* * * *

We hesitated about showing him the whole text. The lady opens her playful attack by calling her opponent a cynic. However, she speedily reaches the meat of the argument without passing the drink of it.

She will have none of the Major's plea that saloons' acoustic properties should be explored solely by male voices: "By the time the boys get around to singing "Sweet Adeline," says she, "they have not only lost the sensitive ear—if they ever had one—but also their inhibitions."

* * * *

Then she continues:

"If questions of such vast importance as politics, religion, &c.—which affect the welfare of all the people—are to be debated and settled in that 'seat of learning' the saloon, then that is where women have more than an equal right to be. For," says she, "physically the woman is really the man in about a third part of the issues of life. More disconcerting still for the man, he is only man in relation to a third part of their common problems."

* * * *

There is the portion of the communication that we thought safest to show the Major. The issue was more academic there than elsewhere.

Now for his reply. We preface it by one lone reminder:

Our position is a position of complete impartiality.

* * * *

"The first thing your correspondent's arithmetic did," says the Major, "was to drive me to a calculation, and the calculation drove me to drink. Here's the riddle as I saw it:

"If the woman is the man in one-third of life, and if man is man in one-third of their common problems, then, who's what in the third third?

"I worried over this till nearly closing hour. Finally I showed it to one of the women customers. I said:

" 'Mebbie I'm dealing with fractions that haven't a common denominator.'

"She said: 'That sentence ends at the bottom of a page. Mebbie you ought to turn over the page.'

"So I turned over the page and there—though nobody would ever have guessed it—was a sort of explanation. Your Washington feminist explains: 'In the rest (of those common problems) both men and women are children, anyhow.'

* * * *

"But that's all aside from the main issue," the Major goes on. "The main issue is that the women who invade saloons aren't the kind of women who are intelligently interested in the things men want to discuss there. Even this woman whose letter you quote to me says:

" 'To religion, like all falsely constructed problems, there can be no answer.'

* * * *

"Problems!" echoes the Major. "I'm not going into the problem of what any 'falsely constructed problem' is. I don't want to know what a truly constructed problem would be. Anybody who's ever listened to any group of men discussing any metaphysical problem will have learned long ago that such problems are innate and not constructed at all.

* * * *

"But," the Major concludes, "let's assume, for the sake of argument, that this lady is right in this particular. Let's just assume that, and then you'll see how wrong she is fundamentally. If women think that 'there can be no answer' to these serious problems, then why do women want to take part in their discussion, either in a saloon or out of it?"

* * * *

That, as we said, is the Major's concluding query. It makes us more than ever content with having withheld from him certain portions of his critic's letter. For example, one of those suppressed portions ran as follows:

"Man is a cunning worm. His status as mere earthworm is painful, very painful. . . . I laugh at everything, with a few exceptions such as Laurel and Hardy, pie-slinging, and drunks."

Along the Potomac

With

Carlisle Bargeron

THE utter futility of the planned state becomes apparent, I think, when one realizes that after so many of the hazards of life are eliminated by laws and bureaus, so many other hazards will still remain. Now after the pitfalls of stock speculation, of real estate speculation, of overproduction of crops and overproduction of goods have all been removed, when the Tugwell bill has been enacted to prevent people from buying a herb-tinted water as a tuberculosis cure, when, by law and bureau, we are prevented from raising too many peanuts or from opening up an additional cleaning and pressing shop—after all this, there will remain other hazards which, one would think, would cause the planners to give up. But they won't.

BARGERON.

There is, for example, the hazard of the fizz bottle. I just learned about this hazard the other night while I was in conversation with a fellow who, I am sure, is learned in the matter of fizz bottles.

* * * * *

"Do you know," he asked as he nonchalantly squirted the contents of a fizz bottle into his highball glass, "that these darn things sometimes blow up?"

"No," I replied excitedly.

"Yes, sir," he continued. "I had a friend who had one of them do it. It cut his hand so badly that he wasn't able to hold a highball glass for several days."

Now, I had never known of this hazard before. I have never seen one of the things explode and of my own personal knowledge do not know of one having done so. But my friend assured me that he knew first-hand of an instance. The fact that he knew of an instance and I did not shows the sinister nature of this hazard, I think.

* * * *

It means that I have always approached fizz bottles with perfect confidence. Many's the time I have contemplated them, their majesty, their grace. I have even caressed them, fondled them and held them in my embrace. Manifestly I would have done none of this had I known as much about the things as my friend.

He was forewarned and being that, he was in no danger from a fizz bottle at all. In this wise he is like the fellow who is forewarned against the stock market. He knows how to approach it if he approaches it at all.

But our planners hold that laws and bureaus must be set up for those who are as ignorant of the dangers of market speculation as I was of those of the fizz bottle. Why then should there not be a law and a bureau for fizz bottles? There must be, in fact, if there is to be any pretense of a well rounded-out planning program.

* * * *

Even then we will not be anywhere near the end. It was only yesterday that I was coming down Connecticut avenue breathing of spring and flapping my wings. There stood at an intersection that fellow with the bronzed hue and the flowing locks who waves his cane friendly and grins at passing motorists.

You've all seen him, I know. Legend has it that he lives always in the open, winter or summer, rain or shine, and frequently poses for portraits of our Lord.

Well, you can imagine that if any of us are feeling our oats this time of the year he would surely be.

Here I was, though, doing nothing more than moving down the street, sprightly it is true, but on the sidewalk where one would think he had a perfect right to walk sprightly if he wants to. Nowhere, either to the right nor to the left, in front or to the rear, was there a hazard in sight. Insofar as walking down the street was concerned, I seemed assured of a long and gay life.

Yet what happened? Just as I got back of this fellow and paused to step down from the curb he raised his cane in salute to a passing motorist and in his zeal brought it across his shoulder and got me right on the head.

There ought to be a law and a bureau for that.

Howard Rock Named Irvington Postmaster

Business Good, Credit Easier, Jones Reports

Demand for RFC Loans Under Estimate; Car Loadings Gain.

(Associated Press.)

Business is better and credit is easier, Chairman Jones, of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, said yesterday, with the result that demand for Government loans is running well below expectations.

In fact, he added, bankers now are looking for good lending opportunities in contrast with the long period of stagnation in which primary emphasis was placed on caution.

Soon after Jones' talk, the Federal Reserve Board issued its weekly statement of the position of member banks in 91 leading cities, showing a $4,000,000 rise in loans other than those made on securities.

Furnishing a bright bit of detail for the general picture of improved business, freight loadings for the second quarter of the year were estimated yesterday by the 13 shippers' regional advisory boards at 10.7 per cent more than the same period of 1933.

After a survey dealing with 29 principal commodities, they forecast 4,367,725 carloads for April, May and June. Actual loadings for these months last year were 3,945,568. They predicted increases for 24 of the 29 commodities.

The principal increases were predicted for automobiles, agricultural implements, ore and concentrates, brick and clay products, cement, lumber, iron and steel, lime and plaster, gravel, sand and stone, and coal and coke.

With the unused lending power of $1,000,000,000 and a continuing large replayment of loans, Jones thought the RFC could finish the year without going to the Treasury for more money. He predicted the corporation's requirements would run $500,000,000 below budget estimates, which he attributed entirely to better business conditions.

Since January 1, he said, repayments have totaled $250,000,000, indicating a billion dollars for this source for the year as a whole. To April 1, the corporation had authorized the purchase of bank stock valued at $1,061,234,000, involving 6,452 banks. It has actually bought $593,578,000 worth from 2,697 institutions.

Later in the week, Jones plans to discuss with the banking committees of the House and Senate a plan for expediting the public works program. Under the proposal, the proportion of the cost of public works projects which must be advanced by States and municipalities—70 per cent—would be lent them by the RFC.

Hospitals' Pension Claims Are Tested

Supreme Court to Rule on Veterans' Demand.

The Supreme Court yesterday agreed to rule on whether Government hospitals are entitled to retain, from pension money paid veterans, charges for their board and clothing while the veterans are under treatment.

The suit was brought by Lewis Reynolds, a Spanish-American War and Philippine Insurrection veteran, who was committed to St. Elizabeths Hospital here in 1911 and discharged in 1930.

His pension money during that period, amounting to $4,036, had been paid to the superintendent of the hospital, who refused to return any part of it to the veteran at the time of his release. The superintendent reported $3,259 went for board and $777 for clothing.

Virginia Rum Lobbies Are Doomed to Failure

Norfolk, Va., April 2 (AP).—Distillers will find that the employment of prominent Virginians for political influence will bring them no favors from the Virginia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, Maj. S. Heth Tyler, chairman, said last night.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips.

WHAT? NO TOOTHBRUSH?

(Dentists in a convention in New York heard papers read asserting that regular brushing of the teeth does not prevent decay, and that keeping one's teeth is a matter of vitamins, food and protective bacteria. The Eskimo, speakers said, never brushed his teeth and yet had good teeth."—News item.)

Play mournful music, smooth my brow
I'm disillusioned, flattened, sad;
For years I've brushed my teeth, and now
Some experts say it's all a fad!

Oh, how I've scrubbed and scrubbed and scrubbed
With brushes of each shape and mold!
Oh, how my tender gums I've rubbed!
And it was all in vain, I'm told!

And scrubbed them then the other way—
And now I hear the proof is slight
That such intensive scrubbings pay!

I brought ten thousand kinds of paste
And all the dentrifrices known—
And now I hear it's all a waste
Of time to strive for dental tone.

The brushes I have pushed and plied
Inside my face would fill a truck—
And now grave experts say with pride
That teeth are saved by food and luck!

I scrubbed for years my teeth and gums
So teeth would not fall out kerplunk!
And now unheralded there comes
A proclamation it's the bunk!

It's what I eat, I now am told,
That keeps a tooth alive and fit,
For vitamins (served hot or cold)
And little bugs attend to it.

You never see an Eskimo
With toothbrush on an icy hill,
They say, and yet they never go
To town to pay a dentist bill.

The Eskimo he buys no paste,
The Eskimo he buys no brush—
He doesn't keep his molars chaste
Yet good teeth seem to grace his "mush."

No bristles in his mouth he finds,
Nor swallows 'em to his distress;
He doesn't know of eighty kinds
Of prophylactic "dentifress."

L'ENVOI.

The Eskimo he doesn't scrub
But here, oh doctor, is the rub—
Who wants to be an Eskimo?

SHARES, MISTER, NOT PLATES.

This talk about a stock exchange bill with teeth in it already has some of us phoning the broker and absent-mindedly asking if the market is "upper or lower" today.

The New York Legislature is considering legalizing betting on horse races, and this department is flooded with inquiries as to what the difference would be when the tracks open again for the season. It's very simple. In other years if you were at a track and wanted to bet on a horse, you walked up to a man and placed your bet. With betting made legal it's like this: You walk up to a man and place your bet.

Air-Conditioners Added to Trains

Seaboard Line Equips 2 Florida Flyers.

Air conditioning on two of its crack trains, the Southern States Special and the New York-Florida Limited, was announced yesterday by the Seaboard Air Line Railway.

Both run between New York, Washington, Richmond, Norfolk, the Carolinas, Atlanta, Birmingham and Florida. The change will be effective this month, officials asserted. The air conditioning will keep the temperature moderate throughout the summer. An all-year schedule is maintained.

Last winter the Seaboard inaugurated the first air-conditioned service in the South on the famous winter-schedule train, the Orange Blossom Special.

The Seaboard is planning to exhibit the trains at terminals where it can be arranged, in order to acquaint the public with its travel innovation.

Swanson Praises Heroic Officer

Lieut. W. L. Wright Saved Man From Drowning.

Lieut. William L. Wright, of Corpus Christi, Tex., now under instruction at the Marine Corps school in Quantico, Va., yesterday received a letter of praise from Secretary of the Navy Swanson for the courage he displayed in saving Howard E. Bridgeforth, a fellow officer, who was drowning in Nipe Bay, Cuba, last November.

"It is noted from a report of the commanding officer, U. S. S. Tillman," said the letter, "that on November 28, 1933, in Nipe Bay, Cuba, you dived overboard from the U. S. S. Tillman and rescued from drowning Howard E. Bridgeforth, and although a strong tide was running, supported him until further rescue could be effected."

The letter further added that the department desired to commend Lieut. Wright for his "prompt and intelligent action in this instance."

Principal of Chester High School, 1894-98, later becoming register of probate and deputy clerk of the U. S. District Court. Member of Vermont House of Representatives and State Senate. Member Sixty-eighth to Seventy-second Congresses (1923-1933) until appointed to Senate last November to fill vacancy left by the death of Senator Porter H. Gale. Rose to rank of colonel in Vermont National Guard, later serving on the Mexican border and overseas. Chairman of House District Committee sponsoring bills that later became laws, among them one for revision of local licenses. Though an old guard Republican, retiring and seldom given to speech, he deserted his colleagues recently and voted for the Waterway Treaty, thus fooling most political prognosticators.

Fable Concerning Men Who Had Different Grades to Make

By Robert Quillen

In a certain city far away lived two men who had almost nothing in common. One was named Bill Jones and the other Harold Van Rassler.

Bill was a bricklayer. He worked hard, when there was work to be done; paid his debts, carried a little life insurance and somehow contrived to feed and clothe his wife and five children.

He had some pride and allowed nobody to run over him, but he realized he didn't amount to much.

Harold was a gentleman and an aristocrat. He never had worked, for his ancestors had accumulated great fortunes and he had inherited much more than he needed.

He, also, was proud, and doubtless had reason to be. His standards were high. He believed that no gentleman should lie or steal or do anything dishonorable, and his conduct matched his beliefs.

They were, as you see, very decent fellows, and they lived their allotted time and died within the same hour, and so stood together before the Pearly Gates to learn what fate awaited them.

"Good morning, Harold," said the Gate Keeper. "Howdy, Bill. Glad to see both of you."

He summoned an angel messenger and said: "Take Harold in and find him a place among the Number Fours. He has been a nice boy and we must give him a chance to show what is in him."

Then he turned to Bill and held out both hands. "Old man," said he, "it is great to see you up here. You have done mighty well."

Bill looked scared. "I'm afraid you have us mixed up," said he. "I'm just Bill Jones, the bricklayer, and I've done wrong. When I was a kid I stole watermelons and lied to dodge a licking, and——"

"I know," said the Gate Keeper. "You also lied on three occasions when you had broken things and knew you would lose your job if you told the truth. That was bad, Bill. And that time you were out of a job and your wife needed an operation, you might have been a thief if luck hadn't saved you."

Bill hung his head. "I was desperate," he whispered.

"I know," said the Gate Keeper. "It's a hard world. Well, here's your crown. Tell Jimmie to find you a place with the Number Ones."

"But how can I rank above Van Rassler?" asked Bill. "He was above dishonor of every kind."

"So he was," the Gate Keeper agreed. "But you can't test a man's honesty by giving him everything he wants."

Mrs. Roosevelt Scoffs at Wirt Revolt Charge

"Oppression or Real Want Causes Rebellions," Says First Lady.

There is little danger of revolution with bloodshed when the people have an opportunity to register their desires in a peaceful manner, Mrs. Roosevelt said yesterday.

"Oppression or real want" causes revolutions, she said.

Mrs. Roosevelt made these statements in answer to questions concerning the assertions of Dr. William A. Wirt, of Gary, Ind., that some members of the "brain trust" told him they wanted to overthrow the Government and that President Roosevelt was only the "Kerensky" of the revolution.

Asked if she could be described as "Mrs. Kerensky," Mrs. Roosevelt said:

"Who knows exactly where Kerensky's family is now? It is curious and interesting how in history just one figure counts. Families disappear like a leaf in the wind."

Mrs. Roosevelt read to reporters a parody called "Little Orphan Annie of the New Deal," written by H. I. Phillips and published in The Washington Post. In it Phillips takes the position Dr. Wirt is seeing "goblin."

Commenting on a recent statement that 1,500 New York school teachers are insane, Mrs. Roosevelt quoted the old story which ends, "Everybody's queer but me and thee, and sometimes methinks even thee is a little bit queer."

Senate Measure Provides Army Officer Be Replaced.

Appointment of a third civilian resident of the District in place of the Army officer who serves as Engineer Commissioner under the present law is provided for in a bill introduced in the Senate yesterday by Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, chairman of the Senate District Committee.

The office of coroner would be abolished and a medical examiner system, similar to that now in effect in New York, provided for in another measure introduced by Senator King.

Thirteenth street northwest would be widened to 60 feet between Monroe street and Spring road and the name of Four-and-a-half street southwest would be changed to Fourth street under provisions of other measures introduced by the committee chairman. All measures were referred to the committee.

Stepchildren of Federal employes in Washington and of Army and Navy officers on duty here would be permitted to attend District public schools without payment of tuition under a measure introduced by Senator David A. Reed (Republican), of Pennsylvania.

Gertrude Stein and Her "Four Saints."

This opera, with the music by Virgil Thomson, had its first American performance in Hartford, Conn., in February. It has since been brought to New York, and made a sensational success. The music seems to have given great satisfaction and the Negro cast delighted the audience. It was a shrewd move to play up in the advertising and advance notices the name of Gertrude Stein as author of the libretto; for she is an international curiosity.

But if Virgil Thomson had set his musical score to the city directory or to a department store catalogue, it would have received and deserved the same success that it obtained with the meaningless repetitions of Gertrude Stein.

The difficulty with her libretto is that it makes no sense of any kind and that its nonsense is dreary and dull. Brilliant nonsense—like that of "Alice in Wonderland"—has a higher literary value than the majority of very sensible sentences. But Gertrude Stein's vain repetitions do not exhibit any method in her madness; they exhibit only madness in her method.

Some one has said that it makes no difference in what language an opera is sung, because the audience do not hear the words anyhow. But, according to John Mason Brown, the audience at "Four Saints" were often unfortunate enough to hear the actual language, the hearing of which took away much of the pleasure of the evening. There is no use attempting to attach significance to such drivel. It is, alas, true that if anyone speaks nonsense with portentous solemnity, there are many who will believe it to be far more important than anything they can understand. You will remember George Ade's fable of the pulpit orator.

It was Oscar Wilde, I think, who said that in a temple everyone should be serious except the object that is worshiped.

Last year Gertrude Stein wrote a book called "The Autobiography of Alice B. Toklas," which is one of the most entertaining and instructive works I have read in years. She showed that she could write intelligibly when she wished to do so. Was it because she had something to say?

Horse Owners Urged to Join Cherry Parade

Plans Pushed for Festival April 19-21; Embassies Scheduled Floats.

Plans were pushed rapidly yesterday for Washington's first cherry blossom festival, scheduled April 19, 20 and 21.

A special meeting of the parade committee, headed by Maj. Gen. Amos A. Fries, U. S. A., retired, will be held at the Occidental Hotel today at 12:15 p. m.

A call was issued yesterday for experienced men and women horseback riders who can furnish their own mounts, to participate in a special feature of the parade—the Colonial Troop.

In colonial costumes, the riders will lead the marchers and floats. Dr. F. Thomas Evans, chairman of the special mounted unit, also issued call for about 10 piccolo, fife and flute players.

Led by the Japanese, various embassies are preparing their floats, which will depict the ideals of the respective countries. Numerous commercial houses and civic groups also have promised to enter floats.

Miss Eleanor Roosevelt, daughter of the Assistant Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Henry L. Roosevelt, chosen queen of the cherry blossoms, today will select eight attendants for her court of honor.

Mortgage Bill Up Tomorrow

King Plan to Be Aired by Sub-Committee; Usury Meeting Deferred.

Hearings on the King bill setting up new court procedure in foreclosure of mortgages will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow in the Senate District Committee room in the Capitol, Senator Millard Tydings (Democrat), Maryland, announced yesterday.

Senator Tydings is chairman of the sub-committee to which the measure was referred. Senator Arthur Capper (Republican), Kansas, ranking minority member of the committee, is the Republican member of the sub-committee.

Hearings which had been fixed for 10 a. m. today on the usury bill have been postponed until 10 a. m. April 10, annbunces Senator Robert R. Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, chairman of the sub-committee in charge.

Morgan and Warburg Attend Kahn Funeral

New York, April 2 (AP).—Otto Kahn, banker and art patron, who died in his office last Thursday, was buried at Jones Memorial Cemetery on Long Island today after private funeral services at his Cold Spring Harbor estate.

J. P. Morgan, Col. Theodore Roosevelt and Felix Warburg attended the services, which were conducted by the Rev. Dr. Samuel H. Goldenson, of Temple Emanue-el.

No End of Books

By Theodore Hall

FAR too many eager spirits have been looking at the merits of certain modern poets as the crowd looked at the emperor's new clothes. "How beautiful, how great!" they exclaim as they lift their eyes from the work, say, of Ezra Pound, T. S. Eliot and Richard Aldington. Then, you remember in Hans Christian Andersen's fairy tale, a child spoke up: "Why, he hasn't anything on!" Then only did everyone see the emperor was naked.

I make haste to say, in this parable, that Mr. John Sparrow is no slip of a child. His little book, "Sense and Poetry" (Yale University Press, $2), is far other than artless lisping. Yet he makes us see, with that same flat and ruthless truth, that a number of our more famous poets are conspicuously shorn of anything which makes poetry beautiful and pleasing.

THEO. HALL.

Mr. Sparrow is very canny about the process. He avoids the error of criticizing the emperor for not dressing like Wordsworth or Tennyson. He does not say the emperor should have put on a gown of logical homespun, when it is evident that the emperor's clothes were aimed at the farthest removed from coherent and understandable meaning. He says merely that the result is ugly and undistinguished, a futile exposure of the poor poetic ego. Which is enough.

* * * *

The book is a short, lively, urbane and informed attack on those creeds of modern poetry and poetic criticism which have brought about such a confusion of value. Mr. Sparrow treads softly and carries a big stick. When he says of a much admired sequence from Pound's "Mauberley II" that it is "redeemed from the commonplace only by two peculiarities: it is peculiarly pretentious and it is peculiarly cheap," or of a characteristic poem from Mr. Eliot that it is "cultivated nonsense," we are at first a little shocked by such lese majeste and then we agree whole-heartedly.

I have picked two of Mr. Sparrow's more violent epithets; they do not set the tone of the book. For he is deceptively gentle while he points out what happens to poetry when it discards the effort to communicate intelligibly, when it indulges in purely personal symbols, when it leaps from topic to topic with the vagaries of the subconscious or of random thought. All through the book this quiet delving into the theories behind the poet goes hand in hand with good humor.

At times this latter is rather impish, as when he points out, in the shadow of Mr. Pounds' great reputation for linguistic learning, three misaccented Greek words out of four in a certain line.

But the result, even aside from his outspoken comment on several specimens, is devastating. No one can read this excellent little study without feeling a fresh breeze which blows away the stuffiness of certain idolatries. Mr. Sparrow's comments are precisely what is needed if modern literature is to keep its head. The really astonishing thing is that it was so easy to do—which was what the crowd must have thought after the child spoke up.

* * * *

Let me recommend George Seldes' "The Vatican: Yesterday, Today, and Tomorrow" (Harper, $3.75). Mr. Seldes, author of "You Can't Print That," has got into hot water as often as a soup spoon. But he won't over this book, an unbiased and thoroughly interesting account of the Roman Catholic Church down to modern times. You'll enjoy the chapter on the Index of Prohibited Books and that on the Pope vs. Mussolini.

* * * *

I've also been reading Jack Conroys' "The Disinherited" (Covici-Friede, $2.) which came out last year. No novel on the trials of the poor, and the unemployed has seemed to me so authentic and moving. It is a terrible document, written from the inside without an ounce of pretense. Mr. Conroy has the skill to do it justice.

* * * *

Dorothy L. Sayers, usually so sensible, got into some ancient books on the art of bell-ringing and went slightly batty. Her latest mystery story, "The Nine Tailors" (Harcourt Brace, $2.), is larded thick with such technical mottoes as "Let the bell that the treble turns from behind make third place, and return behind again." The whole scheme of the book, in fact, is based on such niceties of change-ringing. Even two typewritten pages of explanation, which the publishers send out to reviewers, fail to make things clear. I think it a bit thick, and itch for a blue pencil.

When it is possible to discern Lord Wimsey working on a murder and jewel robbery case under all this, we find a good yarn. The atmosphere of the marshes of East Anglia is especially effective.

But all this talk of "Triples" and "Grandsires" and "Plain Bobs" and "Kent Treble Mob Majors" leaves me rather more than confused. I didnt go to Groton or Kent School or the Perkins Institute for the Blind, which are the only places in the country where bells are rung with this antiquarian art.

U. S. Prepares To Pay Billion In Liberty Loan

Procedure Is Kept Secret; $2,000,000,000 Held in Ready Cash.

(Associated Press.)

Springtime brings a billon dollar financing job to the Treasury. Secretary Morgenthau, back yesterday from an Easter vacation, studied plans made by expert assistants for retiring on April 15 a billion dollars worth of Fourth Liberty Loan bonds which have been called.

What his advisers recommended was kept secret, but recently slackened spending made it doubtful that the Treasury would seek to increase its present huge cash balance. Nor was there a hint of any but orthodox borrowing methods.

Excluding the $2,810,000,000 profit on dollar devaluation, the Treasury still has more than $2,000,000,000 in ready cash.

No Great Need for Funds.

Further, its action in holding March financing strictly to an exchange of $460,000,000 in maturities gave evidence of no great need for additional funds in the immediate future.

On the basis of recovery spending in February and March, the $2,000,000,000 cash balance would easily provide for April, May and June spending.

Administration leaders foresee a rapid advance in public works spending as the weather improves. But they concede that with $2,900,000,000 spent for recovery in nine months of the fiscal year, the budget estimate of more than $7,000,000,000 for these purposes will not be reached by June 30.

Short Money Cheap.

These considerations made some officials consider it unwise to borrow in excess of the April maturity and needlessly increase interest costs on the public debt.

Another factor in the borrowing program is the extreme cheapness of money obtained in 90-day bills which are sold to highest bidders. On the last issue, only 0.08 per cent was paid for a three-month loan of $50,000,000 and only 0.19 for a six-month loan of the same amount.

Some Treasury experts believe the path of Government economy has turned away from a major long-term borrowing.

H. Isaiah Smith Given West Virginia Tax Job

Charleston, W. Va., April 2 (Spl.). Transfer of H. Isaiah Smith, chief clerk in the State Treasurer's office to the State tax department is announced by Fred L. Fox, State tax commissioner.

He will fill a vacancy caused by the recent resignation of B. W. Calder as head of the income tax division. Smith will have general supervision of the collection of the gross sales, income, consumers' sales, gasoline, beer and chain store taxes.

His 'Busted' Popgun Only Worry of Boy Turning Into Stone

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., April 2 (AP).—Little Benny Hendrick, who doesn't know why everybody's so nice to him, looked wistfully from a hospital window today—his only worry, the shiny new popgun that fell on the floor and "busted."

Benny, whose body is slowly turning to "stone," doesn't know that specialists are seeking, day by day a cure for the rare malady.

Dr. George B. Dorff, endocrinologist, arrived from New York to see the 7-year-old lad. Dr. Dorff's volunteered aid was taken under consideration by attending physicians. The New York specialist said that if the malady has reached an advanced stage, there is but faint hope for Benny's life.

In another room, not far from Benny's, doctors talked quietly of the boy's strange case. The malady is progressive myositis ossifica, a disease that gradually petrifies the body through misdirected deposits of calcium.

Chest Speaker Lauds Agencies

Dr. L. J. Shehan Asserts Private Charity Best in Some Cases.

Certain types of social welfare work, although provided for in the Washington program, are best carried out by private agencies, especially those of a religious character, Dr. Laurence J. Shehan, assistant director of the Catholic Charities, said yesterday.

Dr. Shehan, presented by Elwood Street, director of the Community Chest, spoke on the Community Forum hour.

The types to which he referred as the "legitimate responsibility of the private agencies," were health and recreation work. He said the same idea could hold "doubly true in the spheres of family welfare and child care."

Dr. Shehan stated the public agency had been overwhelmed by the number of cases, and could be relieved of part of its work by private agencies. Such agencies, according to the speaker, were best fitted to handle cases where unemployment or poverty are not the major problems.

Hagerstown Kiwanis Plan Ladies Night

Hagerstown, Md., April 2 (Spl.).—The Hagerstown Kiwanis Club will stage a ladies' night in the form of an informal cabaret Thursday and will have as speaker David C. Winebrenner 3d, secretary of state. Edgar Jones, president, will be toastmaster.

The Hagerstown Monarch Club will hold a "Ladies' Night" April 23.

Support Urged For Recreation By Mrs. Coffin

National Association's Aid to Playgrounds Emphasized.

It is the duty of Americans to see to it that no scars of the depression are left on today's children, Mrs. Philip O. Coffin told Washingtonians yesterday in a letter written in behalf of the National Recreation Association, of which she is District sponsor.

"There is a very good reason for maintaining support of the National Recreation Association," stated Mrs. Coffin. "The association is helping to maintain as much as possible of the playground and recreation movement during these times. Many volunteers, including unemployed persons, have been trained and have been used to keep playgrounds open."

The association, formerly known as the Playground and Recreation Association of America, was founded in 1906 by Luther Halsey Gulick and Henry S. Curtis.

Directors include Mrs. Thomas A. Edison, Dr. John H. Finley, associate editor of the New York Times; Frederick M. Warburg, of New York, and Robert Garrett, of Baltimore. Joseph Lee, of Boston, is president.

Annually the association serves more than 400 cities through its field representatives. Through correspondence and consultation service it gives information on recreational questions in 5,800 towns. Just now it is centering on promotion of community provision for sports, drama, music, crafts and other recreation activities that will help sustain public morale.

Radio Waves and Ripples

MUCH may be expected of a radio editor if he be caught young. Washington's talented array of radio commentators and one very caustic critic among them given to sidecars and prognosticative accuracy were the guests of C. B. S. over the week-end on an expedition to New York's night spots.

After viewing the rolling countryside from a Pennsy drawing room, they alighted in the big town and after coaxing some ruffian cab drivers into service ploughed their way through torrents of rain and were duly deposited and called for room service. Bright lights glistened to one member of the party for the first time. So cab windows were opened, allowing him to drink in flashing electric displays on the wicked street of riotous bacchanalia and honky-tonk.

The main event was the awarding of Columbia's medal for outstanding radio achievement to Admiral Byrd, locked up with his fellows in the icy snows of Little America in Antarctica. By this time local radio scribes were bulging with dignity in evening dress and seated in the first row they looked down at the stage while a breezy announcer figuratively patted Admiral Byrd on the back, a symphony orchestra played Easter music and moving pictures were shown of Byrd's first expedition to the Antarctic.

Later the party gathered at a long table in one of the more colorful spots on Broadway where beneath mellow rosy lights they watched the brisk routines of a floor show. In particular one member of the party, who writes distinguished radio comments up on New York avenue, sat chin in hand with his eyes glued, transfixed and focused on the hot steppers dancing by him in one mad phantasmagorical rout.

Awaking to the pleasant sound of Easter chimes the next morning, the party continued to see the city and one by one took reluctant steps to Penn station. Drowsing on the train the doughty crew of radio scribes saw more phantoms flitting by . . . visions of top hats on Park Avenue at St. Bartholomew's . . . waiters balancing "stuff" . . . the roar of elevated trains merged with police whistles and a chamber maid mopping up the entrance lobby of a hotel.

'Twas all glorious and mad and now we will have to reach in the drawer and see what the handouts have to offer . . . here's a symphony orchestra program . . . sweet, sweet symphony of sleep.

* * * *

YOUR scribe is not steeped in such current bits of traditional Washingtoniana as the toddlers' annual egg rolling spree conducted for the benefit of the mutitude, the dairy trust and impish-faced youngsters on the White House lawn.

The first greensward of the land has thus played host to eggs and bright little lads and lassies since the mansard and brownstone days of President James A. Garfield . . . barring, of course, the war years.

Yesterday . . . as you will read on the front pages . . . "Buzzie" and "Sistie" Dall, grandchildren of the President, skipped out on the lawn, put eggs through their paces, kicked their heels and would have eaten too much candy just like all the other children had not their mother, Mrs. Anna Roosevelt Dall, restrained them.

Microphones from N. B. C. were picking up the high spots of this glorious field day attended by some 10,000 children and adult guardians. While animated animals writhed and stared fiercely with their glass eyes, kiddies yelled, shouted, clapped their hands and then remembered their good manners as watchful mothers looked on and inhaled tea. Buzzie and Sistie couldn't be coaxed near the microphone as those fierce animals intrigued them more. But Mrs. Roosevelt in her very gracious way spoke words of greeting, wishing all youngsters listening in as good a time as was being had at that moment by all the laughing kiddies here.

Sir W. S. Gilbert, author of many a lilting lyric immortalized in the famous operettas which he wrote with Sir Arthur Sullivan, tells us in "H. M. S. Pinafore" that "love levels all ranks" . . . allowing a lowly sailor to pay court to the captain's daughter. So yesterday eggs did some "leveling," drawing together children from homes of the rich and poor alike. As usual adults stared with insatiable and open-mouthed curiosity at members of the First Family. And a number of tattered youngsters with charming dirty faces lingered wistfully at the gates wishing that they "belonged."

Some of them accosted grown-ups and asked to be taken in . . . for which service women were expected to pay a small fee. Of course they took many youngsters in this way. What are a few coppers where the happiness of a wide-eyed little boy is concerned.

LUSTY, gusty and smacking of foaming tankards held defiantly aloft are the rousing ballads of Reginald De Koven, whose favorite opera, "Robin Hood," is sung wherever there is a barytone whose lungs can make the top notes of "Brown October Ale."

Reinald Werrenrath's rich, mellow voice has often warmed the hearts of his fellows when he sings "And it's will ye quaff with me, my lads." Lovers of De Koven may hear a gala half-hour of this composer's melodies at 10:30 o'clock tonight over an N. B. C. network.

The program is given in celebration of the great American composer's birth. An orchestra and group of soloists will present the introduction and opening chorus from Act 1 of "Robin Hood." Earl Waldo, bass, will sing the turnkey's song from "Rob Roy." Carol Deis, soprano; Fred Hufsmith, tenor, and a mixed chorus will be heard in "Wild Bird" from the "Fencing Master," and the entire ensemble will conclude with the finale to Act 1 of "The Centerbury Pilgrims."

As a special feature of the broadcast Mrs. Ethel De Koven Hudson, daughter of the composer, will be interviewed by William Lundell, N. B. C. announcer.

JOHN CHARLES THOMAS (right) and NICK LUCAS, two popular exponents of the singing art. A current sensation with the Metropolitan Opera in New York. Thomas, one of America's celebrated barytones, is heard Wednesdays at 9:30 p. m. over an N. B. chain. Now Nick Lucas doesn't mind being called a crooner . . . which he is, and as "The Crooning Troubadour," he is heard in his own program over a Columbia network Wednesdays at 11 p. m. and Fridays at 6:30 p. m. This is making neighbors of Grand Opera and a crooner . . . but it's all in the name of art.

Whitecaps.

From the offices of WMAL comes the news that Lucille Pierce Ferguson, popular concert pianist and composer, is taking an immediate vacation of two months in anticipation of a blessed event. Mrs. Ferguson is the composer of theme songs for the "Pageant of Melody" program heard over WRC on Mondays at 8:30 a. m.

One of those local scribes who trekked to New York was listening to Waring's Pennsylvanians during a C. B. S. studio program. In presenting a medal to the orchestra the master of ceremonies declared that Fred Waring's music had reached the quintessence of radio dance harmony.

The scribe, enthralled with the music, came to after hearing the presentation speech and said:

"Gee! All the time I thought it was a trio and now he says it's a quintessence!"

"Let me tell you what it will cost to heat your home with GAS"

ARE YOU one of those who know that Automatic GAS HEATING is best, but who think it is too expensive? Thousands of people in Washington are convinced that GAS HEATING is ideal, but needlessly deprive themselves of its benefits because of a mistaken belief about cost. There is only one way to find out accurately what it will cost in your home—and without obligation or expense to you.

R. S. Agee, head of a corps of specially trained men who have estimated the cost in thousands of local homes, is anxious to give you this information, whether you are seriously considering automatic gas heating now or not. Estimates are scientifically based on actual radiation, insulation, glass area, and other conditions which are individual to each and every home. Many people too, have discovered that the survey necessary for a gas heating estimate has given them valuable hints on their present method of heating. You are entitled to know the facts about this modern method of heating in your own home, and so we urge you to let us tell you NOW!

First Lady Is Hostess To Children

Egg-Rolling Fiesta Opens Busy Post-Easter Week for Her.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Easter Monday, always a busy day at the White House, was more than usually so yesterday.

Mrs. Roosevelt appeared on the south portico as soon as the hundreds of boys and girls began to assemble in the morning on the White House lawns for the annual egg-rolling, and with her daughter, Mrs. Curtis Dall, and Mrs. Dall's two small children, Anna Eleanor Dall and Curtis Roosevelt Dall, made a tour of the grounds.

In the afternoon the First Lady again went out to greet the children, and then returned to the White House, where she entertained a large group of children, friends of her grandchildren, at an egg hunt, followed by refreshments.

Earlier in the afternoon, Mrs. Roosevelt attended the funeral services held at the Capitol for Representative Edward W. Pou, of North Carolina, dean of the House and chairman of the Rules Committee, who died Sunday.

Last evening the First Lady, with several guests and her son, Mr. John Roosevelt, occupied a box a the National Theater for the opening of "Richard of Bordeaux." Today Mrs. Roosevelt will have a quiet day, entertaining a few friends informally.

Tomorrow Mrs. Roosevelt will receive the members of the Hasty Pudding Club at the White House and probably will attend the Hasty Pudding show tomorrow evening. At midnight she will leave for Columbus, Ohio, to remain Thursday and Friday. She will address the teachers' conference there. She will then go to New York and will return to Washington on April 11.

Convivial Throng Opens New Lounge

Tables Occupy Promenade at Hotel Fete.

Senator and Mrs. Warren R. Austin, of Vermont, were hosts at a small party yesterday afternoon at the opening of the Mayflower lounge.

The new room was crowded to capacity and tables were placed in the promenade of the hotel in Rue de la Paix style.

Among those present at the opening of the cocktail hour at 5 o'clock were Col. and Mrs. James Brady Mitchell, Mayor and Mrs. C. E. F. Hetrick, of Asbury Park, N. J.; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. Himes, Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Hogan, Mrs. Katherine Kennedy Brown, Mrs. John Allan Dougherty, Mrs. Joseph Tribby, Mr. George H. Shaw and Mr. Donald Woodward.

Because of the large number present at the first supper dance last evening in the lounge, reservations were not made in advance. Those attending included many of the diplomats, high ranking Government officials and many out-of-town visitors in Washington for the Easter holiday. There was dancing during the cocktail hour, too, which will be the established custom in the room and music will be furnished also at luncheon.

Kitt-Yonker Bridal Guests Entertained

Dinner Given by Parents of Bride-to-Be.

Mr. and Mrs. Homer LeMar Kitt entertained at dinner at the Shoreham last evening for their daughter, Miss Elizabeth Weber Kitt and her fiance, Mr. Edward Blair Yonker, and members of the bridal party. Miss Kitt and Mr. Yonker will be married at 4:30 p. m. tomorrow at St. Alban Church.

The dinner party was divided into two groups, one for the affianced couple and members of the bridal party, and one for the hosts and their other guests. In the former group were Miss Kitt, Mr. Yonker, Miss Madeline Yonker, who will be maid of honor; Miss Margaret English and Miss Mildred English, bridesmaids; Mr. Fergus A. Lloyd, best man, and Mr. William A. Semmes, Mr. Martin H. Rittenhouse, jr., and Mr. Clarence A. Gonnerman, ushers.

At the table with the hosts were Mr. and Mrs. Edward George Yonker, parents of the bridegroom-to-be; Mrs. Hazel Hart, sister of Mrs. Yonkers; Mrs. William Weber, mother of Mrs. Kitt, who came from Florida for the wedding, and Mrs. Paul Lewis Harter, of Fort Leavenworth, Kans., sister of Mrs. Kitt.

Operetta Ticket Chairman Named

Miss Peterson in Charge for Girl Reserves.

Miss Elsa Peterson is chairman of the ticket committee for the Girl Reserves' operetta, "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" to be given Friday night and Saturday afternoon at the Y. W. C. A.

For nine years the Girl Reserves have presented an operetta each year in the Easter vacation. "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" will fascinate the children with its royal court of fairies, gaily costumed gypsies, huntsmen, peasants and brownies. Among those who have already made reservations are Mrs. Henry Wallace, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture; Mrs. George Hamilton, Mrs. Sam Kauffman, Mrs. Henry Parsons Erwin, Mrs. Donald Richberg, Mrs. Paul Shorb, Mrs. William S. Culbertson, Mrs. E. E. Danley and Mrs. Wilson Compton.

Thomas Pigott And Miss Dunn Wed at Church

Leave on Northern Trip After Ceremony at First Baptist.

The wedding of Miss Hasseltine Dunn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Glanville Dunn, to Mr. Raymond Thomas Pigott, son of Mrs. J. D. Richardson, of San Antonio, Tex., took place in the National Baptist Memorial Church last evening.

The church was softly lighted by many tall tapers and decorated with clusters of spring flowers in pastel colors. The high altar was banked with dark green ferns and scattered blossoms. The Rev. Grove G. Johnson performed the ceremony at 8 o'clock, using the double ring service. While the guests assembled Miss Katherine Toomey and Mr. Justine Lowry sang, accompanied by Mrs. George F. Ross, organist.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her gown of heavy ivory satin was made on straight lines with a long, square court train. The fitted sleeves were of rose point lace. The neck was softly draped in the front and fastened in the back with a single pearl. Her voluminous veil of ivory tulle was caught into a cap of satin and net. She carried an armful of Easter lilies tied with wide satin ribbon.

Miss Webster Maid of Honor.

Miss Margaret Webster was the maid of honor. She wore a gown of flowered crepe with a background of pale blue. It was made on plain lines, the full skirt falling into a slight train. The neckline was high in the front and in the back the deep decolletage was bordered with two pleated wings of the crepe faced with shell pink taffeta. At the waist there was a large bow of the pink. She wore a bandeau of white with a row of rhinestones, and mitts of shell-pink lace. She carried a bouquet of deep pink roses.

Mrs. Charles A. R. Dunn was the matron of honor. Her gown was made on the same style as that of Miss Webster, of the same flowered material, but with a background of pale pink, trimmed with soft blue taffeta. Her mitts were of blue and she carried pale pink roses.

The gowns of the bridesmaids, Miss Stella Wilson and Mrs. Vernon Kauffman, similar to those of the other two attendants, were of flowered crepe with a background of yellow, trimmed with apple-green taffeta. They also wore the rhinestone bands on their hair and lace mitts of green. They carried bouquets of talisman roses.

Wedding Trip Through the North.

Mr. H. Leroy Lewis was best man, and the ushers were Mr. Kroom Vagranoff, Mr. Vernon Kauffman and Mr. Charles A. R. Dunn, brother of the bride.

Immediately following the ceremony there was a reception at the home of the bride's parents. Spring flowers and palms were arranged throughout the house. The bride and bridegroom were assisted in receiving by their parents. Mrs. Dunn was wearing a handsome gown of French blue lace, made on long lines with a train. The sleeves were close fitting to the wrists. She wore a cluster of orchids. Mrs. Richardson, mother of the bridegroom, had on a becoming gown of plum-colored lace, made on flaring lines with a slight train and cape sleeves. She also wore a corsage of orchids.

Later Mr. Pigott and his bride left by motor for a trip through the North. Mrs. Pigott was wearing an ensemble of cadet blue. The frock and the small off-the-face hat were of taffeta and the coat was of cedar bark cloth trimmed with kolinksky fur. Her accessories were of the same shade of blue.

After May 1 Mr. and Mrs. Pigott will make their home at the Argonne apartments in Washington.

Col. Lewis Hays Watkins, who is now stationed with the First Engineers at Fort Du Pont, Del., has been ordered for duty with the General Staff in Washington. He and Mrs. Watkins will come to the Capital sometime this summer.

Kappa Alpha Theta will hold its monthly dinner at the A. A. U. W. Clubhouse, 1634 I street, on Tuesday, at 6:30 p. m. All Thetas are welcome.

Miss Margaret Lundy Bride Of Mr. Julian Peter Dell, Jr.

Washington Girl and Son of Cordele, Ga., Pastor Wed.

Miss Margaret Jullien Lundy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Donaldson Lundy, and Mr. Julian Peter Dell, jr., son of the Rev. and Mrs. Julian Peter Dell, of Cordele, Ga., were married at 8 o'clock last evening at the Washington Club. The ceremony took place in the large drawing room before an improvised altar set i nthe bay window wit han aisle formed by white satin ribbons.

The Rev. Father Edmund L. Roach, of St. Matthew's Church, officiated. The club was beautifully decorated with Easter lilies and white lilacs against a background of palms and feathery ferns.

The bride was escorted to the altar by her father. She wore a gown of ivory satin made on princess lines with long tight sleeves slit at the shoulders, and a long, graceful train. Her voluminous tulle veil fell from a coronet of rare old point lace held in place by orange blossms. She carried a bouquet of roses, gardenias and lilies of the valley.

Sister Maid of Honor.

The maid of honor was Miss Elizabeth Lundy, sister of the bride, who wore a gown of nile green mousseline de soie made on long, flowing lines with a short train, and carried an arm bouquet of talisman roses and peach-colored snapdragons.

The bridesmaids were Miss Kate Dell, sister of the birdegroom; Miss Caroline Phillips, of Rye, N. Y., and Miss Adelaide Henry, cousins of the bride, and Miss Betty Burke, of Washington. They wore gowns of peach-colored mousseline de soie fashioned like the gown of the maid of honor and carried large bouquets of spring flowers.

The best man was Mr. Richard A. Dell, of Knoxville, Tenn., brother of the bridegroom; and the ushers were Mr. Ellis Jones, of Georgia; Mr. George Patterson, of Alabama; Mr. Daniel M. Mandell, Mr. Randall Buckingham and Mr. Gilbert Nettleton, jr., all of Washington, and Mr. William Burns, of New York.

Wedding Reception.

A reception followed the ceremony with dancing in the ballroom. The couple were assisted in receiving by the bride's parents. Mrs. Lundy wore a gown of magenta chiffon with a corsage of gardenias. Also in the receiving line was Mrs. A. W. Hendricks, of Mercy, N. C., aunt of the bridegroom, who wore pink chiffon with a shoulder bouquet of gardenias. The buffet table in the dining room had a large centerpiece of talisman roses, white lilacs and blue delphinium.

Later Mr. Dell and his bride left on a wedding trip, the latter wearing a smart black cloth suit trimmed with leopard, a small black hat and accessories to match. After May 1, they will make their home at 2331 Cathedral avenue.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Barnet Phillips and their daughters, Miss Caroline Phillips, Miss Josephine Phillips, Miss Sally Phillips and Miss Louise Phillips, of New York and Rye, N. Y.; Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus Sinclair Julien, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Burns and Miss Margaret Hennessey, all of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Byron Rawson, of Elkton, Md., and Miss Margaret Vinsinger, of Verona, N. J.

Barbara Smith, Roland Cheyney Are Married

Ceremony at St. George's Episcopal Church, Clarendon.

Arlington County, April 2 (Spl.). St. George's Episcopal Church at Clarendon was the scene last evening of the wedding of Miss Barbara Bell Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Durward M. Smith, and Mr. Roland Pancoast Cheyney, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Cheyney, of Livingston Heights, Va. The church was decorated with Easter lilies, palms and ferns. The Rev. Henry J. Miller, rector, performed the ceremony.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of ivory satin made princess style, cut low in the neck and trimmed with lace. Her veil, in Juliet style, was made of rare old lace, held in place by orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of bride roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Smith had as her maid of honor her sister, Miss Meredith Smith, who wore a gown of peach chiffon, with hat to match and carried an old-fashioned bouquet of spring flowers.

The bridesmaids wore mousseline de soie gowns with hats to match and carried bouquets of spring flowers. They were Miss Leonella Cheyney, sister of the bridegroom, Miss Katherine Johnson, Mrs. Betty Cheyney and Miss Helen Seton.

Mr. Cheyney had as his best man Mr. Marian E. Lynch. The ushers were three brothers of the bridegroom, Mr. William Cheyney, Mr. Jesse Cheyney, of Washington, and the Rev. Harold Cheyney, of Westminster Theological Seminary, and Mr. Theodore Birdsong, of Washington.

Miss Harriet Lloyd, of Glendale, Md., a classmate of the bride, sang "At Dawning," "Because" and "I Love You Truly." Mr. Louis Potter, of Washington, played a cello solo, Rubenstein's "Romance in E Flat," accompanied by Miss Jean McGregor, who also played the wedding march.

After the ceremony there was an informal reception in Rhodes room of the parish hall, followed by a buffet supper for the bridal party at the home of the bride's parents.

The bride's mother was gowned in blue crepe with hat to match and carried spring flowers. Miss Marjory Smith, sister of the bride, was gowned in coral pink.

Among the out-of-town guests was Mrs. Ida Bell Stanton, aunt of the bride, who is the house guest of her sister, Mrs. Durward Smith.

Later in the evening Mr. and Mrs. Cheyney left by motor for a trip through the South. On their return Mr. and Mrs. Cheyney will make their home in Washington.

Army Unit of Symphony Patrons to Meet Today

The Army unit of the National Symphony Orchestra Association will meet this morning at 11 o'clock in the home of Mrs. Hugh Drum, wife of the Assistant Chief of Staff of the United States Army, in Leroy place.

Mr. C. C. Cappel will speak. The Army unit is headed by Mrs. Barton K. Yount, of Bolling Field, and includes many well-known Army women of the National Capital who are aiding in the campaign for the $60,000 sustaining fund for the National Symphony Orchestra.

Miss Carroll Becomes Bride Of Mr. Trimble

Wed at Garrison Forest, Couple Will Reside in Argentina.

The wedding of Miss Nancy Gordon Carroll, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Gordon Carroll, of Brooklandville, Md., to Mr. William Cattell Trimble, son of Mrs. I. Ridgeway Trimble and the late Dr. Trimble, of Washington, took place yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock in St. Thomas' Church at Garrison Forest, Md. Bishop Julius Atwood, Bishop Emeritus of Arizona, assisted by the Rev. David Trimble, performed the ceremony.

Mrs. Warde Allan was matron of honor and wore a gown of white tulle with a hat to match. She carried an arm bouquet of white lilacs.

The bridesmaids were Mrs. Henry Morrison, Mrs. William Howard, Miss Evelyn Bonsal, Miss Ann Wathers, Miss Miriam Poe, of Baltimore; Mrs. Richard Egan and Miss Audrey Barrett, of New York, and Miss Molly Laird, of Wilmington. They all wore costumes like that of the matron of honor and carried bouquets of white lilacs.

Dr. I. Ridgeway Trimble was best man for his brother, and the ushers were Dr. Theodore Trimble, Mr. Douglas Carroll, Mr. R. G. Wynne, Mr. Stacy B. Lloyd, jr., of Philadelphia; Mr. Harold de Ropp, of Wilmington, Del.; Mr. J. Sawyer Wilson, 3d, Mr. J. Spencer Janney, Mr. John Hurst, jr., Mr. Richard Riggs and Mr. Charles B. Alexander, jr.

The Rector's Aid of St. Margaret's Church will entertain on Thursday, at a Salmagundi card party in the clubrooms of the League of American Pen Women, Stoneleigh Courts, Connecticut avenue and L street. Play from 2 to 4 p. m. when tea will be served.

Prince and Princess Christian of Hesse, who have spent the winter in New York and Washington, sailed Saturday aboard the Bremen for Paris. Later they will open Villa Mariposa, their home at Cannes, France.

Store to Hold Cooking School During Week

Free Demonstration Will Teach Pupils Simple Dishes.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

Women who want to learn the fine points of cooking—how to make an art of it—will have an opportunity this week in the free cooking school to be conducted by a local store.

Miss Ruth Sheldon, of the Washington Gas Light Co., is going to show her pupils how simple it is to turn ordinary foods into real delicacies. She is also going to tell them of various new dishes, both easy and inexpensive to prepare.

Tomorrow, when school begins, she is going to talk on "desserts that are different," "wine sauces" and "canapes." Each day she will discuss a different subject.

There is a triple incentive for enrolling in this school—the valuable information to be presented; the prizes to be drawn for every day, and the cooking range to be given at the end of the week to one of those, decided by drawing, who has a daily attendance record.

This school will be particularly beneficial to housewives who find cooking a drudgery. Miss Sheldon will give them so many helpful hints before they know it pie baking, sandwich making, &c., will turn out to be fun

Mirrors Repaired Here.

Mirrors which have lost their nice new sheen and, from hard usage or ordinary old age, have taken on a smoky tone, may be expertly resilvered at exceptionally low cost.

The shop which does this kind of work has made its name synonymous with efficiency. Rare antiques, slightly the worse for wear and tear, will receive very special attention. New mirrors which have been scarred will be repaired to show never a scratch.

* * * *

Cocktails for Two.

Numerous wedding announcements lately have set many people wondering about a "nice, inexpensive gift—slightly different." What about a cocktail shaker for two?

A local shop has some nice ones which they're recommending as the ideal "little gift" for newly weds.

* * * *

Crystal Beetles.

Pins and clips can give a dress a delightful finish—if they're the right kind of pins and clips.

There are so many on the market it pays to look around, be a bit choosy, before buying. An F street shop has a few made of a crystal composition that are unusually attractive. They're designed in queer beetle shapes and delicately tinted to be especially suited for spring clothes.

* * * *

Sleek and Snug.

Brassiere and teddy combinations made in the new cotton yarn and lastex material are cool and comfortable. They fit with a sleek snugness adapting them particularly to tightfitting evening and afternoon dresses.

Slender women who disdain girdles, but would like something to give them a trim look will find these garments exactly what they need.

Practically a Give-Away.

A Parisian perfume company is going to doll up their products in new packages. The old ones are going to be sold out as quickly as possible, at give-away prices.

A downtown store has already started. A two-ounce package of perfume which formerly sold for $10 is now $2.89. A one-ounce $6 package, $1.69. A $2 package, 59 cents. These are assorted fragrances.

Lipsticks, formerly $2, are now 39 cents, $2 face powder, and bath powder 59 cents.

It looks like a slaughter of innocents, for all these are the same products which will soon appear in new packages at the old prices.

* * * *

With or Without.

Flower holders which are attractive with or without flowers will have a special interest for housewives. These are bulbous glass globes, encircled with yellow, orange and white bands and supported by wrought-iron holders. On off days when there are no flowers, they look well filled with ivy.

* * * *

Will Kill Them Dead.

The surest means to keep the house from reeking of stale cigarettes is to have the proper kind of ash trays.

An F street shop has some known as the "bubble-outs" which very definitely put a cigarette out. A silver tray is surmounted with a composition seal supporting a ball on the tip of his nose. The ball is filled with water which "bubbles out" of a small hole when a cigarette is pressed against it. The fire is immediately put out, and cigarettes may be left in the tray without the usual burning and consequent stale aroma.

Indian Handiwork.

Dishes of Pre-Revolution Russia Now Tempting American Palates

Mazurki, Tea Cakes Are Easter Season Dainty.

By Ann Barrett.

For Grand Duchess Marie, Princess Paul Chavchavadze and other Russians in this country to revel still in the prized dishes of old Russia is only natural and to be expected. But Russian good things to eat have been recognized far beyond that.

Many an American (including Writer Heywood Broun) will testify to the joy of eating borscht—that beautiful, beet-red soup. And blini (fairy-thin pancakes) served with melted butter and caviar—which Lecturer Burton Holmes rates one of the world's best dishes. Or kotlette—those juicy Russian meat cakes which make such a hit with the son of one of my friends that he begs, "Mother, let's make a hundred of them, so we can eat them three days steady."

And those Russian tea cakes! I'm going to tell you about these first. Remember to be very gay and excited while you eat these with quarts and quarts of black tea (lemon or cream).

Mazurki.

Here's how the easiest kind goes. First, set out 1 cup each of currants, raisins, chopped blanched almonds, chopped walnuts, dried apricots, any sweet, thick jam such as raspberry or strawberry, 2 eggs, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 2 cups sifted bread flour. (No baking powder in this.)

Then wash the fruit, dry it in a towel, and put the apricots through the food chopper. Next just mix together in a big bowl all the fruits, nuts and jam, eggs (not beaten) and vanilla. Sift the flour over and mix thoroughly. Then butter a shallow pan thoroughly and spread the mixture in about one-half inch thick. (The mixture is stiff, you see, and will neither rise nor spread. So it will come out of the pan the same thickness as it goes in.) Bake about 35 minutes in slow oven not over 300 F. Then take from oven and shape into diamonds by cutting from corner to corner in 2-inch strips. Return pan to oven for about five minutes to dry out cut edges.

Preianiki.

Next I want to tell you how to make a famous Russian honey cookie called preianiki. This starts with 1 cup strained honey heated slowly till it almost comes to a boil. Then cool this to lukewarm and mix into it ¾ cup brown sugar, 1 egg (beaten), 1 tablespoon lemon juice. Next, sift together 2½ cups sifted bread flour, ½ teaspoon soda, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, ½ teaspoon cloves, ½ teaspoon cardamon seeds (crushed). Add this to first mixture. Then stir in 1-3 cup shaved citron and 1-3 cup chopped walnuts.

Next cover mixture with waxed paper and chill in refrigerator overnight. Then roll out about 1-3 inch thick (using as little flour as possible). Cut with 1½-inch cutter. Place on buttered baking sheet at least 2 inches apart, as mixture spreads a lot. Put three blanched almonds in center of each cookie (with points toward center). Bake in hot oven (about 400 F.) about 15 minutes. These cookies taste even better after they have ripened. They will keep three months or more in tightly covered container.

For something quite different, but equally famous, here are rich, little biscuits filled with thick jam for eating with tea. These start with ½ pound butter (1 cup, tightly packed). Chop this up in a bowl with a knife. Then chop into it 2 cups sifted bread flour, ½ teaspoon salt, and 1 teaspoon sugar. (No baking powder.) Next mix in 2 whole eggs (unbeaten.) Only if necessary (to hold mixture together so you can roll it) add 2 or 3 tablespoons of cold water.

Then roll mixture out about ⅛-inch thick, and shape with small cutter, about 2½ or 3 inches wide. Then put a teaspoon of thick jam in center of each round. Next, gather the back and front edges of each little round up over the jam, and pinch these together, making an oval-shaped biscuit that stands on a flat bottom made by the jam filling. (See picture.) Set these on baking sheet, brush them with egg (beaten up slightly with 1 teaspoon water) and bake in moderate oven (about 350 F.) about 15 minutes. They will come out beautifully brown and shiny, and deliciously buttery.

Raincoats Are April Necessity But a Fashion-Conscious One

By Amos Parrish.

NEW YORK, April 3.—"April showers bring——." May flowers, perhaps . . . but raincoats certainly. Good-looking ones, too. The kind you not only "don't mind" wearing, but actually like to put on.

Natty three-quarter length rubber capes offer sufficient protection if your climate has only gentle, little showers. The kind of capes which—by the thousand—first saw the rain of day at the Century of Progress Exposition.

But if you can expect those opened-heavens downpours which strike into your very bones, there are full-length coats with hood-collars which can be drawn up over your head (while you stuff your hat inside the coat).

In between are the kind of coats most women wear . . . which cover from neck to hem.

First in fashionable showers is the coat cut somewhat along the lines of one type of men's topcoats . . . with raglan sleeves, wide armholes, wrist straps, roomy pockets and a close-about-the-throat collar which can be worn turned down or turned up. In the sketch of this coat it is very much up.

As is eminently proper in stormy weather costumes, the wind-blown look, so important in fair day fashions, has got into some of the newer raincoats. And you can plan on seeing raincoats which look as stormy in the sun as in the rain, with their collars jutting forward when open and a blown-forward movement in the skirt sections.

Some Cape-Coats.

Capes give some coats a dressier feeling. Capes which just cover the shoulders and capes which hang to the hipline. And there's a full-length raincapé being made of an oiled silk which, it is said, will not stick or crack.

For spring, of course, you'll want a raincoat lighter weight than the suede-finished fabrics which have been smart during winter.

Sail cloth is a new idea. And the newest of all is seersucker, carefully waterproofed and very summer-y looking.

Navy, green, brown, black, gray . . . these are all staple colors, always correct and easily ensembled with your fair weather wardrobe.

But keep your weather eye peeled for lighter color raincoats. White, beige, champagne. They'll mark you out in the crowd as attired in something new.

And . . . to bring some brightness into the cloudy day . . . plaids and checks.

(Copyright, 1934.)

Raincoats of the types described are available in Washington in all the better shops and department stores.

What Today Means

"Aries."

If April 4 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:30 to 11:30 a. m., from 12 noon to 2:30 p. m. and from 7:30 to 9:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 6:30 to 8:30 a. m., from 3:30 to 5:30 p. m. and from 9:30 to 11:30 p. m.

If you meet an individual socially who, in an endeavor to be funny, indulges in sarcastic or "catty" comments, you will show good judgment by ignoring them. It will be advisable to keep your eye on the time on this date, so unexpected delays will not cause lateness in keeping engagements. Try to avoid keeping anyone waiting, so as to eliminate irritation.

If April 4 is your birthday, you should not let your love for the arts interfere with the practical things required of you in your daily life. It will be wise not to complain too much about what you have to do, or how distasteful this or that is.

The child born on April 4, as it grows up, will prove versatile, and will possess a good ear for music and a passion for dancing. It, however, will be very handy with its hands, and should be given the facilities for using them. If the child is a boy, manual training will prove beneficial. Girls should be taught sewing, pastry-making and cooking. These children should not be pampered, and any tendency to overindulge in sweetmeats should be discouraged.

The woman born on April 4 should exercise caution about expressing too much sentimentality. Too much saccharinity may make people doubtful as to the sincerity of the individual, and in your case, having naturally a sweet disposition, it is not necessary for you to do any "gushing," so display good judgment by acting entirely natural. Avoid as much as possible closely associating with irresponsible people, or those with ideas contrary to the conventional rules of established society.

The man born on April 4 should restrain any desire to indulge in any reckless or foolish feats, simply to show his disregard of physical fear. Your courage does not require you to resort to any needless display to make your friends believe in it. Your personality is sufficiently strong to inspire confidence in you. If you go hunting or fishing, observe all the laws of common sense and safety practiced by good sportsmen.

Cooking Makes Fancy Affairs Of Sandwiches

Any of These Recipes Will Make a Successful Small Meal.

If it hadn't been for the Earl of Sandwich and his game of cards we might have lost out on one of the most useful and delightful culinary creations. He couldn't leave his game, so he grasped a chunk of meat and a slice of bread and pretended it was a meal.

The sandwich fills a place unrivaled by any other food form. It may be a quick "pick-up," a delightful luncheon dish, or a hurried and successful after-the-theater bit of satisfaction.

There are a few hot sandwiches that will fill an appropriate corner of the housewife's knowledge of cooking.

Here they are:

Toasted Mushroom Sandwiches.

½ pound mushrooms
1 small slice onion
1 (2 oz.) jar pimientoes
2 tablespoons flour
½ teaspoon salt
Few grains cayenne

Clean the mushrooms; drain the liquid from the pimientoes; chop the mushrooms, onions and pimientoes; place in a saucepan with 2 tablespoons cooking oil. Cook over low heat, stirring occasionally until the mushrooms are tender or about 5 minutes. Sprinkle the flour over the mushroom mixture; stir vigorously until the mixture thickens. Season with salt and cayenne. Remove from stove. To serve, trim the crusts from a loaf of bread and cut into thin slices; butter. Cover half the slices with mushrooms filling. Put together in pairs and toast. Cut each toasted sandwich into three strips; serve piping hot.

Eggs and Tomatoes on Muffins.

Have ready to toast some English muffins, split, and some sliced raw tomatoes. To make filling, chop an onion and cook in ¼ cup cooking oil in saucepan until slightly colored. Then add 2 cups fresh tomatoes (canned may be used, but be sure to drain off some of the juice), and cook slowly for about 15 minutes. Pour this into top of double boiler, add a pound of cubed American cheese, ¾ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, 1 teaspoon Worchestershire sauce and ½ teaspoon mustard. Stir until well blended; then add 3 beaten eggs and stir until eggs are cooked. Meantime, toast the muffins, and have ready. Put this filling between muffins and lay a slice of raw tomato on top each one.

Skill Revives Fading Plants

Bulbs Can Be Transplanted Into Garden, to Bloom Next Spring.

If your potted plant which stood so beautifully straight and tall on Easter morning has begun to look tired and droopy, a little skilled care may yet revive it.

The best way to begin the process is by watering the plant thoroughly. Because the soil in which potted plants grow looks dark, it is usually taken for granted it is moist, and the poor plants are almost never watered.

The next thing the owner of the fragile Easter plant should do is place it in a cool place at night. Potted plants are grown in a cool moist atmosphere in a green house, and when they are transferred to a warm living room they soon wither. There is little danger of keeping any of the bulbs too cool, for nothing short of actual freezing will injure them.

Often the bulbs may be transplanted into a garden where, if properly cared for, they will bloom yearly for many seasons. If you wish to transplant these, snip off all remaining foliage when the flowers have faded. The bulbs can then be planted immediately in a garden or hardy flower border. Tulips and hyacinths should be planted 4 or 5 inches deep; crocuses 2 to 3 inches deep. If the soil outside is not in condition for planting keep the bulbs in a pot and put in a cold room or cellar, watering frequently until they can be planted. Often bulbs, so handled, will bloom the following spring.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Night Blindness.

In the condition known as night blindness the subject sees satisfactorily in the daytime if nothing else is wrong with the eyes, but in the dark he is about as helpless as a blind man. The condition is natural with some people. Such persons have what is known as congenital night blindness. All of their lives they are unable to get around in the dark, just as albinos are when the light is bright.

With others night blindness is a sign of some organic disease of the eye. One of the signs of glaucoma, which sometimes makes the subject suspect his disease for the first time, is a tendency to walk into objects whenever the lighting becomes poor. This is a symptom of several eye diseases which, it is important, should be recognized early, and for which the patient is on the skirmish line. When the sign is to be recognized and reported to the physician for investigation depends on the keenness of observation, the mental alertness and the intelligence of the patient. On this point he is the pitcher and the doctor is the catcher.

In addition to these two groups of people with night blindness there is a third group to whom Drs. Wilbur and Eusterman direct attention. This group is composed of those who have night blindness as a result of dietary deficiency. It is well established that there are several eye diseases which result from dietary disorders. The best known of these is xerophthalmia, or ulcer of the eye. There were many cases of this disorder in some European countries consequent upon the privation due to the World War. This is supposed to be one of the causes of cataract. The almost unbelievable amount of cataract in India and in Egypt is thought to be due in part to nutritional deficiency.

These doctors think, though they do not claim that they have proved their contention, this was a case of night blindness due to a deficiency of vitamin A. They offer a good deal of evidence to support the theory that food deficiency can cause night blindness and some proof that it may be caused by a deficiency in the amount consumed of foods rich in vitamin A. The evidence in this case is offered for what it is worth.

The Dragon Murder Case

By S. S. Van Dine

"The same as that fellow yesterday," he said. "Same wounds exactly. Same fracture of the skull; same three scratches down his chest; same discoloration on his throat. Ripped wide open, bashed over the left side of the head, and strangled. * * * Only," he added, "he hasn't been dead as long as the other one."

He made a grimace at Heath. "That's what you want to know, isn't it?"

"How about 12 o'clock last night fitting?" asked Vance.

"Midnight, eh?" Doremus bent down over Greeff's body and again tested the rigor mortis. "That'd make it about 12 hours. * * * Right." He stood up and wrote out a removal blank.

Chapter XXII.
Piscatorial Lore.

Stamm led the way across the library and into the first aquarium. This room was even larger than the library, and had an enormous skylight as well as a row of high windows along both walls to the east and west. Beyond, through a second archway was still another aquarium, similar to the first; and beyond that was the terrarium with windows on three sides.

The aquarium in which we stood was lined with fish tanks of all sizes, reaching to the base of the high windows; and halfway between the walls, running the entire length of the room, were two double rows of additional tanks, set on a long metal rack. There were more than 100 such tanks in the room, ranging in capacity from 5 to 100 gallons.

Stamm directed our attention to a series of small individual tanks on the shelf above.

"Piranhas," he said. "A rare species. And savage devils—take a squint at those wicked teeth. I believe these are the first ever to come to the United States alive. Brought them back myself from Brazil—in separate cans, of course; they'd kill each other if they were put together. Damned cannibals—the Serrasalmus. I had a couple that were nearly 20 inches long—not the spilopleura; they rarely grow over a foot in length * * * And here," he went on, moving away, "is a nice collection of Seahorses—the Hippocampus punctulatus. Better than those in the New York Aquarium * * *"

Stamm moved a little farther on. "Here's an interesting fish—pugnacious and dangerous. The Gymnotus carapo. Have to be kept separately. Known as the 'Electric Eel'—Electrophorus electricus. But that's all wrong, really. Though they have eel-like bodies, they are not eels at all, but related to the Characinidae. These are only about eight inches long, but they grow to three feet."

Vicious Looking Fish.

Vance looked at the queer specimens closely; they were vicious looking and repulsive.

"I have heard," he remarked, "that they are actually capable of electrocuting a man by a momentary contact."

Stamm pursed his lips.

"So they say, so they say."

At this point Tatum and Mrs. McAdam came into the room.

"How about a little battle?" Tatum asked of Stamm with a smirk. "Teeny and I are bored."

Stamm hesitated.

"I've wasted eight of my biggest Bettas on you now. * * * Oh, all right."

He went to a wide niche in the east wall, where there were numerour quart tanks each containing one Siamese fighting fish. From the ceiling hung a globe of water, on three slender chains, at a height of about five feet from the floor. He took up a small round Brussels net and transferred two veil-tail fish—a beautiful blue-green and a purple one—to the suspended globe.

The two fish appeared to look at each other cautiously before attacking. Then, with brilliantly heightened color and with fins and tails twitching and spreading furiously, they rushed about. Coming close together and nearly parallel, they slowly rose, side by side, to the surface. Soon they seemed to relax, and sank to the bottom of the globe. These preliminary maneuvers continued for a few minutes. Then, with lightning swiftness, the fight was on. They dashed at each other viciously, ripping off scales, mutilating each other's tails and fins, and tearing bloody bits from the sides. Tatum was offering odds on the purple Betta, but no one paid any attention to him. The blue-green one fastened on the other's gill with a terrific grip, hanging on until he was compelled to rise to the surface for air. The other then attached himself savagely to his antagonist's mouth and relinquished his hold only when forced to go up for air himself. It was a terrible, but beautiful sight.

Vance looked toward Tatum.

"You enjoy this sort of thing?" he asked.

"Too tame," Tatum complained, with an unpleasant laugh. "I prefer cock-fighting myself; but when there's nothing else to do. * * *"

"It's a Brutal Sport."

Leland had entered the room without our hearing him. He stood just behind Vance.

"I think it is a brutal sport," he said, his smoldering eyes on Tatum. "It is beastly."

The purple Betta was now at the bottom of the globe, mutilated and almost entirely stripped of its scales; and the other was attacking it to give the coup de grace. Leland quickly picked up a small net and, reaching into the globe, removed the wounded loser and placed him in a small tank of mecurochrome water. Then we went back to the library.

Tatum shrugged and took Mrs. McAdam's arm.

"Come on, Teeny, we'll play tiddledywinks. I'm sure Leland would approve of that."

And the two of them left the room.

Below one of the large east windows there were several shelves lined with jars of strange preserved sea-monsters of varying sizes, and Stamm led us immediately to them.

"There's a jolly little fellow," he remarked, pointing to a specimen in a long conical jar. "The Omosudis Lowi. Look at those saber-like fangs!"

"A typical dragon's mouth," Vanc murmured. "But not as vicious as it looks. A fish one-third its size can conquer and swallow it—the Chiasmodon niger, for instance."

"That's right." Once more Stamm glanced sharply at Vance. "Any implication in the observation?"

"Really now," Vance protested, and pointed to a large glass receptacle containing a preserved fish of the most hideous and formidable aspect I had ever seen. "Is this one of the Chauliodus Sloanei?"

"Yes, it is," Stamm answered, without shifting his gaze from Vance. "And I have another one here."

Stamm's Face Hardens.

"I believe Greeff did mention two."

"Greeff!" Stamm's face hardened. "Why should he have mentioned them?"

"I'm sure I don't know." Vance moved along the row of botles. "And what might this be?"

Stamm turned reluctantly, and glanced at the jar on which Vance had placed his finger.

"Another so-called dragonfish," he said. "The Lamprotaxus flagellibarba." It was a wicked-looking, greenish-black monster, with blazing emerald markings.

"A most fascinatin' collection," Vance commented, as he turned from the jars. "With such an array of dragonfish round the place it's no wonder the old superstition of the pool persists."

Stamm drew up short and scowled; it was patent that Vance's last remark had upset him. He started to make a reply, but evidently thought better of it, and walked back toward the inner room without a word.

As we came again into the library Vance gazed about curiously at various potted plants in the room.

Vance walked over to a rather high miniature tree in a large jardiniere standing by the davenport on which Leland sat reading. This tree had large oblong glossy leaves, like the India-rubber plants that are cultivated in Europe for ornamental purposes, but these leaves were smaller and broader and seemed more profuse.

Vance regarded it a moment.

"Ficus elastica?" he asked.

"I imagine so," Stamm replied. (It was evident that his interest lay in fish rather than in plants.) "However, it's a curious type—maybe a cross of some kind. And it's undoubtedly stunted. Moreover, it's never had any pink buds. I got it in Burma three years ago."

"Amazin' how it has thrived." Vance bent over it closely and touched the dirt in the jardiniere with his finger. "Any special soil required?"

Stamm shook his head.

"No. Any good fertilizer mixed with the earth seems to suffice."

Wipes Clay From Finger.

Vance drew out his handkerchief and wiped the moist earth from his finger.

"I think we'll be running along; it's nearly lunch time. We'll either be back or communicate with you later this afternoon. And we'll have to impose upon your hospitality a while longer. We do not want any one to leave here just yet."

"That will be perfectly all right," Stamm returned pleasantly, going to the hall door with us. "I think I'll rig up a windlass and get that rock out of the pool this afternoon. A little physical exercise, you know * * *" And with a genial wave of the hand he turned and went back to his beloved fish.

When we had returned to the drawing room Markham turned on Vance angrily.

"What's the idea of wasting all that time on fish and plants?" he demanded. "There's serious work to be done."

Vance nodded soberly.

"I was doing serious work, Markham," he returned, in a low voice. "And during the last half hour I've learned many important things."

Markham scrutinized him a moment and said nothing.

(Monday, August 13, 1 p. m.)

On our drive to Vance's apartment we were caught in a sudden thundershower. Dark clouds had been gathering in the West for some time before we left the Stamm estate, though they had not appeared very menacing, and I thought they would pass us to the south. But the downpour was terrific, and our car was almost stalled on upper Broadway. When we reached Vance's apartment, however, a little before half-past 1, the storm had passed over the East River, and the sun was shining again. We were, in fact, able to have our lunch on the roof garden.

During the meal Vance deliberately avoided any discussion of the case, and Markham, after two or three futile efforts at conversation, settled into a glum silence.

Markham Exasperated.

Shortly after 2 o'clock Vance rose from the table and announced that he was leaving us for a few hours.

Markham looked up in exasperated surprise.

U. S. Educators Answer British School Attack

Reasons for Predominance of Men Teachers Given.

School teaching is a job for women and sissy men, scoffs the average American man and seeks his fortune in the more glamorous and lucrative commercial world. The result is the preponderance of women teachers in our public schools, which the British Association of Schoolmasters at recent conference in London described as "horrible."

"We are at war to defend our British boys from the infantilism of the American male," declared President H. Gordon, addressing the British association.

Dr. Stephen A. Kramer, first assistant superintendent of the District Public Schools, commenting on the attack of the British educators said yesterday:

"American men have not cared to enter the teaching profession in the United States in former years because the commercial world offered more attractive positions. Also the teaching professions was the only one open to women until comparatively recent years, and men left the field open to them.

"But today, women are employed in all professions and more men are teaching. I have always felt there was a vital need for more men teachers in our public schools. This is especially true in our junior and senior high schools. For as a boy grows older he feels the need of a man's friendship and guidance.

"Unquestionably," Dr. Kramer continued, "our women teachers have done fine work, both in teaching boys as well as girls. And I think it would be just as deplorable to have all men teachers as all women. They should not supplant each other. They should be complementary."

Ann Shumaker, of the Progressive Education Association, declared there was small danger of the American male's being made infantile by his women teachers.

"The children themselves see to that," Miss Shumaker said. "They have learned to take their education with a grain of salt. And the formal methods of teaching and discipline now prevalent are so distasteful to them they are likely to strive to be the opposite of what their teachers are, rather than imitate them, or be coddled by them."

But Miss Shumaker believes in the progressive school of tomorrow there will be a real need for the man teacher.

"Teaching as a profession is requiring more training, and paying higher salaries," she said. "The result is more men are teaching. And as teaching becomes less formal, and the students come in closer contact with their teachers, the boys feel a greater need for men as teachers.

"The teachers' colleges are recognizing this fact, and are limiting the number of women admitted, encouraging men to attend their schools. Many of the education schools insist upon having an equal number of men and women students."

Statistics gathered by the National Education Association show there are about six times as many women as men teaching in public schools in the United States.

Estate to Open Garden Week

Carter's Grove Among Virginia Homes to Be Shown.

Richmond, Va., April 2 (Spl.).—Carters Grove, near Williamsburg, one of the most imposing colonial mansions in Virginia, has been added to the list of homes and estates that will be open to public inspection during Virginia Historic Garden Week, April 23 to 28, and for one week afterward, April 30 to May 5.

The announcement was authorized by Archibald M. McCrea, the owner, who does not plan to open the estate at any other time this year. Located on the banks of the James River, the old estate is one of the most beautiful and also the most accessible of all the colonial homes in Virginia.

Carters Grove is said to have as fine interior woodwork as any colonial estate in America. The paneling, stairway and doors are of native pine and made by the finest workmen procurable when the house was built early in the eighteenth century.

The terraced lawn and the cutting garden will be shown to visitors, and the same section of the house open to the public last year will be open again.

Senators Will Speak At Cotton Style Show

Prominent men will speak, and prominent girls will model at the Cotton Fashion Show tomorrow in the Little Theater at Jelleff's.

Senator John H. Bankhead, of Alabama, will speak at the morning session, and Senator Allen Barkley will speak in the afternoon.

The models have been chosen from representatives of cotton producing States. They are Mrs. Marianne Harrison Cummings, Miss Laura Barkley, Miss Janet Shepherd, Miss Janie McSwain, Mrs. George Mather and Miss Anne Sullins.

Other models are Mrs. Alma Barton, Mrs. Forbes Morgan and Miss Marjorie Moorman.

I Feel Phoney.

By Katherine Smith.

Sing a song of flippancy,
Sing a song of cheer;
Cry aloud with mirth, and be
Gay in face of fear.

Sing a song, from day to day
Be glad of anything;
But, when you are really gay
There's no need to sing.

Brains Before Beauty New Slogan of Movies

Hollywood, April 2 (U.P.).—New York girls who in addition to an ambition to go into the movies have more intelligence and sincerity than beauty and sex appeal should meet the plane that reaches Newark airport with William Perlberg late today.

The Columbia casting director is bound for Manhattan to round up at least 20 girls for film jobs. Beauty and sex appeal rate last in the list of specifications he outlined for prospects before he left here last night.

Here is how Perlberg said he ranks first-class talent for acting jobs:

Intelligence, 42 per cent; sincerity, 18 per cent; poise, 16 per cent; personality, 11 per cent; beauty, 8 per cent, and sex appeal, 5 per cent.

Tale of Transportation.

WHAT DID you do Easter?"

"I went to New York in one of those half-pint cars—borrowed it from a friend. Can't afford to run my Pierce Arrow—that's in Dad's garage in Roland Park," said a well known young Baltimorean who is working hard at a job in Washington, but such a job as is not paying well enough yet for him to use the car he acquired in carefree college days.

• • • •

"You know, it was certainly an eye opener to me," he continued. "I bought 5 gallons of gas when I left New York for the home trip—had 'em fill her up and that's all she'd hold—imagine that!

• • • •

"Well, we were rolling along down about Conowingo Dam and I thought: 'Guess I'd better check on that gas; I don't want to get stuck in the middle of the dam.' So I put in at a gas station and what do you think! I still had 3 gallons in the tank. Can you beat that?"

What Price Worship?

A PROMINENT lady who takes her Easter services seriously, but who was too busy to think about getting the card that entitled her to a seat in her own church, when Easter morning dawned realized she had no surety of a seat for the big morning service.

• • • •

She went to her church and found a huge crowd ahead of her for such seats as were not taken by those holding the coveted tickets. She sighed and turned away. Starting her car, she drove to another part of the city, which she hoped would be less of a drawing card and hence more of a chance for a seat There, too, the church was packed to bulging doors.

• • • •

The lady sighed again.

"Well, she said to herself, "of course, the Cathedral is popular, but it's very large. Maybe I could at least stand in a corner there somewhere."

• • • •

So she drove to the Cathedral. She went up the steps and managed to find a nook just inside the door in time to hear them sing the last hymn.

Idyll of Spring.

NOWHERE in Washington was the Easter spectacle more fascinating to watch than at Meridian Park, where they had all the fountains turned on.

Up and down the two picturesque stairways that border the graduated flounces of falling water masses of people in colorful, gay Easter garb passed endlessly.

• • • •

At the foot of these stairs, with their Maxfield Parrish background, other crowds wove equally gay patterns about the larger basin where four geyser-like sprays ascended and descended.

• • • •

Children played hide and seek among the grown-ups. A small black Scottie lapped water from the basin, surreptitiously. The heroic figure of Buchanan in Rodinesque pose dominated the scene with the immobility that is the impressive quality of carved stone.

Mauve Decade Clothes Return

Fredericksburg, Va., April 2 (Spl.).—The proud wearers of new bonnets who paraded the city streets Sunday were wearing essentially the same styles the well-dressed women of the gay nineties wore, according to Dr. Elizabeth Baker, of the State Teacher's College here.

The suits with short coats, the separate blouses, particularly those in checks and plaids, the beflowered hats—these, too, were characteristic of the Mauve Decade, she maintains.

Dr. Baker, a teacher of English, became interested in the costumes wore by American women through her study of the American novel. She has assembled more than 100 fashion plates of the styles worn during the past 100 years. Many of these from copies of Godey's and Peterson's magazines, which, in the 80's and 90's, set the styles for the smartly dressed woman. In 1890 the Delineator joined the ranks, and in more recent years Harper's Bazaar has supplied Dr. Baker her fashion plates.

The story of each age is told by the clothes women wore, Dr. Baker believes. She gives a yearly exhibit to illustrate this fact to her students.

The emergence of the business woman caused the greatest style revolution in America. Clothes were adapted to fit her needs. They became more healthful and easier to make, as well as easier to wear. Dr. Baker attributes this largely to the fact that women have less time for sewing, and pressing than formerly.

Wife of Speaker of the House Makes Radio Debut; Scoffs at Dr. Wirt's Charges Against Brain Trust

Mrs. Rainey Tells of Job as Secretary to Her Husband.

To bring closer together distinguished Washington women and their vast sisterhood throughout the country—who watch with interest the Washington scene—The Post this week inaugurates a new radio feature—"First Ladies of the Capital." Twice weekly, Mondays at 11:45 a. m., and Fridays at 3 p. m., women who influence the Nation's life and thought, will be exclusively interviewed by The Post's radio reporter over a National network. The following day the interview will be carried on the Woman's Page.

Today's is the first reported interview in this series.

By Margaret Santry.

Making her radio debut over a coast-to-coast network yesterday morning under the auspices of The Washington Post, Mrs. Henry T. Rainey, wife of the Speaker of the House, scoffed at Dr. William A. Wirt's charges of "a Red in the Brain Trust."

"Fairy tales——" she characterized them.

"I have known since 1932 the man who says he told Dr. Wirt those fairy tales about the Brain Trust," she said. She referred to George W. Christians.

"Christians has been the leader of the Crusaders of Civil Liberties and has been to my office for interviews on several occasions.

"His was just one of the many ideas for saving the country that people bring before the Speaker each year.

"Last year there were remedies for unemployment and depression—stacks and stacks of them. I read them and brief them; pick out the constructive and practical ideas and lay them on the Speaker's desk."

With characteristic vigor—for Mrs. Rainey is a dynamic woman—she took her ether audience completely 'round the clock, in describing her 24-hour-a-day job as secretary and wife to the Speaker of the House. Hers is the first in a series of biweekly Post interviews on the air with distinguished women in Washington.

Opening the Speaker's stacks of mail, greeting the daily scores of visitors who overflow his offices, is only the "leit motif" of Mrs. Rainey's tremendous and engrossing task.

"It's my job to act as buffer, Bureau of Legislative Information, Fact-Finding Committee and Animated Encyclopedia, rolled into one," she explained. "The Speaker's rooms are open to all. Everybody is entitled to a hearing. And help—when we can give it to them."

Mrs. Rainey's skill in handling these anxious callers is something to watch. Are they difficult? Let her tell it:

Mrs. Rainey: "No, they are not—because I'm interested in them . . . and in helping them." (But here is her plaint.) "It is difficult to get people down to brass tacks—to get them to tell me exactly what they want!"

Miss Santry: "But you managed to pin me down to brass tacks soon enough that first day I visited you. I was most impressed with your efficient directness!"

Mrs. Rainey: "But I have to be direct—or else valuable minutes are wasted. For instance, people who come into the office and want to see the Speaker always begin by saying 'I know the Speaker is a very busy man, &c., &c.' Now that all takes time. My first words are 'What can I do for you?' The trouble is many people are so inarticulate. They can't express themselves, I help them."

Miss Santry—And what do the people usually want to see the Speaker about?

Mrs. Rainey—Everything. For instance, last week 3,000 people were here about codes. I had many of their important representatives to see. I gave them both sides of the case. I emphasized to them "We are legislating here in Congress for the people, and that means not only you employers who are the people, but, also, the people who are working for you." I try to jar them out of their old philosophy by telling them, "You are speaking a dead language. This is a New Deal!" I sometimes say, "We are in the midst of a great revolution!" That sounds like Dr. Wirt, doesn't it?

However, despite the fact that Mrs. Rainey has three desks at home for night work on official matters after the long hours each day at the Capitol, it isn't all work and no play in the Rainey menage. Some time for recreation is fitted into the busy schedule. The Speaker loves to go to the movies.

Mrs. Rainey: "Movies? Oh, yes. He goes to the movies for relaxation as well as entertainment. He likes it because the lights are out. It's dark, and if he doesn't like the picture he can go to sleep. His favorite? Eddie Cantor, George Arliss and the Charlie Chan mystery stories."

Miss Santry: "And I suppose like all great men the Speaker likes to read detective stories?"

Mrs. Rainey: "He reads all the highbrow magazines. And for balance, the blood and thunder murder mystery thrillers in the serial magazines."

Wielding the gavel in the House to keep unruly Representatives in order is not the only exercise the Speaker gets.

Mrs. Rainey: "Every morning the Speaker turns on the radio for exercise with the Indian clubs. I call him my one-two-three-four, up-and-down man!"

There is no time for lunch in the busy Rainey day at the Capitol, so Mrs. Rainey has a snatch-as-can sandwich and some coffee on her desk." However, we always start out in the morning with a 'whale' of a big breakfast," she admitted.

With the long office day, the three or four dinners and other public functions a week which take up the evenings there is little time for outside interests. But Mrs. Rainey has kept up her interest in Girl Scouts—and was the first president of the Girl Scout Council in Washington. She's most proud that she is a "real" Girl Scout captain.

Mrs. Rainey—"I'm a real captain because I took all the tests. In the summer when we open Rainey Farm for a public park and playground, the Girl and Boy Scouts come there to camp."

And if an observation of the more than generous quota of daily good deeds she performs daily about the House (with a capital "H") means anything, Mrs. Rainey rates an Eagle—the highest emblem the Girl Scouts can award for a "real" scout.

Listen Friday at 3 for Mrs. Jouett Shouse, distinguished author—and read the story on Saturday's Woman's Page.

Strong men have been known to tremble at the sight of the microphone. But not so Mrs. Henry T. Rainey, wife and secretary of the Speaker of the House. Making her radio debut yesterday over a coast-to-coast network, she gave a performance that veterans envied.

One of Capital's Busiest Women Discusses Varied Duties.

The First Woman Invader of Bureau of Standards Was Would-Be Gold Hunter and Mining Engineer

Mrs. Mulligan Battled Prejudice Against Women.

Equally as courageous and pioneering as their grandmothers who crossed the plains in covered wagons are those women in Government service who blazed the trail to new careers. This is the thirteenth article in a series dealing with women holding interesting Federal jobs.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

A gold mine in Colorado was responsible for the employment of the first woman at the Bureau of Standards.

The bureau withstood the feminine invasion until 1904. In the fall of that year Miss Grace McDermut, of Denver, entered the laboratory of the electrical division. Now, as Mrs. Grace Mulligan, she is still at the Bureau of Standards, but her position has changed from aid in the electrical division's laboratory to junior scientist in the division of weights and measures, volumetric section.

This is the part the gold mine played in her coming to Washington: While Grace McDermut was in boarding school near Denver, her aunt acquired a claim in the Razzle Dazzle lode. Her aunt and parents thought it would be fine if Grace were to study mining-engineering so that she could look after the mine. The girl had already shown an aptitude for scientific and mechanical subjects. She was pleased when it was decided she should enter the Colorado School of Mines.

A few weeks before she received her degree in mining-engineering, the Razzle Dazzle gold mine passed out of the McDermut family.

"And there was I, with a fancy degree on my hands and no place to make use of it," said Grace McDermuit Mulligan yesterday at her desk in a room that is half laboratory and half office, at the Bureau of Standards.

There were no jobs for women mining-engineers. The professors at the Colorado School of Mines had warned her of that when she insisted upon enrolling at the college, the only girl student among 350 men. But Grace McDermut was determined to put her knowledge of engineering to some use. She took the civil service examination and was in line for an appointment.

Government officials were inclined to regard women engineers in the same light as had the professors at the Colorado School of Mines. Dr. Rosa, then chief of the electrical division at the Bureau of Standards, was extremely dubious about hiring a woman. Precedent was on his side. The bureau had always employed only men, with the exception of a couple of part-time stenographers. But Dr. Brooks, right-hand man of Dr. Rosa, put in a good word for Grace McDermut.

Said Dr. Brooks: "Any woman who had the courage to complete the mining engineering course should be given a chance."

Dr. Rosa decided Grace McDermut should have her chance. She came to Washington and entered the laboratory of the electrical division. Not until five years later was another woman employed at the Bureau of Standards.

"I guess they were waiting to see how I turned out before they took on any more," smiled the first woman employe.

Because she had been the only co-ed on the Colorado School of Mine's campus, Grace McDermut felt at home in the Bureau of Standards during the five years she was the only woman working there.

"I believe the men at the bureau accepted my presence a little more calmly than the college boys did," she said, with a glint of humor in her gray eyes. "The students were definitely annoyed when I appeared upon the scene. So were the professors. I suppose they had to let me in since the Colorado School of Mines is a State institution."

But evidently the students soon recovered from their annoyance at Miss McDermut's presence. By the end of the first semester they had presented her with a class-pin, which she still wears.

The Bureau of Standards was just taking shape when Grace McDermut entered Government work. Then there were only 100 employes. Now there are about 750. Many of the buildings have been built since she entered the bureau.

When Grace McDermut became Mrs. Mulligan she resigned her position with the electrical division so she could give all her time to her new home. But a few years later, when the United States entered the war, the Government was greatly in need of women workers. Mrs. Mulligan was reinstated in the service and was given a job at the Postoffice. Within a few months there was an opening in the weights and measures of the Bureau of Standards and so she went back to the bureau.

Now her time is spent in supervising the volumetric testing of glassware and metal containers for the Government, for the different States, for chemists, physicians and other persons who wish to have volumetric tests made. An average of 13,000 pieces are tested in a year.

Mrs. Mulligan has one son. He wants to be an actor and is now in his third year in the drama course at Carnegie Institute of Technology.

"We rather hoped he would be interested in agriculture," said his mother. "I think there are wonderful opportunities in agriculture. But if he prefers the stage, there is no use trying to interest him in any other line of work."

Mrs. Mulligan remembers well how puzzled her own mother was when Grace McDermut, as a child, preferred inventing mechanical gadgets to playing with dolls.

"As I grew older, mother realized all my interests and talents lay in the direction of mechanics and science. She encouraged me and helped me all she could, although I am sure she must have worried sometimes about my future as an engineer. I suppose all mothers are a little upset when their children choose careers so different from their own. And anyone will admit that acting and engineering are about as far apart as any two professions can be."

Read in tomorrow's Post of a woman who collects information of foods from all over the world.

Now Junior Scientist in Division of Weights and Measures.

Denver to Capital Was Her Progress

The Bureau of Standards consisted of only a few buildings, including the one below, when Mrs. Grace Mulligan entered the bureau as the first woman employe.

Mrs. Mulligan, before coming to Washington, lived in Denver. A familiar landmark of her childhood was Castle Rock (below) on the Denver - Colorado Springs road.

Mothers Make Orators, Dr. Vizatelly Maintains

New York, April 2 (Spl.).—The mother rather than the father is responsible for the child's vocabulary, according to Dr. Frank H. Vizatelly, compiler of dictionaries and National authority on words.

Dr. Vizatelly, who has just celebrated his seventieth birthday, declared in an interview that it was the mother's intuition that helped develop the precocity of a child. He cited his experiences with his 5-year-old granddaughter, Jeanne Vizatelly Cochrane, who he believes knows about 8,000 words. He gave most of the credit for the child's vocabulary to his daughter, Mrs. Norma Cochrane, who is Jeanne's mother.

"Give a woman a normal intelligence in dealing with a child," said Dr. Vizatelly, "and there is no limit to what she can achieve."

Beauty Battle Over Make-up Revived Again

Great Diversity of Opinion Among Prominent Men About Cosmetics.

The old argument over whether plenty of good soap and water is more effective than a beauty shop facial has come to the fore again.

Possible effects of the Tugwell bill to regulate the manufacture and sale of cosmetics is reported to have set masculine circles agog over the prospects of an end of an era of "painted women."

Rumors that hat men generally, in spite of their alleged advancement, were privately urging their wives, sisters and sweethearts to join a "back-to-nature" movement in make-up set a reporter on the trail of Congressmen, artists, beauticians and others who might be interested in the cosmetic problem.

Most of the men were cagey about expressing themselves publicly, but a few were tied down to definite views.

"Most women are beautiful," said Senator Richard B. Russell (Georgia), with a chivalry worthy of the Southern tradition.

"Some are more beautiful without cosmetics, others are improved by using them. While I am not in favor of an extreme make-up, I think cosmetics that enhance natural beauty are quite permissible."

Asked his opinion about the red fingernail polish now so popular, Senator Russell replied that he was "not very enthusiastic about it."

"What? That red stuff?" exclaimed Congressman Francis T. Maloney, of Connecticut, speaking of nail polish. "No, I don't like it; do you? Painted or unpainted, women are all pretty much about the same. I don't know anything about cosmetics. I am in favor of cough syrup and vegetable compounds! Use those and you won't need to know about cosmetics."

"A little toning up us quite helpful," said Congressman John R. Mitchell of Tennessee, thoughtfully. "It think a little powder and rouge are most helpful when applied judiciously. I am not interested in unnatural looking women. I think they should try to bring out their good points, not make themselves look like something they aren't."

Mrs. Minnie L. Briggs, artist, gave both a woman's and an artist's viewpoint.

"I think it every woman's duty to look her best," she said. "And cosmetics are a great help. I don't think they destroy a woman's individuality. On the contrary, a woman's personality can be brought out by the correct use of cosmetics. A woman without make-up nowadays is likely to look insipid and uninteresting beside other women who are wearing make-up."

"Make-up is a great art, which unfortunately is understood by only about 50 per cent of the women who use it," said Emile, president of the National Hairdressers' and Cosmetologists Association.

"Cosmetics, correctly used, are the greatest help women have in being beautiful," he said. "Make-up brings out the good features, accentuates the individuality of the woman. And to tell the truth the average man wouldn't even know a woman was made up, if she didn't do it so badly that it attracted his attention.

"It is the crude make-up that causes men to rage against paint in general. No man wants to take out a girl who looks as if she were an actress ready to go on the stage."

Pastor Upset Over Nation's Gretna Greens

Memphis, Tenn., April 2 (AP). The Rev. John Clarence Petrie took a rap at the "marrying parsons," in America's "Gretna Greens" in an address to the monthly meeting of the Protestant Pastors' Association here today.

Mr. Petrie, minister of the First Unitarian Church, referred to what he termed "the scandal of Elkton, Md.," where he said 4,000 couples a year are married from every State in the Union.

In Elkton, he said, "taxi drivers meet the trains and buses, buttonhole prospects, lead them to the license bureau, the jewelers and finally, the parsons."

Mr. Petrie also took occasion to rap Marion, Ark., just across the Mississippi River from Memphis. He referred to it as "a little town of 1,020 people, where last year 1,800 marriages were performed, mostly of Memphians who wanted to avoid the wise laws of Tennessee, which would make people think twice before marrying."

Mr. Petrie recommended a National uniform marriage and divorce law and the restoration of the reading of marriage bans in church as was the old Christian and contemporary Catholic custom.

Senator Talks On Monetary Value to Club

Democratic Women Hear Thomas, of Utah, on Silver.

Cooperation with ultimate consumers will be an important force in bringing back prosperity, in the opinion of Senator Elbert Duncan Thomas, of Utah, who spoke yesterday before the Women's National Democratic Club.

"And where is the majority of those ultimate cansumers?" Senator Thomas asked. "They are in those countries where there are the most people, such as India and China. In view of this, it is necessary for us to learn all we can about the monetary theories of those countries."

Senator Thomas, whose subject was "Prof. Rogers Goes to China," questioned the necessity of the Rogers' trip, which, he said, was designed to find out whether or not Chinese merchants think the remonetization of silver will help trade with their country.

"Prof. Rogers could probably have learned more about the subject by consulting the people in this country who have given much thought and study to it," said Senator Thomas. "He could have talked with any number of men in the United States who could have told him more, probably, than he will find out from the Chinese themselves."

Since China has an interesting monetary system and unusual theories in regard to the value of exchange, Senator Thomas believes Prof. Rogers is going to find out many things about the country which he does not expect.

"He will learn practically everything in the world is used for exchange, including stones, slugs and coins," asserted Senator Thomas. "And he will be extremely fortunate if he gets any real information about remonetization of silver from Chinese merchants."

In continuing his discussion on monetary values and theories in the Far East, the speaker stressed the idea those nations are particularly desirous of keeping wealth distributed.

"The Chinese will always abide by the Confucian idea," he said. "That is, if the wealth of a nation is gathered in one place, the people are divided; if the wealth is divided, the people are united. We must understand such prevailing ideas as this if we want the cooperation of Far Eastern countries. We must also bear in mind Mexican dollars have a higher value than United States dollars in China today, because the Mexican dollar contains more silver."

Senator Thomas, an authority on the silver question, has spent much time in studying its bearing on monetary policies with Oriental countries.

Inventors Aid Of Modern Eve

No-Run Garters and Copper Bathing Suits Now Provided.

Seattle, April 2 (AP).—Copper bathing suits, "no-run" garters and thousands of other gadgets claimed the attention of inventors at their National congress today.

The "glider garter" of Mrs. Anne Hebner, of Hollywood, Calif., which eases the pull on silk hose when a "run" is imminent, was demonstrated along with a bathing suit woven of copper cloth, for the beach beauty who doesn't want her suit to shrink. The suit came from Phoenix, Ariz.

Mrs. E. E. Baldwin, of Colorado, and Freda L. Hannum, of Seattle, were two other women inventors, the former presenting rubber combs for waving the hair, the latter a bracelet coin container which eliminates the embarrassing moment when milday gets on a street car and fumbles in her bag for a dime.

Five Seattle contributors brought devices for dispensing sugar in lump or granulated form, and dozens of men invented thigumbobs to pare vegetables, cut bread and toast it, ease the washing of egg beaters and solve other kitichen problems.

Mr. and Mrs. O. T. Marchland, of Gates Mills, Ohio, concocted a contrivance that shells lima beans. You put the bean into a device which looks like a pair of pliers, and squeeze, and the bean hasn't a chance.

The kiddies found a fairy godfather in Emil Felden, of Everett, Wash., who constructed a toy chariot in which any young fellow of three summers can be his own Ben Hur.

Elmer Carlstrom, of Swedborg, Mo., and A. L. Elliott, of Denver, took cognizance of the kidnaping problem, with a sleeve tear gas gun to repel gangsters and steel mitts to confine kidnapers when caught.

Honeymoon in Canoe Begun by Ohio Couple

Knoxville, Tenn., April 2 (AP).—Prof. and Mrs. David R. Inglis, of Columbus, Ohio, were paddling down the Tennessee River in a canoe today on a honeymoon trip to Mexico City.

Mr. Inglis is a professor of physics at Ohio State University.

They drove their automobile from Columbus to Rogersville, Tenn., and launched their collapsible rubber and canvas boat in the Holston River, Friday. They arrived here Sunday.

Mr. Inglis said he and his bride intended to take a train at Chattanooga for Memphis, where they will again embark on the Mississippi River for New Orleans. At New Orleans they expect to take a ship to Mexico, where they plan to paddle up rivers to Mexico City.

Legislature Clarified Va. Traffic Law

License Transfer Ruling Is One of Most Important Changes Made.

By John Q. Rhodes.

(Director of the division of motor vehicles and for several years an active member of the House roads committee, while a delegate from Louisa.)

Richmond, April 2 (AP).—If the multiplicity of statutes enacted by the General Assembly of 1934 is a fair criterion for determining its legislation on the subject of motor vehicles and motor vehicle operation, it might easily be assumed that these questions were treated de-novo; however, an examination of the various bills which became law, of which there were 21, will disclose that while the changes in the law were numerous, their purpose was mainly to clarify and make less difficult the administration of the law.

Beginning with the subject of motor vehicle license which is, of course, paramount in importance and interest, it may be explained that license fees for private passenger cars were reduced from 70 cents per 100 pounds to 40 cents per 100 pounds, effective as of March 15, 1934.

License Transfer.

Second only in importance to this revision was the change in the law permitting the transfer of license plates from one owner of a motor vehicle to another. Heretofore, to use a trade expression, motor vehicle license followed the owner and with the adoption of House bill 215, while this practice may be continued, that is, license may be transferred by the licensee from one motor vehicle to another, he may also transfer the license to a purchaser of the motor vehicle for which the license originally was assigned.

All license fees under the new law may be pro-rated only semi-annually instead of quarterly, as was true of the old law. Of interest only to commercial motor vehicle operators known as certificated or franchise carriers, was the repeal of the law permitting the issuance and use of emergency license plates for which only one-fourth of the regular fees were collected.

With the changed law, while this privilege has been abolished, such carriers may use regular plates alternately on vehicles listed with the corporation commission. The motor vehicle code adopted in 1932 made necessary the procurement of "for hire" license by operators of wrecking trucks. This provision was amended so as to permit the use of regular truck license plates on wrecking trucks by garagemen and dealers.

Traffic Rules.

The following changes in traffic rules were effected:

Stop signs, speed signs and other signs erected by the Highway Commissioner or upon authority of municipal officials have heretofore been without force and effect because the law made no provision for the punishment of a motor vehicle operator who ignored them, and to cure this very obvious omission in the law, failure to observe road signs affecting the speed or manner of operation of motor vehicles is made a misdemeanor. Residence and business districts are defined, which was by way of curing a serious omission in the old law.

Passing a school bus while loading or unloading passengers at a speed exceeding five miles per hour is defined as reckless driving and all motor vehicles used primarily for the transportation of school children are required to stop before crossing a railroad track.

An ambiguity in the old law making uncertain the question of whether or not a "hit and run" driver who failed to stop in case the damage was to property instead of to the person, was clarified and under the new law failure to stop, whether the damage was to property or person, is a felony. The Highway Commission is vested with authority to classify roads as to their use, that is, the use of any road may be restricted to vehicles whose weight is less than the maximum, otherwise provided for. This is regarded as an important change in the law.

Observe Fiftieth Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Marshall S. Grumbine (shown above) celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding Sunday at Frederick, Md. They were married in 1884 by the late Rev. Dr. George Diehl, pastor of the Lutheran Church, and have been lifelong residents of Frederick. They are the parents of ten children, seven of whom are living. For 21 years Mr. Grumbine has been caretaker of the courthouse. They received a large number of their friends on the occasion of their anniversary.

St. John's June Class to Hear New President

Amos W. W. Woodcock to Greet Students at Commencement.

Annapolis, Md., April 2 (Spl.).—Amos W. W. Woodcock, recently elected president of St. John's College, Annapolis, to succeed Dr. Douglas H. Gordon, has notified Dr. Reginald G. Ridgeley, acting president, that he will deliver the commencement address at the college June 6.

The former National prohibition administrator, now Assistant United States Attorney General, expects to be in Mexico for some time on Federal business, but said he did not think this engagement would interfere with his coming to Annapolis.

Woodcock is an alumnus of St. John's. The commencement address will be his first formal greeting to the student body.

Dr. Ridgeley has announced the temporary appointment of Evelyn Harrison, of Baltimore City, an alumnus, as procurement officer. His duties will be to contact prospective students.

County May Finish Courthouse Project

Hagerstown, Md., April 2 (Spl.).—If no provision is made by the Government to complete the addition to the Washington County Courthouse here, which is a CWA project, the county will do it itself, the Board of County Commissioners announced.

There is about 30 days' more of work to the new building, which is now under roof.

Historical Parade Set in Winchester

Event Will Be Feature of Apple Blossom Fete.

Winchester, Va., April 2 (Spl.). A feature of the "Trail of the Pink Petal," the grand parade of the Shenandoah Apple Blossom Festival to be held in Winchester early in May, will be a historical section depicting the outstanding events in the Shenandoah Valley. Jack T. Engle, director, has announced.

Organizations which will include the Winchester and Frederick County Historical Society, Fort Loudoun Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution; Turner Ashby Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy; Winchester Civic League, American Legion Auxiliary, Winchester and Clarke County Garden Club, the Century Club, the Junior Century Club, the University Women's Club, the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, the Girls' Athletic Club, and Turner Ashby Camp, Sons of Confederate Veterans.

Virginia Sets Up Auto Check Plan

May Named as Time for Inspections.

Richmond, April 2 (AP).—May has been designated for the first semi-annual State-wide inspection of Virginia automobiles, John Q. Rhodes, director of the division of motor vehicles, announced today.

The division now is in the midst of providing the inspection stations, where automobiles may be checked.

Director Rhodes said there will be approximately 800 inspection stations located throughout the State. Divison officials are seeking to make the stations easily accessible. Mr. Rhodes said the inspection is to be free and the division is eager to have every automobile in the State inspected during the 31-day period.

Maryland Aid Program Saved By U. S. Grant

$1,500,000 Will Be Split Directly Among Local Administrators.

By James C. Mullikin.

Baltimore, April 2—The Federal Relief Administration's grant of $1,500,000 to Maryland for April came just in time to prevent virtual cessation of relief payments in the counties. Harry Greenstein, State relief administrator, said today.

Previously granted county funds have been about exhausted, Greenstein said, and much suffering in the rural areas seems inevitable.

The grant of $1,500,000 to the State relief administration was announced by Greenstein shortly before he began a conference with those in charge of relief work in Baltimore and the counties.

New Policies Revealed.

Greenstein had called the meeting to announce new policies in the distribution of the $1,500,000. He said credit for obtaining the grant should go to Gov. Ritchie and Mayor Jackson of Baltimore.

Spending of the $1,500,000 during April calls for the utmost economy, Greenstein told the relief representatives. Emphasis will be placed on giving relief rather than providing jobs, he said. In "made-work" projects which are to replace the CWA work, he said, only those actually in need of relief will be employed.

Responsible for Funds.

Local officials will be directly responsible for spending the relief funds. In the past the bills for relief work have been paid by drawing on the United States Treasury. Hereafter, funds will be placed at the disposal of the various committees in each of the counties or chief cities.

The "made-work" program, Greenstein said, will be applied chiefly to urban areas, which include the Cities of Baltimore, Cumberland, Hagerstown, Annapolis, Frederick, Salisbury and Cambridge.

Dr. Thomas B. Symons, head of the agricultural extension service, is preparing a rural program, Greenstein said, and an effort will be made to make the population self-sustaining through food crops.

Hi-Y Clubs Plan West Va. Parley

350 Envoys to Meet in Charleston April 14-15.

Charleston, W. Va., April 2 (Spl.). Plans have been made to hold the annual State conference of Hi-Y Clubs April 14 and 15 in Charleston, according to announcement just made by W. C. Arnold, executive secretary of the State Young Men's Christian Association.

Arrangements are being made to entertain 350 State delegates. Samuel Graffin, New York Chautauqua speaker and author, will be a featured speaker. A banquet will be held the evening of April 15.

The meeting will be held under auspices of the Charleston Hi-Y Club, of which Arthur Shawkey is president. Arnold and T. C. McKinley, of the Charleston Y, are in charge of arrangements.

Luray Carrier Ousted As Economy Measure

Luray, Va., April 2 (Spl.).—Ralph Vaughan has lost his job as letter carrier here in the economy wave.

Floyd Foltz, another carrier, will get a reduction of $25 a month. The other half dozen employes at the office also have suffered a reduction.

Allen Studies Plans to Fill Welfare Post

To Discuss Candidates Today With Board Committee.

"No Politics Enter Into This Job," Declares Commissioner.

Candidates for the position of director of public welfare will be discussed today by Commissioner George E. Allen and a special committee of the Board of Public Welfare, which is investigating the qualifications of several persons being considered for the post.

Commissioner Allen said last night that "no politics will enter into the appointment. We are going to get the best man available for the job." The vacancy was made by the application for retirement of George S. Wilson.

Plans for reorganization of the Board of Public Welfare also will be discussed by Commissioner Allen. Assistant Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West has drafted legislation which he will submit to the Commissioner for comment. The legislation is designed to make the welware director immediately responsible to the Board of Commissioners instead of the Welfare Board.

The candidates for the welfare director's job are being studied by W. W. Millan, chairman of the board; Sidney F. Taliaferro and Frederick W. McReynolds.

Among those considered are: Elwood Street, director of the Community Chest; William Hodson, director of public welfare for New York City; James E. Stuart, director of Public Welfare for Hamilton County, Ohio, and formerly head of the District Board of Children's Guardians; Katherine Lenroot, assistant chief of the United States Children's Bureau; W. Frank Parson, director of the Federal Reemployment Service; Robert Lansdale and Aubrey Williams, of the FERA staff.

Gov. Kump Signs Fourteen Measures

Appropriation Bills Among Those to Become Law.

Charleston, W. Va., April 2 (Spl.).—Gov. H. G. Kump has signed 14 bills passed in the closing hours of the recent special session of the legislature and they are now law.

Of the total, 11 were appropriation measures, authorizing $5,000,000 annually for the free schools and $3,000,000 for the State's share of emergency relief. Other appropriation bills provide for State employment offices, the printing department, the offices of the auditor, tax commissioner and attorney general, penitentiary trust funds impounded in closed banks and compensation for two men injured while engaged in State work.

The governor's signature also went on a bill providing a State council to study the State judicial system, a bill requiring sheriffs to give bond for the collection of municipal taxes and bills authorizing four counties to use part of their school funds for general purposes.

Rally Is Planned By Norfolk G. O. P.

State Leaders to Speak at Gathering.

Roanoke, Va., April 2 (Spl.).—Arrangements are being made for a Republican rally of the Sixth and Ninth Districts here April 18. Several State leaders are scheduled to speak.

Heading the list of speakers will be Fred W. McWane, of Lynchburg, former candidate for governor and now secretary and treasurer of the State Republican committee. Others are are T. X. Parsons, chairman of the Roanoke City Republican committee; Mrs. C. O. Gardner, of Montvale, vice chairman of the Sixth District committee, and Mrs. A. S. Higginbotham, of Tazewell, vice chairman of the Ninth District committee. Mrs. Higginbotham is expected to be accompanied by a large delegation from Tazewell and surrounding communities.

Arrangements for the rally are being made by Mrs. Felix K. Parker, vice chairman of the State committee, and Mrs. Earl Haupt, vice chairman of the Roanoke City committee.

Suffering Hits Coast Guard

Reduction of Personnel at St. Helena Station and Transfer of Six Boats Threaten to Leave 100 Families in Destitution.

Norfolk, Va., April 2 (Spl.).—Reduction in the Coast Guard personnel and the transfer of six 125-foot patrol boats to other stations have worked hardship on families of enlisted men, it was stated at headquarters here today.

The Government makes no provision for transferring the families of service men under the rank of chief petty officer, but in the Coast Guard men attached to a station after a certain term of service came to the conclusion that their jobs were permanent, married and took on other obligations.

Now 100 of these men, all attached to the St. Helena Station, are under orders that threaten to break up their homes or separate them from their families. The result has been appeals from women, some with children, for action on behalf of the men of the local division to save their homes and to preserve the family life.

Despite all that can be done, it is likely that at least 50 per cent of these married men will have to give up home and family here.

On $54 a month, less 10 per cent cut by the Government, it will be no easy matter for them to support their wives here when they are ordered elsewhere, often to far-distant posts.

Capt. W. J. Wheeler, commander of the division, today was in Baltimore and is expected to go to Washington to take up various matters with officials in regard to the enlisted men and their families. His chief of staff, Commander W. A. Benham, said that he could not discuss the matter, but as acting personnel officer he could not help but understand the dire distress of men and families.

Six Youths Hurt In Norfolk Crash

Norfolk, Va., April 2 (AP).—Six youths were injured, three seriously, yesterday when the roadster in which they were riding skidded and overturned in the path of a street car on Ocean View Boulevard. The street car struck the automobile and carried it some distance.

Joe Thomas, 19, half back on the Maury High School team for the past two seasons, was the driver of the roadster, and was the most seriously injured. His left foot was cut off just above the ankle. He also suffered a probably skull fracture.

Frederick Drops Second Case And Lists Slaying 'Unsolved'

Luther Jackson Released Without Trial in Stabbing Death of Dorsey Gilbert; Third Mystery Murder in Past Five Years.

Frederick, Md., April 2 (Spl.).—The slaying of Dorsey Gilbert, 29, near Wolfsville, was listed in Frederick Circuit Court as an unsolved murder today when State's Attorney Walter E. Sinn announced that he had postponed the case indefinitely. Luther Jackson, 35, indicted for the murder, was released Saturday.

Gilbert was stabbed to death at the home of Glenn Kline in a remote section of the Catoctin Mountain last November. Jackson, Albert Bradenburg and Gilbert met at Kline's home Thanksgiving Eve and after an alleged drinking party became involved in a fight. During the melee Gilbert was slashed across the abdomen, staggered out of the house and fell in the yard. About two hours later was taken to the City Hospital here, where he died. Bradenburg was slightly cut. Kline and Jackson were arrested. Each blamed the stabbing on the other.

Kline was tried about two weeks ago and acquitted. Jackson's trial was scheduled for the following day, but as the prosecution depended upon the testimony given in the Kline case, State's Attorney Sinn postponed the hearing pending the discovery of new evidence, which failed to materialize.

The case is the third unsolved murder in Frederick County in recent years. About five years ago David M. Crist, merchant of Walkersville, was shot and killed as he was about to enter his home late at night. Shortly before that, the body of a man with his skull crushed was found near Point of Rocks. Identity of neither the victim nor the murderer was ever ascertained. Police believed the man was probably taken for a "ride" from Washington or Balitimore.

Shots Fail to Stop 4 Bandit Suspects

Charles Town Policeman Thrown From Auto.

Charles Town, W. Va., April 2 (Spl.).—Several shots fired by a policeman today failed to capture an automobile carrying four men suspected of having held up a Winchester (Va.) filling station a few hours earlier.

Patrolman T. W. Allen succeeded in stopping the car, but as he stepped on the running board to question the men he was thrown to the ground and the machine sped eastward.

Patrolman Henry Littge, at the next corner, shot five times at the car, piercing the windows, but the machine did not stop.

Disciples of Izaak Walton Whip Flies as Season Opens

Baltimore, April 2 (Spl.).—Trout streams in Maryland drew hundreds of anglers today as the spring game fishing season began. Some 34,000 trout have been liberated in State streams to provide sport for fishermen of Western Maryland and Washington.

The game fishing began legally yesterday in all counties except Garrett. That county has a law against fishing on Sunday, so anglers did not start the sport until today.

In addition to the 34,000 fish liberated over the week-end, about 10,000 additional trout are being kept in reserve at State hatcheries, State Conservation Commissioner Swepson Earle announced today.

A fishing license in counties not in the tidewater section costs residents $1.25 each, while nonresidents are charged $5.50. Last year approximately 13,000 permits were issued.

3 Indicted, Tried, Sentenced in Hour

Luray, Va., April 2 (Spl.).—Six days ago, Harry McInturff, Robert Rush and Carl Shiflett, Rockingham County youths, were arrested in Cherrydale on an automobile theft charge.

Today, a special grand jury indicted them.

Within an hour they had been tried in the Page County Circuit Court and sentenced to one and a half years each in the penitentiary.

Fire Probe Fails To Place Blame

None Found Responsible in Lynchburg Tragedy.

Harry L. Hopkins, Federal relief administrator, said yesterday he had found no one responsible for the Lynchburg, Va., Transient Home fire tragedy, in which 17 men lost their lives, the Associated Press reports.

Stating that the report of Alan Johnstone, Southeastern relief field representative, would not be made public, Mr. Hopkins said he regarded the fire as owing to "a combination of unfortunate circumstances."

He said the men in the 263 transient centers throughout the country are being removed as fast as possible to the 50 camps located outside metropolitan areas.

Virginian Is Killed By Overdose Drug

D. D. Davis, Woodstock, Held Victim of Accident.

Woodstock, Va., April 2 (Spl.).—Delmar D. Davis, 62, retired salesman, was found dead in his home here last night.

Coroner William C. Ford declared Davis' death as accidental, due to an overdose of a drug. Mr. Davis, who had been living alone for several days while his family was out of town, was found by a neighbor, Landon Fravel.

Dr. Ford said the State chemist would be requested to analyze pills found near Mr. Davis' body to determine their contents.

Surviving are his wife; three sons, Carter, Douglas and Durus, all of Washington, and one daughter, Miss Virginia Davis, of Woodstock.

St. John's College Emeritus Honored

Dr. Fell Given Luncheon by Former Students.

Baltimore, April 2 (Spl.).—Former students of Dr. Thomas Fell, president emeritus of St. John's College at Annapolis, honored him at a luncheon here today at the Southern Hotel. A traveling case was presented to the educator.

Dr. Fell, who served for 37 years as president of the college, was cheered by "his boys." Most of them he knew by their first names, and he greeted them as "Bob," "Don," "Charles," &c.

He came to the United States from England in 1886 to take charge of St. John's, and retired from the presidency in 1923.

Frederick Creeks Draw Fishermen As Season Opens

Frederick, Md., April 2 (Spl.).—Hundreds of anglers, including scores from Washington, Baltimore and adjoining sections of Virginia and West Virginia yesterday lined the banks of Fishing, Hunting and Tuscarora Creeks, the largest mountain streams in Frederick County, as the trout season opened for 90 days.

The opening day's crowd was above the record peak of last year and but few fishermen were reported to have made the bag limit of ten for the day. Many of the anglers camped along the banks of the streams and started to fish at the stroke of 12 o'clock. The caretaker at the Fishing Creek receiver counted 190 cars near the dam.

The largest fish was landed by a young man named Rice, who hooked a 3½-pound trout from Fishing Creek. Other trout ranged from 15 to 18 inches. A total of 1,650 fishing licenses were issued.

University to Hear Cummings Speak

Attorney General to Give Lecture Series.

Charlottesville, Va., April 2 (Spl.).—"Liberty" will be the subject of a series of three lectures to be delivered by Attorney General Homer Cummings at the University of Virginia on April 16, 17 and 18.

Mr. Cummings will come to the university under the William H. White Foundation for legal lectures.

He will discuss aspects of "Liberty Under Law" and "Liberty Under Administration."

H. C. Voorhees, 48, Dead at Bolivar

Bolivar, W. Va., April 2 (Spl.).—Henry C. Voorhees, 48, a native of Berryville, Va., died at his home here after an extended illness.

He was active in volunteer firemen's affairs, and had been employed for 17 years in a limestone concern near here. The widow survives.

Services will be conducted tomorrow morning from St. Peter's Catholic Church at Harpers Ferry, with interment there.

EWA Grant Of $800,000 Hires 15,000

Hopkins to Allot Same Sum for City Projects in May, June.

D. C. Employes to Work Alternate Weeks to Spread Labor.

To defray the costs of District relief for the month of April, $800,000 was allotted yesterday by Federal Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins after a brief conference with Commissioner George E. Allen.

The grant assures jobs for approximately 15,000 worker. of whom 8,000 are on the rolls as holdovers from the CWA program. The work planning and job assigning committee of the EWA started immediately on a program of reemploying persons who had been dismissed during the demobilization of the CWA.

Commissioner Allen returned from a week's vacation in St. Augustine, Fla., and met Mr. Hopkins at 3 p. m. The announcement of the allotment came a few minutes after the conference began. Some confusion existed late last week because of a ministerpretation of a message from Federal headquarters, which carried with it an allotment of $150,000.

Initial Allotment.

Relief officials were of the opinion that this was to be the allotment for the whole month, and they were of the opinion that the projects planned would have to be greatly curtailed. An explanation from Federal headquarters announced that this was merely an initial grant to pay expenses, pending yesterday's conference.

"I told Mr. Hopkins that the District needed $800,000 for April, and he replied, 'You can have it,'" said Commissioner Allen.

Commissioner Allen was accompanied by District Auditor Daniel J. Donovan, Capt. Howard F. Clark, executive officer of the new program, and a number of relief officials. They were not required to go into explanations of their $800,000 request, because the detailed items had been submitted last week.

May, June Allotments.

Assurances were given by Mr. Hopkins that a similar allotment would be available for the District for May and June, so long as present conditions exist. He asked Commissioner Allen, however, to spread the money so that as many jobs as possible could be assigned.

The work planning committee already has approved projects to cost $2,000,000, of which 90 per cent will be spent in wages and 10 per cent for materials. There are approximately 7,000 workers who are expected to be given jobs on the new program. In order to obtain a job it is necessary that the applicant be on the relief rolls. He is given a "work card" by Emergency Relief and this card is taken to the Emergency Works Administration. Then the applicant is given sufficient work to earn for him in wages what he would otherwise receive as direct relief.

Capt. Clark announced yesterday it is planned to work employes in alternate weeks so there will be an opportunity for them to find employment in private industry. The workers will be principally engaged in tree planting, improving playgrounds, and painting, repairing, and remodeling District and Federal Buildings.

In the $800,000 allotment are: $33,000 for transient relief; $225,000 for direct relief; $375,000 for work relief and $40,000 for materials.

Mrs. T. T. Fitzpatrick Dies.

Clarksburg, W. Va., April 2 (Spl.).—Mrs. Martha Jane Lowther Fitzpatrick, 50, wife of Theodore T. Fitzpatrick, transportation executive of the Monongahela utility system, is dead as the result of a heart attack. Services will be tomorrow.

Good morning! It is interesting to us to observe how many men in these latitudes now use a topcoat twelve months in the year instead of an overcoat for six months. A Schloss Topcoat is just right for cold April days and chilly nights. And the price range is $22.50 to $50.00.

Runyan Adds 66 and 67 to Win Cavalier Open With Sensational 270

Score Is One Of Lowest Recorded

Winter Golf King Has 10-Stroke Margin Over Cooper.

CAVALIER COUNTRY CLUB, Virginia Beach, Va., April 2 (AP). — Paul Runyan, little White Plains, N. Y., professional, celebrated the end of the winter golfing tour here today by winning the Cavalier Open with 270, one of the lowest 72-hole scores in tournament history.

In the last competition of the 1933-34 campaign Runyan, by far the leading money winner of the year, added another $300 to his bulging purse by shooting the four rounds in 69, 68, 66, 67—270 and finished 8 shots ahead of Harry Cooper.

Runyan's feat of carding each of the rounds in less than 70 is an accomplishment that seldom has been equaled. Once before the diminutive 25-year-old youngster turned the trick, at Miami in an event where 6-inch cups were used.

Professionals recalled that Bill Melhorn's 271 at El Paso some time ago was perhaps the lowest 72-hole total in a major tournament. The fact that winter rules were observed here and that the course is only 6,000 yards in length detracts little from Runyan's great play.

Comes Back Strongly.

Tied for the lead after the first round with 69, Runyan shot a 68 in the second, but fell behind Harry Cooper's great 64 for a course record. However, he came back this morning with a 66 to forge 6 strokes ahead and added 2 more strokes to his margin with his closing 67 this afternoon.

Runyan's total was just 10 strokes under the 280 with which he won here last year.

Cooper, who slipped to 75 this morning, came home with a par 68 in the last round to grab second position and $250 in prize money.

Tied for third place were Bill Melhorn and Ky Laffoon. They were together in second place at 209 as the last round started and both turned in 72's.

Craig Wood, who put on another fine finish with 68—69 today was alone at 282, while Horton Smith and Bobby Cruickshank were grouped at 283. Smith had a 70 in the final round and Cruickshank a 68.

Denny Shute, British open champion, and victor Ghezzi were back at 285. After starting with a 75, Ghezzi found his control to shoot the last three rounds in 71—69—70.

Tommy Armour had 289, while Chandler Harper, Portsmouth State champion who won the amateur honors, had 290.

Makes Two Mistakes.

Runyan, who had two other low score victories this year, 276 at Belleair and 273 at Charleston, made only two mistakes on his morning round of 66, playing his second shot timidly on the first hole and sending his tee shot into a trap on the short eighteenth. Two errors were all that were charged against him on the 67 he shot this afternoon, as he missed the green on the short fifth and was trapped on the sixteenth. He had seven birdies on the two rounds.

After the third round it was apparent that Runyan had the tournament won and the battle for second place claimed attention with Laffoon and Melhorn finally losing their slender advantage as Cooper flashed ahead of them with his 68.

The Money Winners.

Harry Cooper	71	64	75	68	—278	$250

Tynan and Lynch Star as Miami U. Fails to Earn a Point.

MIAMI BILTMORE CLUB, Coral Gables, Fla., April 2 (Spl.).—Capt. Walter Tynan led his Georgetown University Golf Team to a smashing 6—0 victory over a highly touted University of Miami team this afternoon. It was Tynan's spectacular comeback that featured today's match. Standing on the sixteenth tee 2 down, the Hoya captained evened the match on the seventeenth green and then won out on the eighteenth hole when his opponent, George Chubb, missed his tee shot and was forced to take a penalty shot.

In defeating Sid Carson, 6 and 4, Joe Lynch toured the tricky Miami-Biltmore course in the low score of 72. Coming to the eighteenth tee, Lynch was even to par, but in playing the eighteenth hole the Hoya star's third shot found a bunker and he was forced to take a 6.

Twosomes—Joe Lynch (G.), defeated Sid Carson (M.), 6 and 4; Walt Tynan (G.), defeated George Chubb (M.), 1 up; Don O'Brien (G.), defeated John Slocum (M.), 7 and 6; Dick McPartlin (G.), defeated Joe O'Day (M.), 6 and 4. Second—Lynch and Tynan (G.), defeated Carson and Chubb (M.), 4 and 3; O'Brien and McPartlin (G.), defeated Slocum and O'Day (M.), 7 and 6.

Field Trials Listed At Worton April 13-15

Worton, Md., April 2 (Spl.).—The Tristate Sportsmen's Club has completed arrangements for its annual spring field trials, April 13 to 15, inclusive, on the grounds of the Tristate Yacht Club at Worton Creek, according to Secretary Alfred A. Browne, of Morton, Pa. The first stake will be run the first day, open to all ages, followed by the open derby. The amateur derby will be started the following day, followed by the amateur all age. The bench show will be staged April 14.

Mat Trimble, of Pearson, Md., and Dr. Parke L. Longnecker, of Philadelphia, will judge the open stakes, while Dr. J. E. Dunwoody, of Philadelphia, and Langdon Idiorne, of Narberth, Pa., will judge the amateur event. Dr. Dunwoody will also judge the bench show. Headquarters will be at the clubhouse and the events will follow the trials at Medford, Lambertville and Jockey Hollow, with owners and trainers moving to Towson, Md., for the Oriole trials afterward.

Record Crowd Sees Cobble Hunt Meet

The McCarthy and Horgan estates in the Blue Ridge foothills near Delaplane, Va., were the scene of lively festivities yesterday as about 1,000 spectators watched more than 100 representatives of Virginia's famous hunting stock participate in the annual hunter trials of the Cobbler Hunt. Both the audience and entry list were probably the largest that ever watched or participated in any hunter trials in northern Virginia.

Henry Vaughan, president of the American Foxhunters Association and former M. F. H. for 30 years of the Norfolk Hunt in Boston, acted as a judge and donated the trophy for hunt staff teams. The other judges were Lieut. Col. Kenyon Joyce, commandant of Fort Myer, and Maj. Wilfrid Blunt, M. F. H., of the Riding and Hunt Club.

The results:

Joint masters' cup (women who have hunted with the Cobbler Hounds during the season 1933-34)—Keanakolu, owned and ridden by Miss Beatrice Patton, first; Quick Silver, owned and ridden by Mrs. George Patton, jr., second; Twilight, owned and ridden by Miss Louise Okie, third.

Masters' cup (men who have hunted with the Cobbler Hounds during the season 1933-34)—Brother, owned and ridden by Dr. Carl D. Lanahone, first; Lock Box, owned and ridden by J. W. Adams, second; Greenwood, owned and ridden by Jack McCarty, third.

Marshall Bain Cup (women members of any recognized hunt club)—Lord McGee, owned by Tom Waller and ridden by Miss Emily North King, first; Swiftly Home, owned and ridden by Mrs. F. P. Wyche, second; Pardner, owned by Wallace Kenyon and ridden by Miss Anne Kenyon, third.

Marshall Motor Co. Cup (men members of any recognized hunt club)—Hukupu, owned and ridden by Lieut. Col. George S. Patton, jr., first; Lord McGee, owned by Tom Waller and ridden by Fred Anderson, second; Sin Cuidado, owned by Mrs. Robert C. Winmill and ridden by William Street, third.

Cavalry Cup (Army officers)—Broomfield, owned and ridden by Lieut. Kenneth Hoge, Fort Myer, first; Craftsman, owned by the Government and ridden by Lieut. S. Henry Ferr Myer, second; Pot Gilreath, owned by the Government and ridden by Lieut. Andrew Hero, third.

Henry Vaughan Cup (teams of three members of any hunt staff)—Blue Ridge Hunt (Graham Daugherty, acting M. F. H. and paid whips), first; Warrenton Hunt (William Street, honorary whip and paid whips), second; Cobbler Hunt (Lieut. Col. George S. Patton, M. F. H. and paid huntsman and whip), third.

West Va. Guards List Pro Boxing on April 18

Fairmont, W. Va., April 2 (Spl.).—With Tom Lewis and Charles Marsh as matchmakers, thee companies of the 201st Regiment of the West Virginia National Guard will present a professional boxing show to the public the night of April 18 at the guard armory here. Company A and the Headquarters and Service companies are promoting the event.

The card will comprise four six-round bouts featuring a match between Ross Fields, of Weirton, nationally ranked No. 5 in the bantamweight class, and Young Terry, of Cleveland. In the semifinals, Frankie Reilly, of Fairmont, will meet Leo Rittenour, of Akron, and Young Scotty, of Akron, will have a go with Clara Repole, of Steubenville, Ohio, in the other bouts.

Cold Forces Baer To Get New Camp

Shift to Manager's Fari Oaks Ranch Planned.

Globin's Lake Tahoe, Calif., April 2 (AP).—Max Baer, training for his world's championship fight with Primo Carnera, decided today to seek a warmer climate before resuming his conditioning grind.

A bitterly cold wind swept this mountain lake resort and, after chopping down a good-sized pine tree this morning, Max announced he could do a better job of training in the sunshine of the Sacramento Valley.

As a result, Baer, his trainers and managers, planned to leave tonight for Fari Oaks, Calif., where the manager, Ancil Hoffman, has a ranch.

By Dave Herman.

They are the District's most promising young amateur players, and veteran links observers are of the opinion they are ripe enough to step out into big-time competition and emulate the glamorous feats of Roland Mackenzie and George Voigt, the last two District golfers to distinguish themselves in National championships.

Peacock, 22 years old, a former Duke University golf captain, has carved out the greatest record of the trio. Twice a participant in the National Amateur, he has missed making the match play grade by a few strokes each time. In 1932, at Five Farms, a rebellious putter ruined his chances. Last season at Kenwood, near Cincinnati, erratic driving tossed him into the golfing doldrums during the qualifying round.

Peacock Rated as Star.

Yet, Peacock is considered one of the finest young players ever turned out in this section. He dethroned Harry Pitt as District champion in 1932 with four sparkling rounds of golf at Chevy Chase. The previous year he captured the District junior title. Last year, he decisioned Luther Steward, jr., for the Congressional Invitation. A month later, he won the Maryland State Amateur over his home course, Indian Spring. In so doing, he became the first District golfer in the history of the event to win this championship. The remarkable feature of his victory was the fact that he played 141 holes in 2 under par. He served warning right off the bat by scoring a 32 on the first nine of the medal round. In the finals against Harry Pitt, he was 4 down, yet won by a decisive margin.

To Lunn, the 18-year-old Princeton freshman, fell the honor of being the youngest wearer of the District championship. The strapping Chevy Chase blond, much to the surprise of the golfing fraternity, defeated Peacock in a stirring playoff by one shot for the title at Indian Spring. Putting told the story of this event.

Lunn's 30-Footer Decides.

Peacock four-putted the fourth to lose the lead, and Lunn put over the killing blow with a sensational 30-footer for a deuce on the seventeenth. That's golf for you. In addition to qualifying for the National Amateur, Lunn last year won the Chevy Chase Invitation by trimming Maury Nee in the finals on the nineteenth hole. He did it with the aid of a great spoon second. Lunn's 67 in the club championship, which he won, was studded with expert shot-making.

Nee, 18 years old, won the District junior title in 1932, qualified for the National Amateur the same year, and missed the select match-play circle by a few shots, due to a weird second round. His 67 during the qualifying round of the Chevy Chase Invitation last year was a scoring masterpiece. It tied the all-time city amateur record, of which Voigt, Miller B. Stevinson, and Ernie Caldwell are the co-holders.

Bowie Stake To Miney Myerson

Curacao Is Second and Character Third to 5-to-1 Winner.

Character just in back of him. Miney Myerson won with something in reserve and collected $1,460 for Owner Ogle.

Miney Myerson marked the second horse of the day to be marched off to the stalls for the saliva test, the new racing wrinkle. Ilchester had become the first to undergo the test a race before. These were the two winners drawn by lot. Specimens of the saliva will be shipped to the chemists. If they are positive, the public positively will not get its money back.

If The Pelican had a nose as long as the beak of the bird from which he gets his name, his No. 6 would have been hung in the winning slot on the mutuel board after the secondary feature, dubbed the Norma Shearer Trophy.

Ilchester Gets Purse.

As it was the No. 4 of Ilchester, owned and trained by the Washington Truemans, was displayed and for the lack of a narrower designation the chartmakers called it a nose. Betters, especially those backers of The Pelican to the left of the finish, called it robbery. However, the booers are in poor form yet awhile and could hardly be heard above the cries of joy from the Ilchesterites.

The finish had all the earmarks of a story-book ending, with Jockey Earl Porter in the hero role. He piloted The Pelican, which broke slowly. Irene's Bob and Ilchester hooked up in a duel before a sixteenth of the six-furlong sprint had passed. The Pelican was having his troubles keeping from being last. There was no indication that other than the first two would figure in the principal dash for the finish line until, with a sixteenth to go, The Pelican suddenly shot forward under a terrific pumping by Porter to pass the tiring Irene's Bob and collar Ilchester. Two yards past the wire, The Pelican was a half length ahead.

Up and Up First Victor.

To the Greentree Stable went the honor of being first to enter the winner's circle for the Maryland season. Up and Up, a son of Upset, galloped home for the favorite players in the 4-furlong dash which drew a rollicking field of eleven maiden juveniles. Silvo Coucci had the mount on Up and Up and popped his mount into the lead at the break of the barrier and was never headed. Whoa Back, a long shot was second, a length behind, with Evangelist third by two lengths. Up and Up, heavily played on Florida form, paid a $6 mutuel. Whoa Back was a $31 proposition for place.

The combination of a Florida horse and the favorite again scored in second race over the 6-furlong course. Mrs. M. N. Bond's In High was the winner but it took a masterful ride by Jimmy Hunter to turn to the trick. Belle Fille was second and Trillium third.

In High broke behind Time Enough but Hunter soon had his mount in front where three horses took a crack at the Bond speedster. Happy Anne, Trillium and finally Belle Fille tried to displace In High but, under heavy stick work from Hunter, the gelding lasted to take the decision by a neck. In High rewarded with a $5.40 pay-off.

Porter, Blue Foam on Top.

Porter, the reigning jockey sensation, gave Bowie fans a demonstration of his best riding to triumph with Mrs. John Hay Whitney's Blue Foam in the third race which marked the first victory for a horse that wintered in the North. Corrymeela and My Boss were the place and show horses while Peedeequе, the favorite, began far back and made nothing resembling a stretch run. Blue Foam was far behind the pace made by Corrymeela but gained steadily on the swing for the stretch but it was not until the last quarter that Porter collared the leader to win by a half length. Blue Foam paid a substantial $19.80 mutuel.

Joey Jacobs, the 18-year-old New Orleans boy who is close on the trail of Earl Porter for the 1934 jockey lead as a result of his brilliant record compiled in New Orleans, sat motionless while his mount, Butter Beans, beat Everfair, ridden by Pop, in the sixth race. Favorite at $4.50 for $2, Butter Beans was a handy winner by a half length. High Socks was third. Admirably rated in the early running, the favorite took command at the far turn and held Everfair safe when the latter challenged in the stretch.

BOBBY GOLDSTEIN.

Appendicitis Attack Hits Goldstein

Capital Boxing Star to Undergo Operation Here Today.

BOBBY GOLDSTEIN'S return match with Norment Quarles, North Carolina lightweight, scheduled to be held in Richmond, April 23, has been indefinitely postponed because of a diseased appendix for which the Washington boxer will be operated on today. The operation on Goldstein, a graduate of the University of Virginia, who is now studying law at George Washington University, will be performed this morning at the George Washington Hospital by Dr. Edward Caffitz.

Goldstein suffered from what was believed to be a stomach ailment a week before his last encounter with Quarles, which was held in Richmond, March 19, but recuperated in time to partially complete his training and drop a dubious decision to the Carolina Clouter. Following a recurrence of the trouble last week, an extensive X-ray examination was made which disclosed a condition requiring an immediate operation.

Sought Return Match.

Following the Richmond encounter, the second which Goldstein lost indecisively to Quarles, Promoter Walter Heenan made an immediate ing boxers from collegiate ranks. effort to rematch the two outstand-He encountered some difficulty in pressed the belief that he had consigning the Tarheel Tartar, who expressed the belief that he had conclusively demonstrated his superiority over Goldstein, but ultimately signed on the dotted line.

The recent Richmond bout, held in the city auditorium, attracted a near-capacity crowd of 4,000 at a time when the majority of Goldstein's erstwhile schoolmates at the University of Virginia were unable to be present because of examinations. The return bout had been scheduled for the Mosque, which has a much larger seating capacity, in anticipation of greatly increased attendance.

William and Mary Nine Breaks Even

Cops First of Twin Bill With Vermont, 6-3; Loses, 10-8.

Williamsburg, Va., April 2 (AP).—The University of Vermont and William and Mary nines divided a double-header here this afternoon in the opening contests for both schools. The Indians won the first, 6 to 3, and the Green Mountain nine batted out a 10 to 8 triumph in the seven-inning finale.

Stewart, William and Mary catcher, topped a four-hit barrage off Layden with a screaming homer to deep center as the Indians pushed five runs across the platter in the third inning to cinch the first game.

Stretch Kirley, pinch hitting for Degree, Vermont third baseman, rifled a single to short right in the seventh inning of the second to send Palmer and Werner home for the Green and Gold victory.

Strideaway Is Winner At Arlington Downs

Arlington, Tex., April 2 (AP). Strideaway, 4-year-old colt from W. T. Waggoner's Three D's Stock Farm, came from behind in the stretch to win the mile feature at Arlington Downs today.

Mrs. A. M. Creech's Terrier was the first away from the barrier and led to the head of the stretch. Strideaway moved into second place at the three-quarter mark, however, and in the drive for the judges' stand easily passed Terrier and then went on to win by a length. Mrs. A. A. Baron's Madwind was third in the field of six.

Despite the fact he ran eleventh the last time out, Strideaway was well backed, paying $5.10 after running the eight furlongs in 1:39 1-5.

Nats to Give Stone Use Of Speed

Fleetness Is Pleasing to Club; Prim Facing Mound Test.

BILOXI, Miss., April 2. — Joe Cronin is going to take the shackles off Johnny Stone and give him license to run the bases this season, according to the unmistakable signs of late at the Biloxi ball yard where the Nats are polishing their rough edges for the day when the shootin' starts, on April 16.

With his feet itching to run, Stone was a caged Tiger at Detroit last year, stealing only one base in 148 games and Cronin is seriously intent on capitalizing on the native speed of the stream-lined outfielder the Nats acquired in exchange for Goose Goslin whose wings on the base lines were clipped last year by an old leg injury.

Today, Cronin had the fleet Stone scampering around the paths ahead of the throws of Catcher Elmer Klumpp and drifting into the bags with faultless form while the Nats' manager nodded approvingly and revelled in the prospect of an added base-running threat for his club.

Shackled at Detroit.

Stone came to the Nats with a record of having stolen only three bases in the last two years with Detroit, despite the fact that he didn't miss a half dozen ball games in both seasons, which leaves it to Manager Bucky Harris to explain Stone's base-running lapse after having stolen 13 bases in 1931, a figure that landed him among the leaders in the art.

With the Nats acknowledged to be the leading base-running club of the league last year with such speedsters as Buddy Myer, Heinie Manush, Fred Schulte and Joe Kuhel carrying on, Stone's acquisition is expected to establish them even more firmly as a threat-loaded team on the bases, and Cronin plans to use the steal and hit-and-run signs with a deal more frequency.

Stone is ideally situated in the Nats' batting order for hit-and-run purposes what with Heinie Manush following him in the batter's box. If there is a better man on the hitting end of a hit-and-run play than Manush, Dillinger is a paragon of virtue. Manush's ability to hit behind the runner, that is, hit to right field, has been amply demonstrated, and Washington fans are due to see Stone taking two bases on singles, standing up.

Russell Gives Him Test.

They had Jack Russell out there in the box today while Stone was stealing everything but the catcher's heart, which is another way of saying that they weren't doing Stone any favors. Cronin will tell you that Russell has the best "move" toward first base of any pitcher in the league and that the man who steals a base on him is entitled to it.

Cronin plans to get another glimpse of his new pride, Rary Prim, tomorrow when the Nats meet the Naval Air Base team, from Pensacola, Fla., in a game that will provide a workout for the irregulars. The Nats' manager, who has had his fill of punk exhibition games, will send the regulars out to the ball yard for their regular workout in the morning and assign the yannigans to protect the fair name of Washington against the Aviators in the afternoon.

Jack Russell will divide the pitching duties with Prim tomorrow, but it is the latter whom Cronin will be watching more intently. There are well-defined suspicions here at the Nats' camp that Prim will be a valuable adjunct to a Washington pitching staff that is crying for reinforcements and Cronin has been visibly impressed with the southpaw from Albany.

Runs, Hits and Errors.

Hold-out Cliff Bolton is the forgotten man of the Nats . . . Griffith vows he has received no word from Bolton since March 18 . . . If Bluege is on third base when the season opens, Cronin will have won his point . . . Griffith is backing Travis . . . The Nats refused to indorse a certain brand of hats in return for a hat gratis for each player . . . Al Schacht is en route to New York for treatment to his teeth . . . Mark Filley, the pitcher, who belongs to Albany, is the Joe College of the Nats' camp . . . Cronin will keep strings on him . . . Howard Conn will be with the Nats all season as a batting-practice pitcher . . . Because he has control and doesn't waste any pitches . . . Griffith, Whitehill, Burke and Crowder, the southpaw foursome, are a menace to the neighbors near the golf links . . . Erudite Moe Berg has been subscribing to a Paris paper for 12 years . . . Covelli Is Odds-on Favorite to Beat Von Reedon in Portner's Fight Tonight

Winner Gets Bout With Sarron

Von Reedon, Improving, May Upset Dope; Four Other Bouts.

FRANKIE COVELLI, who goes to the post an odds-on favorite over Dark Horse Charley Von Reedon in the two-horse race for featherweight honors to be staged at Portner's tonight, may emerge a selling plater. In fact, he was accused of being a selling plater in his last local appearance, when he and Benny Britt were ruled off by the Portner's stewards, who refused to be convinced that the boys were swinging fists with earnest endeavor.

When Covelli was set down for life in Maryland, following a bout in which he again was accused of not striving mightily, many who believed that his efforts here against Britt were sincere began to doubt. Tonight is make or break so far as Washington's fight fanatics are concerned, and it behooves the Brooklyn beak buster to turn in a performance sparkling with do or die and sink or swim, if he cares to again maul the local atmosphere with his roundhouse swings.

Covelli Star When Right.

A return to the form Covelli displayed against Pete Sarron, whom he upset in his local debut, presages an ill wind for Von Reedon. When working his best, Covelli is a whirlwind boxer, who punches smartly with either hand, particularly with his left.

Von Reedon has been steadily improving, and many believe he is ready to hurdle the Brooklyn Italian and make himself indispensable for the next Sarron match, which should be held very shortly, inasmuch as Pete has just returned from Florida to our climate with the spring sunshine.

Von Reedon is a very capable boxer, who snaps a wicked straight left and crosses an occasional punishing right. He moves about the ring like the poetry of motion, and although he has been suspected of tenderness in the brisket, no one has been able to nail him solidly enough there in his last two fights to confirm the suspicion.

Davis to Battle Gross.

In a six-round semifinal, Roddy Davis will be dusted off and set to work against one Morris Gross. Davis' return from the mothballs is eagerly awaited by some ringworms, who regard the Northeast lightweight as an up and coming prospect. In another six, Pete Galiano meets Dominick Nicco.

Three fours will complete the card. In them, Al Dintaman boxes Joe Transparente, Little Montana mixes with Nick Transparente, and Bill Howell engages Stanford Carrier.

Around the Ring Selections—Covelli over Van Reedon, Davis to decision Gross, Caliano over Nicco, Dintaman to beat Joe Transparente, Little Montana over Nick Transparente and Carrier to decision Howell.

Miller Fights Dazzo At Louisville May 4

Louisville, Ky., April 2 (U.P.).—The Kentucky Boxing Commission today sanctioned a 15-round bout between Freddy Miller, featherweight champion, from Cincinnati, and Paul Dazzo, of Chicago. The bout will be held on May 4, the eve of the Kentucky Derby, and will substitute for a proposed fight between Barney Ross and Dominick Manceni.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

Strange as it seems, only three women were ever pictured on United States postage stamps—and they were a Spanish Queen, and Indian Princess, and a First Lady of the Land. The women so honored were closely associated in American history with the discovery, settlement, and independence of what is now the United States.

First in the drawing above is Queen Elizabeth of Spain, who played an important part in the discovery of America by aiding in the financing of Columbus' historic trip. Martha Washington, as the wife of the first President of the United States, is an outstanding character in early American history. The Indian Princess Pocahontas is remembered as an important figure in the early days of American colonization.

No other women, according to the Postoffice Department, have been so honored individually. While other feminine figures have appeared on postage stamps they were of an abstract nature and not intended to represent particular persons. This is true of the recent NRA postage stamp series in which a feminine figure was used to represent American womanhood as a whole.

Bowie Race Track, April 2.

Dear Al:

Some day about 20 years from now one of your grandchildren may come home late for supper and say, "Grandpop, I saw the closest finish in racing history today." Then you put down your ear trumpet, adjust your specs and go right on with your reading. The daddy of all close finishes was yesterday. It involved The Pelican and Ilchester. The former was coming like an express train and the latter was stopping as if he had hit a wall. It appeared that these two motions crossed each other right at the wire. The judges liked Ilchester so they paid off on Ilchester. Here it comes, fellow. Four winners for the Bennings interests and beaten a nose in the final. Up and Up, In High, Buttr Beans and the winner of the Inaugural, Miney Myerson, at a $11.60 mutuel. Not bad, not bad. BILL.

First race—Granny's Trade defeated Wedding Ring and others ni Florida and is said to be in excellent shape. Was scratched yesterday with this race in mind. An intelligent ride should bring us a winner here. Singing Heart is the one to beat. In the money in her last four starts in the South. Pending, if in form, will be a threat.

Second race—Teeter Totter won at the first asking on a slow track in Florida. Appears as good as any of those who have been to the races before. Basquine is said to be a promising youngster. In the first-time starter group, Strolling Miss will have some backers.

Third race—Salisbury has shown a keen liking for the Bowie course. Won two of three starts last fall and scored later in Florida. Gets the Bennings call over Cantoria and Manager Bill.

Fourth race—Black Target was withdrawn yesterday when Owner Abel saw this spot. This plater left Florida in top form and will show a lot of speed today. Quickly was consistent in the South and figures second best. General Lejune might be tightening.

Fifth race—Momo gets a shift in the weights from Stone Martin today. I believe this pair will battle it out for the chief award. Redress may be the surprise. Has worked well.

Sixth race—Jack Low turned in a fine effort last month at Hialeah and the brother of the speedy Jack High is a fit youngster. Appears to have found the proper spot for graduation purposes. Banners Flying and Honey Sweet to take care of the others.

Seventh race—Garlic will have the hard-riding Coucci to boot him in the stretch today and I believe they will account for the major end of the purse. Polo Bar and Bub McFarland for what is left.

American Gives Van Graflan Release

Is Replaced by Donnelly, Formerly of National League Staff.

CHICAGO, April 2 (AP).—President Will Harridge tonight disclosed that Charles H. Donnelly, former National League arbiter, would replace Roy Van Graflan on the American League's umpiring staff for 1934. All other umpires on the American League staff, including Umpire-in-Chief Thomas H. Connally, were retained.

No reason was given by Harridge for Van Grafian's dismissal, although it was known that several of his decisions brought protests from club owners last year. Van Grafian, the youngest umpire on the staff, broke into baseball as a pitcher for the Van Grafians, a team composed of Van Grafian, sr., and his eight sons.

Turned Umpire in 1921.

Van Grafian turned to umpiring in 1921 and achieved such distinctive success in the Pacific Coast League that the late Ban Johnson bought his contract up for the American League eight years ago. He was on the world series umpiring staff of 1929.

Donnelly, a catcher during his playing days, called 'em in the National League in 1931 and '32 after which he was assigned to the International League umpiring staff. He also umpired in the Texas League in '28 and '29. Previously, he managed ball clubs at Bristol, Tenn., and Orlando, Fla.

Other umpires reappointed by President Harridge were William Dinneen, Syracuse, N. Y.; George Hildebrand, San Francisco; George Moriarty, Chicago; Clarence "Brick" Owens, Chicago; Emmett Ormsby, Chicago; William A. McGowan, Wilmington, Del.; Harry Geisel, Indianapolis; William Summers, Hupton, Mass., and Louis C. Kolls, Rock Island, Ill. Dinneen is the dean of the league's active arbiters.

Charles Town High Hold Sports Banquet

Charles Town, W. Va., April 2 (Spl.).—Members of the High School Athletic Association held their annual banquet and Easter dance tonight in the school gymnasium.

The banquet was in charge of the association's executive board, headed by J. J. Baker, boys' teams representative, and Polly Dutrow, girls' team representative.

Gilmore's orchestra played for the dance. Approximately 100 couples attended the affair, which was strictly invitational.

Brent School Forms Athletic Association

Leonardtown, Md., April 2 (Spl.). In order to increase interest in athletics among the pupils at Margaret Brent High School at Helen, an association has been formed among the boys, under the direction of the principal, Taylor F. Johnson. Benefit entertainments will be given to start a fund for furnishing suits and equipment for those participating in the school athletics.

Officers appointed for the organization are: President, Howard Lee, of Leonardtown; vice president, James Gough, of Chaptico; treasurer, Harry S. Jones, of Leonardtown, and secretary, Henry F. Burroughts, of Chaptico.

Insurance Nine Meets.

The Smith Mutual Life Baseball Team will hold an important meeting Thursday night at the home of George Stone. All members and any new candidates are urged to attend.

UP AND UP broke very fast, showed a decided liking for the going, but attempted to run out in stretch and boy had a hard time keeping him in. WHOA BACK came with a rush in stretch and was second in last stride. EVANGELIST well up all the way, ran good race. KINGS PLEASURE finished very fast in the middle of the track. BANK HOLIDAY tired in final furlong. U DEMON did not like the going. BRAVING DANGER ran good race.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming price, $1,500. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:02½. Off at 3:04. Winner, Mrs. M. N. Bond's ch. g. (4), by High Time—Indiscretion. Trained by J. B. Bond. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:16.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—IN HIGH, $8.40, $3.10, $2.60; BELLE FILLE, $7.40, $5.00; TRILLIUM, $6.10.

IN HIGH, at home in the going, raced TIME ENOUGH into defeat and successfully stalled off the determined bid of BELLE FILLE. The latter closed with a rush and was next best. TRILLIUM well up all the way ran good race in the going. LUCULENT broke very slow, but worked his way up and finished fast. HAPPY ANNE, well up to the stretch, where she dropped back. TIME ENOUGH had plenty of early speed.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming price, $1,500. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:40½. Off at 3:41½. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BLUE FOAM, $19.80 $8.40 $6.60; CORRYMEELA, $6.10, $5.20; MY BOSS, $11.80.

BLUE FOAM, under good handling, worked her way up, came to the outside in stretch and closing gamely, won drawing away. CORRYMEELA showed good speed, but was used up racing ST. NICK into defeat and tired. MY BOSS, outpaced in early part, closed very fast. AXENTEA came from far back. CHAIN was hard ridden all the way. UNCOVERED showed a flash of early speed.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800. The Norma Shearer Trophy. Claiming prices, $4,000 to $3,000. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start poor. Won driving; place, easily. Went to post at 4:15½. Off at 4:21½. Winner, Mrs. E. Trueman's ch. g. (4) by Dunlin—Effort. Trained by E. Trueman. Value to winner $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:15 1-5.

Dusek Gunning For Scalp of Browning

Calls Off Bouts to Train for Title Claimant on Thursday Night.

RASSLING'S "iron man," heavyweight championship claimant, Jim Browning, will be thoroughly warmed up for the occasion when he reengages Rudy Dusek in the Auditorium rassling competition Thursday night. One of the busiest snarlsters in the business today, Browning will be working his fourth bout in as many days when this struggle gets under way.

Though confident of his ability to mop up with Rudy despite the fact that he was thoroughly extended by the elder Dusek here two weeks ago, Browning admits that unexpectedly heavy advance booking affords Dusek an ideal opportunity to shine in this return go.

Kept too Busy.

"I never realized I had so many bouts lined up—otherwise I'd have postponed this one," big Jim has informed Matchmaker Joe Turner. "As it stands, I'm going through with it."

While big Jim is scheduled for top-heavy booking, Dusek has gone into intensive training for this match, cancelling several lucrative engagements while centering his attention on Browning. Confident that he can elude Jim's celebrated airplane scissors, Rudy has perfected a defense that he contends will enable him to escape any punishment directed his way.

Hans Steinke semifinals with Willie Davis, and Jim McMillan opposes Dick Shikat in the best of three 30-minute time limits.

Fredericksburg High Nine Has 20 Candidates

Fredericksburg, Va., April 2 (Spl.). Twenty candidates for the Fredericksburg High School Baseball Team will begin their practice several weeks later than usual due to the severe winter and the resultant muddy state of the field.

A number of veterans have returned to Coach Milton Hollingsworth, who has completed schedule arrangements with all Northern Virginia League schools and Alexandria. Complete schedule will be announced following negotiations with several of the smaller schools.

Stock Market Is Unchanged; Backs and Fills

New York, April 2 (AP).—Stocks shuffled about rather indecisively today, finishing with the averages unchanged. The market had a firm tone at times, but there was considerable backing and filling among the usual leaders, some of which had small net losses. A dozen or so specialties traded briskly, again suggesting professional activity.

Comment on general business trends contributed a cheerful note for the beginning of the year's second quarter. The remark of President Sloan, of General Motors, that industrial recovery, which apparently began some time ago, was "an irresistible force," and Chairman Taylor's words at the steel corporation's annual meeting, provided expressions of opinion from two prominent executives on basic conditions.

Sag in Steel Output.

News of more immediate bearing on industrial affairs included another sag in steel production, a number of additional wage increases and announcement that two automobile manufacturers had stepped up prices on some models.

Packing and communication shares, as well as some of the automotive equipments and issues identified with the building industry, were firm, at least for intervals.

A few aircrafts also found a fairly good market. Favorites embraced Briggs, Sperry, Curtiss-Wright "A," General Asphalt, Celotex, Foundation Co., Wilson, Armour of Illinois preferred, Murray and Hayes. Seaboard and Phillips were the chief movers in the petroleum division. Postal Telegraph preferred and Western Union got up about 2 points at the best.

Light and Power Quiet.

Light and power shares were quiet and inclined to ease. Rails, with one or two exceptions, did little. Santa Fe started well, but halved a two-point rise. Metals attracted less demand, perhaps because their recent supporters had had some second thoughts in inflationary possibilities.

Motor issues and rail equipments worked higher, but were not especially active. Transactions came to 1,424,720 shares.

American Iron & Steel Institute estimated current steel output at 43.3 per cent of capacity, compared with 45.7 per cent a week ago. The setback was against the expectations of some quarters which had figured that passage of the automobile strike would stimulate specifications from the motor car makers. However, the time for seasonal letdowns is at hand. Higher wages in both these important industries has already been reflected in some price increases.

Maryland's Wheat Damage Minimized

Hagerstown, Md., April 2 (Spl.). A wheat crop, which a month ago was forecast as a complete failure because of the subzero weather, today was estimated to be 75 per cent normal, by J. A. Miller, a member of the crop reporting staff of the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Snow and rains during the last month, did much in putting the roots, torn away from the soil by the freezes and thaws, back again, said Miller, after he had completed his monthly survey.

Farmers, held up for weeks in plowing by snow and rain, plan to start work in preparing the soil for crops next week. Gardens likewise will be started next week.

Wool Market.

Boston, April 2 (A.P.) (U. S. Dept. of Agric.).—Most lines of domestic wool in Boston were very quiet. Fleece wool quotations showed a weakening tendency, while asking prices on Western grown fleeces were fairly steady. Not enough business was done on any grade to establish market prices.

Estimated receipts of domestic wool at Boston, reported to the Boston Grain and Flour Exchange during week ended March 31, amounted to 1,873,300 pounds, compared with 465,900 during the previous week.

Robey's Review

Finance Economics Business

England's Surplus at the End of Her Fiscal Year Provides an Interesting Contrast With the Policy Our Leaders Have Adopted.

By Ralph West Robey.

Those who have been insisting that a deficit in Federal finances is necessary and inevitable during depressions must have been somewhat surprised to read the current figures on the British budget. Instead of a deficit the country has just ended its fiscal year with a surplus of 31,148,000 pounds, or approximately $156,000,000. Equally interesting is the accuracy of the estimates of expenditures made a year ago when the budget was announced. At that time the figure was given as 697,500,000 pounds. The actual expenditures were 693,419,000, or 4,081,000 pounds less. This is an error of less than six-tenths of 1 per cent. Receipts were estimated a year ago at 698,500,000 pounds and actually were 724,567,000, pounds.

In the meantime the United States, which has had a much larger percentage of recovery than England, has been accumulating the largest deficit in its peace-time history. In the first three-quarters of its fiscal year the deficit has amounted to over $2,500,000,000. Last month it increased at an average rate of about $5,500,000 a day. This, however, was exceptionally low because of income tax payments. The average for the year to date has been about $9,250,000 a day.

Ordinary Budget Still Indicates a Surplus.

These figures for the United States refer to the total budget—both ordinary and emergency expenditures. In the so-called ordinary budget expenditures through March 29 were $1,993,000,000, while total receipts were $2,306,000,000. This gave a surplus for this side of the budget of $313,000,000. It is this fact, of course, that leads to the statement so frequently made to the effect that our Federal finances are in good condition.

Of these total receipts, however, a substantial amount came from the processing tax on farm products. Specifically, these taxes have contributed, through March 29, $237,000,000. If this is removed from receipts it gives a total of $2,069,000,000. The justification for making such a subtraction is two-fold. In the first place, these are just as much "emergency" receipts as any of the extraordinary budget is an "emergency" expenditure. Secondly, the payments made to agriculture, which this processing tax is supposed to finance, are included, in part, in the emergency expenditures.

Other Similar Corrections Also Need to Be Made.

Numerous other corrections of this same character also would have to be made before one would be in a position to draw any conclusions as to the exact condition of our ordinary receipts and expenditures. Unfortunately, however, the daily statement of the Treasury does not provide enough information to make this possible. The reason for this is obvious. It is that if a genuine division were made between "ordinary" and "emergency" expenditures it would show a deficit in the ordinary budget. What has been done, as everyone knows who pays the slightest attention to our Government finances, is to shift enough expenses to the "emergency" category to make total receipts more than equal "ordinary" expenditures.

The significance of this is in the evidence it provides of the attitude of those in charge of our Federal finances. It indicates they believe that whether a budget is balanced is of only psychological importance. If the public is worried about a deficit, it is bad; if it is not worried, there is no need for concern. In other words, as they see it, solvency is nothing more than a state of mind.

Quite obviously England will have none of this New Deal philosophy. Perhaps she is wrong and we are right. If so, however, all history has been wrong, for the records of the past leave no doubt as to where a continuing deficit must lead.

Goods Markets.

New York, April 2 (A.P.).—Dry goods markets opened steady today and with a firm trend in some divisions. Mail orders were good in many houses. Cotton goods were asked for more frequently in the finished goods division. Gray cloths sold in small lots at firm prices. Silk gray goods and printed silks were in moderate demand. Leading men's wear houses are holding for higher prices. Burlaps were inactive due to holidays in Calcutta.

Steel Market.

New York, April 2 (A.P.).—Steel prices per 100 lbs. f. o. b., Pittsburgh: Blue annealed sheets, hot roller, 1.90. Galvanized sheets, 2.85. Black sheets, hot rolled, 2.25. Steel bars, 1.75.

Silk Market.

New York, April 2 (A.P.).—Raw silk futures closed steady, unchanged to 2 higher; sales, 720 bales; May, 1.33½; *July, 1.32½; October, 1.34.

Open market quotations (60-day basis): Shanghai steam filature, 78 per cent, seriplane 20-22s, 1.40; Canton double extra "A" 14-16s, 1.00; Japanese special crack double extra, 81 per cent, seriplane 13-15s, 1.39. *Bid.

Visible Supply U. S. Grain.

New York, April 2 (A.P.).—The visible supply of American grain shows the following changes in bushels: Wheat decreased 1,608,000; corn decreased 736,000; oats decreased 989,000; rye decreased 56,000; barley decreased 68,000.

Bond Trading Leaves Prices Unchanged

Dullness Marks Session; Federals Easy; Transfers Total $8,993,000.

New York, April 2 (AP).—The bond market was virtually trendless and extremely dull today as most traders and investors stood aside to wait for further inspiration from Washington and elsewhere.

It was the slowest session since December 4, last, transfers totaling only $8,993,000, par value. The average for 60 domestic corporate issues was unchanged at 84.9.

The majority of U. S. Government securities eased on the eve of the Treasury's announcement of its April 15 financing plans which involved the payment of some $1,100,000,000 of the called Liberty Fourth 4¼s.

This loan, at 100.23, was up one-thirty-seconds, respectively. The Liberty 3½s and First 4¼s also held gains of one-thirty-second and two-thirty-seconds, respectively. The turnover in the Federals, however, was negligible.

Prime corporate bonds held to a small fractional range and the majority of secondary issues were almost as listless. Scattered rails and industrials improved moderately, as did a few of the utilities.

The more active carrier gainers of fractions to a point or more included some liens of Canadian Pacific, Pennsylvania, Southern, Great Northern, Sante Fe, Illinois Central, International Great Northern and Nickel Plate. Union Pacific bonds sagged, as did some of Burlington and Chesapeake & Ohio.

Virginia Railway & Power 5s, which are convertible into a new bond, were rather active. Warner Bros. 6s changed hands at a gain of about a point. Paramount issues were also up a point or more. Modest improvement was shown by loans of American & Foreign Power, American Telephone, Consolidated Gas, Postal Telegraph, Shell Union Oil, International Telephone and National Dairy.

Dutch East Indies obligations advanced 1 to around 4 points and some of the Germans and French rallied a point or more. The Brazilians were somewhat heavy.

Curb's Prices Close Higher; Sale Irregular

Trading Marked by Narrow Fluctuations; Dealing, 311,000 Shares.

New York, April 2 (AP).—The curb market was a bit irregular at the close today with the majority of issues, however, on the brighter side of the picture. Fluctuations were generally narrow and trading slow.

Utilities were easier as a group. Electric Bond & Share and American Gas & Electric lost around a point each. Hiram Walker gained a point while other liquor shares displayed little change.

Among metals Newmont yielded a point while Lake Shore advanced as much. Pioneer Gold and Wright Hargraves edged slightly forward. South Pennsylvania and Humble Oils provided the main improvement in petroleum shares, gaining about a point apiece.

Lerner Stores preferred soared 22⅝ points on a small turnover. Aluminum Co. of America, Schiff Company, Phillip Morris (new) and American Cyanamid B firmed around a point each, but General Tire & Rubber and Fisk Rubber preferred eased similar amounts.

Transfers approximated 311,000 shares compared with 289,000 for last Thursday, the previous full trading session.

Wheat Values Drop Laid to Larger Yield

Leading Experts Raise '34 Crop Estimate; Other Grains Down.

Chicago, April 2 (AP).—Unofficial crop estimates indicating a somewhat larger 1934 yield of domestic winter wheat than was looked for did much to pull grain values downward today.

Four leading private experts, who made the estimates, figured that the crop would be more than 40 per cent in excess of last year's total, although about 18 per cent less than a 5-year average.

The condition of the crop was placed at 75.5 per cent, as against 74.3 last December and 59.4 a year ago.

Wheat Closes Unsettled.

Wheat closed unsettled, near the day's bottom level, ⅛ to 1 cent lower that Saturday's finish; corn, ½ to ⅞ down; oats ⅜ to ½ off, and provisions unchanged to a decline of 22 cents.

Influenced by rains in domestic spring crop territory northwest and by predictions of more, the wheat market showed from the outset a tendency to sag.

Advices at hand said dry conditions had been relieved, to a considerable extent over a large part of Minnesota, the Dakotas and Montana. Then came the April private crop reports, with an average of the various unofficial estimates putting the 1934 United States probable yield of winter wheat at 506,000,000 bushels. Compared with 351,000,000 harvested last year.

Little Rallying Power.

Little rallying power developed in wheat prices despite a statement from a leading unofficial authority that United States farm stocks of wheat were but 80,020,000 bushels, an amount 103,000,000 less than last year. He asserted that this marked the passing of the abnormal farm holdings which had burdened the trade in recent years. It was added that taken in connection with commercial visible stock the indications were clearly that the domestic carryover of wheat on July 1 would be the smallest since 1928.

Corn and oats declined with wheat, but rye advanced. One expert estimated that the April 1 condition of the United States rye crop was 64.6, the lowest on record.

Provisions weakened owing to downturns of hog values and to selling for Western packers.

Latins Paying More Interest On Dollar Cut

New York, April 2.—Devaluation of the American dollar has been reflected in increased cash interest payments to American holders of dollar bonds of the Province of Buenos Aires, Argentina, the Institute of International Finance says in an extensive report issued today on "Latin American Dollar Bonds." Cash payments on the province's dollar bonds, says the report, have increased from approximately 60 per cent of the amounts due in the first four months of 1933 to more than 80 per cent in the last three months. The February, 1934, coupon payments on the 6½ per cent bonds were at the rate of about 84 per cent, the report adds, while the March interest payments on the 6 per cent bonds are about the same rate. The balance is paid in 5 per cent scrip.

The report, which also includes Argentina, Chile, Colombia, El Salvador, Peru and Uruguay, praises the debt record of the Argentine Republic and the City of Buenos Aires, which "has been achieved at considerable sacrifice." The Argentine Republic has maintained full and prompt payment on its internal and external debts; the City of Buenos Aires, on its external debts, the report says. Although there was a short delay in the transfer of funds for payment of interest by the Province of Cordoba, Argentina, in January, the institute "sees no reason why" the province should not be able to continue to meet its interest payments. The report is the sixty-eighth credit study and the twenty-second report on defaults that has been made by the institute, which is conducted by the Investment Bankers Association of America in cooperation with New York University.

Trade Trends.

Men's Wear—The trade hears that certain spinners of French and English mixture yarns for men's wear have cut prices below present list levels in an effort to stimulate immediate delivery business.

Soap—Among leading manufacturers the February-March business volume showed a substantial gain over earlier months, according to trade reports. In a few instances the business done was said to have been equal to the 1929 levels.

Pig Iron—According to revised estimates March sales in the New York district amounted to about 20,000 tons, the largest in several months.

Curtains—There is an active buying interest in the primary market with novel weaves in especially good demand.

A. B. A. Group Issues Report On Legislation

Pending Measures Analyzed As to Likely Effect On Banking.

New York, April 2—The American Bankers Association through its committee on Federal legislation, under the chairmanship of Robert V. Fleming, president Riggs National Bank, Washington, D. C., has issued a compilation analyzing the more important bills affecting banking pending in Congress.

The compilation explains the effects of each measure and indicates those in regard to which the Association has taken a position of support or opposition with the reasons for its stand.

It is the aim to present a "bird's-eye view of the outstanding features in this field of legislative proposals, F. M. Law, president of the association says in an introductory letter addressed to the members of the association, to all of which copies have been sent.

Outcome of Crucial Period.

"These proposals have been the outcome of one of the most crucial periods in our Nation's history," Mr. Law says. "Some of them are fraught with important bearing upon the future of banking and I urge that you familiarize yourself with them. Throughout the session your association, through its Federal legislative committee, its special committee on proposed revision of banking laws and its general officers, has studied carefully each measure relating to banking that has been proposed.

"We have felt that in this particular period the important factor of public welfare was in a special sense an essential element to be considered in connection with these banking measures. We have felt it is the paramount duty of all citizens in considering matters affecting their particular interests to consider them above all in the spirit of the endeavor which the Nation is making through its chosen Administration to bring about recovery in its economic life along lines that have been presented."

good. This spirit has guided us as your representatves in our consideration of the many banking bills that have been presented.

Opinion on Measures.

"Some of these measures we have earnestly felt were not in the public interest nor helpful to the process of recovery because of their harmful effects on sound banking. Others we have felt were technically at fault and not well calculated to produce the results aimed at. Others we have felt could be made more effective by constructive amendments, while still others we have approved. In each case, following earnest study, consideration and advice, we have taken representations or have taken appropriate action where we have felt we could serve the welfare of banking and the public. At all times we have sought to avoid any step that might be obstructive to the basic program of National recovery.

"As we have labored in behalf of sound banking and for what we believe is for the public welfare we have been particularly gratified at the cordial attitude and earnest spirit of cooperation in behalf of the National welfare that we have uniformly met whenever we have had occasion to discuss banking legislation with the President of the United States and his advisers."

Measures to which the association is favorable are listed in the compilation as follows: A bill introduced by Senator Fletcher repealing that portion of Section 31 of the banking act of 1933 which increased stockholding requirements of directors of member banks of the Federal Reserve system. Measures introduced in the House and Senate extending for one year, that is, until July 1, 1935, the temporary plan of insurance of bank deposits under the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. Bill introduced by Senator Fletcher providing that where States tax National banks upon their shares the burden imposed could not exceed the average burden imposed upon other taxable intangible personal property and that States could not tax State bank members in the Federal Reserve system at a greater rate than National banks. Measures providing for elimination of double liability of National bank shareholders. A group of measures prepared by the Attorney General, based on study and experiences of the Department of Justice, as part of the campaign against crime, some of them related specifically to crimes against banks.

Revenue Bill Recommendations.

In regard to the 1934 revenue bill the association urges modifications in four sections. Section 23 (b), it points out, contains language which will prohibit banks from taking deduction on account of interest paid to depositors, if funds are used to purchase tax-exempt securities.

The Senate Finance Committee has been urged to delete this feature, it states, Section 24 (a) (5) has the effect of denying the right to take deduction to the extent that expenses can be allocated to income received from tax-exempt securities and "will result in confusion in administration and partial nullification of the tax-exempt features of tax-exempt securities," the association declares, recommending that this subsection be deleted.

In respect to Section 117 (d) of the revenue bill, providing that losses from sales or exchanges of capital assets shall be allowed only to the extent of the gains from such sales or exchanges, the association recommends an exception providing that "this subsection shall not apply to a bank or trust company." A similar exception is urged for Section 117 (f) which "considers the retirement of bonds the same as an exchange," it being pointed out that "realization of losses on call or maturity of bonds is beyond control of the owner and therefore not subject to manipulation for tax purposes."

Southern Rail, Bus Lines Sign NRA Rate Pact

Agreement Is Hailed as Model Basis for Rest of Nation.

National Recovery Administrator Hugh S. Johnson announced an agreement yesterday on competitive practices between Southern motor bus lines and railroads, hailed by the NRA as "a basis for settlement of rate wars between railroads and other transportation facilities throughout the country."

The agreement, reached at New Orleans last week under supervision of Division Administrator Sol A. Rosenblatt, is subject to approval, as far as the railroads are concerned, by the Interstate Commerce Commission. It also will require modification of the NRA motor bus code.

Under the agreement, scheduled to go into effect for six months on June 1, the bus lines operating east of the Mississippi and south of the Ohio rivers, bind themselves to maintain minimum rates and abolish party and charter rates and free passes. In exchange, the railroads will eliminate excursion rates and maintain passenger fares of not less than 2 cents a mile for one-way tickets and 1.8 cents a mile for round-trips.

Bus rates for hauls of less than 175 miles were fixed "at the comparable or competitive rail fares applicable between the same points." Round-trip rates can not be less than 90 per cent of two-way fares, and in cases where the highway mileage between points is 80 per cent or less of the competitive rail mileage, the railway base rate per mile for the actual mileage covered must be charged.

The agreement authorizes the establishment of a joint committee, with three representatives of bus lines and three of the railroads, which may modify the agreement when necessary.

BLACKIE BEAR

By D. SAM COX

There's Going to Be a Party

WHEN the animals got the news that Blackie Bear was on his way back home they were the happiest lot of folks you ever heard of, and they began to plan to give him a big party when he got back. They talked a lot about what sort of a party it should be and where they would have it. They couldn't have it at Blackie's house, for they wanted to have it all fixed and ready for him before he knew anything about it.

Each animal wanted to have it at his house, but none of them seemed to have a house that was big enough. After they had talked and talked and talked about it, they decided that the big spot of green grass around Doctor Coon's house, where he always had his big Sunday dinner when his friends came, would be the best place, and so it was settled that they would have it there.

They thought sure that Blackie would be there in another day, and so they had to hurry to get the dinner ready. While they were all making plans for the dinner Doctor Coon jumped up on a stump and hollored out for everybody to keep quiet for a minute as he had something mighty important to say. Then he told them that Blackie Bear was the biggest animal on the creek and that he was the wisest animal, too.

That he had done lots of favors for all of them, and had been the best sort of friend. He told them that Blackie had slapped Rover Dog into the creek one day when he had caught Doctor Coon and was about to kill him, and of a lot of other good things that Blackie had done for the creek folks. He told them about the big Christmas dinner they all had at Blackie's house, and what a good time they had all had.

"And now," said Doctor Coon, "I move that we give Blackie Bear the biggest party that ever was, and that we crown him king of the creek. All in favor of that motion will say 'eye.' Well, it's a wonder that Mr. Man and Uncle Joe didn't hear those animals and birds scream "eye," for you never heard such a noise as they made in voting to make Blackie king of the creek. The idea just seemed to tickle them most to death, and Billie Possum and Jocko Monkey got out on the grass and danced and turned somersaults.

Who-Who Owl, who is always so wise, said they must make up a yell to give when they crowned Blackie. All the animals thought this would be just the nicest sort of thing to do, and they asked Who Who Owl to make up one for them. He promised to have it ready, and told them to go ahead and fix up the party. And now the next thing to do was to get up the things to eat, and they all started out to see what they could find. They certainly must have a supper fit for a king.

Sloan Opposes Six-Hour Plea Of Cotton Mill

Surgical Firm's Hearing Adjourned Without Final Action.

George E. Sloan, chairman of the Cotton Textile Code Authority, led the opposition yesterday to a proposal of Johnson & Johnson, manufacturers of surgical dressings, to establish four six-hour shifts in their mills.

Sloan's group warned that if the petition were granted, the chaotic conditions which prevailed in the industry before the adoption of the code would be repeated. The cotton textile code, in which child labor was abolished, was the first code approved by the President. Sloan played a major part in its speedy adoption and is regarded by Recovery Administrator Hugh S. Johnson as one of the NRA's best friends among industrialists.

The textile code now permits the operation of productive machinery during only two 40-hour shifts per week. The Johnson & Johnson proposal, advanced by its counsel, Russell E. Watson, would reestablish night work on a 120-hour week. Watson said his client would pay the same wages for a six-hour day that it is now paying for an eight-hour day and would, consequently, make a substantial contribution to reemployment. The opposition charged that the phrasing of petition was ambiguous and that it might be construed to permit a machine week of 144 hours or even longer.

Increased costs in surgical dressings, Watson insisted, were due to the limitation of machine hours and also to the cotton processing tax. Under the code, Watson said Johnson & Johnson had been forced to reduce the number of its employes.

Robert R. West, a member of the Code Authority, replied "the balance achieved because of this provision in our code can be measured by the fact that 140,000 employes have been put back to work; that we have more than restored the 1926 level of employment; that we have been able to increase the dollar wage of our employes so that in terms of purchasing power their real wages are 10 per cent higher than in 1926, and that many of our mills have been able to stop their losses and operate in an orderly manner and earn something for their owners."

"Since the war," declared Sloan, "the essential weakness in the cotton textile industry has been its tremendous overcapacity." He insisted that Watson's proposal was "directly opposed to the express policies of the National industrial recovery act."

The hearing was adjourned subject to call.

Mrs. Roosevelt Samples Soup Prepared for Needy Children

Visits School Kitchen to Learn About Large Scale Cooking.

Mrs. Roosevelt visited the municipal school kitchen at Wisconsin avenue and Thirty-third street and learned a thing or two about large-scale cooking yesterday.

A new-fangled potato peeler caught the First Lady's eye.

"I never did see a machine like that in operation," she confessed. "Does it peel thick or thin?"

When told the device quickly scraped potatoes with a minimum of waste, Mrs. Roosevelt remarked she preferred to eat potatoes baked in their "jackets."

Mrs. Roosevelt was attracted a moment later by a large container of noodle soup. She reached for a tablespoon and gingerly tasted the steaming dish.

"That's good," she said, "but I should think it would be too heavy to serve in hot weather."

Mrs. Elizabeth Francis, acting head of the kitchen, explained the menu would be changed in the summer. Questioned about the possibility of the kitchen continuing to feed needy children in the vacation season, Mrs. Francis said plans were on foot to carry out such a program.

Mrs. Roosevelt admired a vegetable chopper and ice box. She commented, however, on a lack of ovens to afford a greater variety of warm food. She complimented those in charge on tidy equipment.

Questioning by Mrs. Roosevelt developed that 7,000 lunches were served daily, with about half of the children receiving hot dishes. She learned sandwiches were made of whole wheat bread three days a week and of white bread two days.

As Mrs. Roosevelt started to drive away in her blue sport roadster she saw Mrs. Katherine McK. Ansley, kitchen director, arrive and returned to exchange greetings. Mrs. Ansley was absent because she had no inkling of the surprise visit.

Accompanied by Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, of the Board of Education, Mrs. Roosevelt later inspected the Corcoran nursery school for children of unemployed. She seemed pleased with the lunch served while she looked on.

Thief Sends Garage Men Out, Loots Till.

A yawning servant appeared and found James R. Williams, night manager of a garage in the 2500 block of Q street northwest, who said he had received a call to take one of the official automobiles to his garage for the night. The Embassy knew nothing of the call.

When Williams returned to his garage, he discovered someone had looted the cash drawer of $25.90.

City Manager Form Praised In D. C. Survey

System Is Not Proposed for Capital in Report to Senator King.

The city manager form of government is praised in a report submitted yesterday by William A. Roberts, assistant corporation counsel, to Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, chairman of the Senate District Committee.

The report is one of several volumes which have been given the committee chairman by the special committee named to study possible reorganization of the District government. Mr. Roberts, Lewis Douglas, director of the budget, and Daniel J. Donovan, District auditor, comprise the committee.

No recommendations for changes have been made in any of the reports so far submitted. The committee's suggestions for changes and improvements, Mr. Roberts said, will be embodied in a final report.

Adoption of the city manager plan for the District was not recommended in the latest report, which outlined the development of the city manager movement since it was launched in 1908 in Staunton, Va. Almost 450 cities and towns have adopted the plan, the report said. Of these only 17 have since abandoned it, Mr. Roberts said.

Four CCC Camps For West Virginia

Elkins, W. Va., April 2 (Spl.).—Under orders received from Washington at district headquarters, four additional CCC camps will be established at once in West Virginia, while two will be abandoned. The action will bring the number of camps in the State to 19.

One of the new camps will be established near Mathias in Hardy County. Another will be on State forest land along the Greenbrier River in Pocahontas County. The third will be near Oak Hill in Fayette County and the fourth near Elizabeth in Wirt County.

The camps to be discontinued are Camp Leadmine near Parsons in Tucker County and Camp Nicholas in Nicholas County.

Modern Pirate Gang Is Hunted For Massacre

Speedboat Mob Sought in Wholesale Murder at Bremerton, Wash.

Bremerton, Wash., April 2 (AP).—A murderous gang operating like pirates of old was believed by police today to have slain the six persons whose battered bodies were found Saturday night in the Bremerton Beach home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Flieder.

Officers centered their efforts toward picking up the trail of this "pirate" gang. Police learned the isolated beach area near here had been victimized several times lately by a speedboat mob who stole up to the summer colony at night.

The slayers, however, had a long jump on the police. Evidence indicated the killings may have taken place as early as last Wednesday. Newspapers delivered Thursday were untouched.

Unusual Savagery Shown.

A detailed picture of the carnival of horror was drawn by autopsy surgeons in their report of what had been done to the victims with pistol, blackjack, hammer and knife.

Frank Flieder, 40, well-to-do owner of the home, skull smashed with hammer blows, throat cut, jaw broken and teeth knocked out.

Mrs. Flieder, 50, throat cut, stabbed in the chest, head battered.

Eugene A. Chenevert, 38, 21 hammer wounds in the head.

Mrs. Peggy Chenevert, 30, shot twice in the neck.

Magnus Jordan, 50, retired Navy man, shot in left eye.

Slaying Reconstructed.

Detectives speculated that the killers ran their speedboat to the beach near the house and entered the rear door while those inside were having a party. Possibly Mrs. Chenevert or Jordan surprised them there and one shot was fired from the kitchen doorway.

Authorities suggested the robbers then might have rounded up the other persons, binding them and taping their faces preparatory to looting the house. One of the victims apparently broke away and was clubbed to death.

The supposition of officers then was that the gang proceeded on the theory that dead men tell no tales, and completed the slaughter.

Gold Found in Ducks.

Portland, Oreg. (U.P.).—Mrs. George Tilka is seeking the home address of two ducks she dressed for dinner. In their gizzards were gold dust and nuggets worth $4. She bought them at a poultry market.

D.C. Tax Group Hits $4,000,000 Budget Boost

Douglas Warned Increase Will Bring Deficit in Finances.

Protest against the $4,000,000 supplemental estimates for the District of Columbia, submitted by the District Commissioners to be added to the 1935 general fund appropriations, was voiced yesterday in a letter to Director of the Budget Douglas from Rufus S. Lusk, secretary of the Washington Taxpayers Protective Association.

"Of this amount," Lusk wrote, "$2,700,000 is for relief and the balance for various construction projects.

"The Commissioners are urging you to upset the present budget by granting a sum which, together with the pay and longevity increases voted by Congress last week, not only about wipes out any surplus estimate for 1935, but also apparently heads the District straight for a deficit by July, 1935.

"In the event it is found necessary to increase local expenditures for relief, it is always possible to obtain a deficiency appropriation during the next session of Congress.

"However, the taxpayer is just about as much in need of relief as anyone else, if not more so. He has seen the income and value of his property cut from 25 to 50 per cent, while his taxes have been reduced, in a vast majority of cases, only 11 per cent.

"If every man, woman and child in Washington has an income of $600 during 1935, at least 10 per cent of it must be given up to operate the District government. This is entirely too much, but the addition of this $4,000,000 supplemental estimate will increase per capita taxes at least 12 per cent.

"We respectfully urge that these estimates either be not sent to Congress, or else cut materially."

Smoot's Son in Gallinger With Nervous Collapse

Friends yesterday confirmed reports that Ernest Smoot, son of former Senator Reed Smoot (Republican), Utah, is under treatment in Gallinger Hospital for a nervous breakdown. Dr. I. Silverman, of the Gallinger staff, said Smoot was transferred there from Emergency Hospital for observation.

Smoot was in the headlines recently when he told a Senate committee investigating air-mail contracts that he received substantial fees for legal services from air lines while secretary of his father's Senate Finance Committee.

Prisoner Kills Himself But "Wise Guys" Scoff

Quincy, Calif., April 2 (AP).—Because it was April Fool's Day, prisoners in the Plumas County Jail were compelled to keep company for several hours with the body of a fellow prisoner, J. Kelly.

Efforts of the prisoners to convey to officials the news that Kelly had committed suicide proved fruitless when passersby took their remarks as a hoax. Later a deputy sheriff found the body hanging in a cell.

PROPOSALS

COMMISSIONERS, D. C., WASHINGTON, March 31, 1934. Sealed proposals will be received at Room 509 District Building until 2 o'clock p. m., E. S. T., April 18, 1934, and then publicly opened, for the erection of an eight-room school building at the southwest corner of 3d and G streets N. E., contents, 378,000 cubic feet. Certified check for 125, payable to the Collector of Taxes, D. C., to insure return of specifications and drawings in good condition should accompany application to Chief Clerk, Engineer Department, Room 427, District Building, for proposals, specifications and drawings. Not exceeding three sets may be obtained at this office by any general contractor, upon deposit of the required amount. Cash deposits will not be accepted.

AUCTION SALES

TUESDAY, APRIL 3, 1934—
THOMAS J. OWEN & SON, Auctioneers, 1431 I Street Northwest.

TRUSTEE'S SALE OF VALUABLE REAL ESTATE, BEING A THREE-STORY DWELLING CONTAINING SIX ROOMS AND BATH, KNOWN AS 53 D STREET NORTHWEST.

By virtue of a certain deed of trust recorded in Liber No. 4855 at folio 161 of the land records of the District of Columbia, and at the request of the party secured thereby, the undersigned will sell at public auction in front of the premises on TUESDAY, THE THIRD DAY OF APRIL, 1934, AT THREE O'CLOCK P. M., the following described land and premises, situate in the District of Columbia, and being lot numbered twenty-nine (29) in John Beall's subdivision of lots in square numbered six hundred and twenty-nine (629), as per plat recorded in Liber No. 15, folio 181, of the records of the office of the surveyor for the District of Columbia.

TERMS OF SALE: Purchaser to pay one-fourth of the purchase price in cash, the balance in three installments in one, two and three years, respectively, with interest at the rate of six (6) per centum per annum, and secured by deed of trust on the property sold, or all cash, at the option of the purchaser; taxes paid or adjusted to the date of sale; purchaser to pay interest on purchase price from date of sale to date of settlement at six (6) per centum per annum; all conveyancing, recording, revenue stamps, etc., at the cost of the purchaser; good title or no sale. A deposit of $250.00 will be required at the time of sale and settlement to be within thirty (30) days of the date of sale, or deposit forfeited, and the property resold at the cost and risk of the defaulting purchaser, after five (5) days' previous advertisement of said resale in some newspaper published in Washington, D. C.

Greatest Dividends Come From Home Investments..

THE prevailing low prices for real estate in Washington and adjacent communities offer a distinct advantage to those who purchase a home now! . . . From a financial standpoint, the irrevocable law of supply and demand is an adequate guarantee that real estate values will continually increase in this territory, but the dividends of satisfaction and happiness that come with home ownership are an even more conclusive reason why your buying decision should be made NOW!

The Sunday Real Estate Section of The Washington Post provides a comprehensive directory of available homes in Washington and nearby Virginia and Maryland . . . Study this section carefully. The descriptions and illustrations of property will acquaint you with the desirable features of modern homes, the advantages of various locations and with a range of prices that will be your criterion for an investment to pay greatest dividends in permanent satisfaction.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY — The Missing Detective — By Harry J. Tuthill

OH MY DARLING! MY SON!
HERE'S DADDY AND MUMSY BACK FROM EUROPE.
MY WORD! HERMAN SHOULD BE HERE TO EXPLAIN THINGS.
OH GEORGE, THIS OFFICER CAN DO THAT.
HE'S STILL TRYING TO TELL HIS WIFE WHY HE WAS OUT SO LATE. GET THAT.
WE RETURNED TODAY.
HERMAN WILL BE RIGHT HERE SOON....HE'S TRYING TO GET AWAY NOW.
WE WERE ASTOUNDED WHEN THIS OFFICER, ACCOMPANIED BY THAT STOUT MAN, TOLD US OUR BOY WAS HERE WITH YOU.
AH, HERE COMES HERMAN. MY WORD! SHE'S STILL ARGUING WITH HIM.
WELL...OF COURSE, IF YOU ARE HIS PARENTS....BUT WE'VE GOT SO ATTACHED TO HIM.
HE'S HAD SPLENDID CARE. WE'RE SO THANKFUL TO YOU, DEAR.

Walt Mason, Himself

Female Hobo.

A poor old woman came today, and asked for something she might eat; she'd walked a long and weary way, and she had tired and foundered feet. I'm used to bums of every kind, but they are mostly worn-out men, poor gents who've left their hopes behind, and ne'er expect to rise again. It's sad to see the down-and-out, the man for whom no plunks are coined, who begs a pannikin of kraut to keep his soul and body joined. But it is sadder far to see the lady hobo, doomed to roam, who might have children at her knee, and be the mistress of a home. In all the waste of human lives, no waste more greatly is deplored than wandering and broken wives who have no home, no bed and board. The busted gentlemen come by, and tell their tales of grief and woe, to which I listen with a sigh, and then forget them as they go. I've met so many, tempest-tossed, the victims of the world's despair, that all the tragedy seems lost, it is an every day affair. But when a woman comes along, and says she's broke, and begs a crust, I feel there's surely something wrong, some misfit I would fain adjust. I am not moved by whiskered bums, they've always been, will always be; but when the lady hobo comes, it seems a frightful thing to me.

Strawn Calls U.S. Isolation Bar to Trade

Friendly Economic Policy Urged at Rockefeller Survey Hearing.

Chicago, April 2 (AP).—Silas H. Strawn, former president of the United States Chamber of Commerce and the American Bar Association, today scored exponents of economic isolation and asserted the economic well-being of the United States was dependent upon the continuation and expansion of its foreign trade.

Strawn was one of several noted economists to address the Commission of International Relations, sponsored by the Rockefeller Foundation. The commission makes its report October 1.

Others heard today were Walter Lichtenstein, vice president of the First National Bank of Chicago; George Meyercord, president of the Meyercord Company; Paul Scott Mowrer, associate editor of the Chicago Daily News, and Quincy Wright, professor of international law at the University of Chicago.

"The policy of our Government," said Strawn, "should be to encourage and stimulate friendly economic relations with other countries."

Even though the export trade of the United States may be small as compared to the whole production, he said, "its abandonment or reduction would prolong the present depression, lower the living standards of our people and precipitate inestimable social changes."

An increase in the proportion of imports was recommended by Strawn.

Economic self sufficiency, but not economic isolation, was recommended by Meyercord. He urged a flexible tariff and improved facilities for discounting short-term foreign credits.

The reestablishment of an international monetary system was declared by Mowrer to be the first essential in restoration of world trade.

ELECTRIC REFRIGERATOR

and NO MONEY DOWN

John and I have wanted one ever since we were married . . . and we particularly wanted a Kelvinator. We didn't have to be "sold" on the convenience or even the economy of a Kelvinator . . . it was just never being able to have the price that stumped us. Then we saw this new low-priced Kelvinator advertised . . . at The Hecht Co. . . . a Kelvinator with the same full-powered unit of the more expensive models . . . and you could pay for it at approximately 15c a day. We knew we could afford that little amount each day . . . and now we have a Kelvinator . . . and it costs us no more than I've been paying for ice. And we'll have it for years, too. Any wonder we're sitting on top of the world . . with Summer just a few weeks away!

P. S.— I've sent four of the girls in my bridge club down to "cash-in" on this offer.

District of Columbia AAA Headquarters

Parade of Facts

HAVE you ever stopped to think of the chaos and confusion that would exist in this age of motoring were it not for the VARIED and PRACTICAL SERVICES rendered by the "THREE A'S"—locally, nationally and internationally? It is service that functions so smoothly and efficiently that it has become an indispensable necessity for the safety, comfort, convenience—not only of the motorist, but the public.

Symbol of Service AAA Sign of Safety

A Record of which we're proud

Our employes are contributors 100% to the Red Cross.

Our employes respond to the appeal of the Community Chest 100%.

Over 150 AAA employes in the District of Columbia and over 5,000 in the United States—all responsive to the needs of AAA members.

The AAA was the first organization in the District of Columbia to receive the NRA Blue Eagle.

Only the revision of fifteen minutes a week was required on our staff to comply with NRA work regulations.

There are expended in excess of $25,000 annually on leases for property in Washington in which to conduct the operations of AAA National Headquarters and the District of Columbia AAA Motor Club.

In the last five years the District of Columbia AAA Club has expended $216,385.16 in furnishing road service to local and visiting "Three A" members.

The District of Columbia AAA Club has a standing offer of $100 reward to the one reporting the name of a hit-and-run driver, so that conviction may be secured.

The District of Columbia AAA Club also offers $50 reward to any one furnishing information leading to the arrest of the thief of a member's car and recovery of same. In these two protective features alone we have expended $7,150.

Every member of the District of Columbia AAA Club has included with his membership a Personal Accident Insurance Policy paying up to $1,500 for death from accident by motor. In four years we have paid $94,833 in claims under these policies.

In carrying out the promotion of safety work in the schools of Washington and adjacent territory, the District of Columbia AAA Club has spent $20,854 in recent years for safety lessons, safety posters, schoolboy patrol equipment—not including salaries.

262 Garages in Washington and adjacent Maryland and Virginia territory are under contract with the District of Columbia AAA Club to render instant and free mechanical service to local AAA members and to visiting AAA members.

In the last four years $216,385.16 have been paid to these Garages for this service.

The maintenance of headlights and brakes in good condition on members' cars is a service to which the District of Columbia AAA Club pays special attention.

Since January, 1930, $37,560.52 have been expended on this feature of service alone.

Doctors holding AAA membership are given special and unusual service in the District of Columbia. When a doctor's car becomes disabled as he is answering a call the AAA instantly sends TWO CARS—one to take him to his patient and a truck and mechanic to repair his car. Effort is made to complete the repairs in time to deliver the doctor's car to the home of his patient, that he may not be unduly delayed for his next call.

There is no charge for this special service; it is covered by membership.

When a sudden freeze comes at night and streets become slippery and dangerous, have you observed that the principal thoroughfares are sanded? This sand is distributed by the District of Columbia AAA Club as a measure of helpfulness to the District authorities at a time when their offices and yards are closed.

One of many civic services gratuitously rendered by AAA

Who removes the "wrecks" and stolen cars found on the streets? The District of Columbia AAA Club assumes this expense and does the work as a measure of safety to the public and assistance to the Police Department and a saving to the city.

During the last three years the District of Columbia Division AAA has removed 3,874 wrecked and abandoned cars

Glass on the streets is a menace. The District of Columbia Division AAA maintains a Glass Patrol over the streets of the District so that broken glass may be promply removed as a measure of safety.

We thank any citizen to Phone Met. 4000 notifying us of the presence of broken glass—and our Glass Patrol will be dispatched immediately.

$5,000 Bail Bond

Issued by the National Surety Corporation

Exclusively to the AAA

Provides "Bail Instead of Jail"

This bail bond is acceptable in all cases where AAA members are held for bail in connection with the violation of any Motor Law or regulation, no matter where or when.

The membership fee includes this important service.

Membership in AAA, for the full enjoyment of all its benefits, economies, protection, convenience, is but $12 per year. A thirty-trunk-line phone service is maintained continuously day and night, every day in the year, including Sundays and holidays. Call Met. 4000.
